PRESIDENT GIVEN MEDICAL TESTS; RESULTS MAY BE KNOWN TUESDAY

Hospital Examination Aimed at Measuring How Well He Has Stood Strain in Past Month.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (UP) —President Eisenhower spent an hour and 10 minutes in Walter Reed Army Hospital this afternoon undergoing a series of medical tests that will help him decide whether to run for a second term.

It was his first full-scale physical checkup since December, and his last before he makes the big decision which he expects to announce by the end of this month.

The tests included X-ray and fluoroscopic examinations, electrocardiograph readings and blood chemistry analysis. All were aimed at measuring, with as much scientific precision as possible, the extent of the President's recovery from his Sept. 24 heart attack.

Doctors to Confer Tuesday.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the President's physicians, including Boston heart specialist Dr. Paul Dudley White, will meet at the White House Tuesday to review the results of today's examinations.

He said no announcement on the tests would be made until after that consultation, at which the doctors will give their verdict on how well Mr. Eisenhower has stood up under the strain of a fairly full load of presidential activity for the last month.

Hagerty said all the testing necessary had been accomplished during today's visit to Walter Reed, and it would not be necessary for Mr. Eisenhower to go back to the hospital Monday.

Mr. Eisenhower, accompanied by his wife, arrived at the big Army medical center at 2:50 p.m. He emerged, smiling and carrying his top coat over his arm, at 4. He waved to a small crowd which had gathered to see him.

Greets Wife of Friend.

Mrs. Virgil L. Peterson, wife of Maj. Gen. Virgil L. Peterson, an old Army buddy of the President, ran up to Mr. Eisenhower as he came out of the hospital. They embraced briefly, and Mr. Eisenhower expressed his sympathy for Peterson, who has been a patient at the hospital since he suffered a heart attack Dec. 31.

Mrs. Eisenhower remained behind at the hospital to visit two friends who are patients there. They were Mrs. Wilton B. Persons, wife of presidential aid Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons, and Mrs. Robert Littlejohn, wife of retired Maj. Gen. Robert Littlejohn who was Quartermaster General under Mr. Eisenhower during the World War II invasion of Europe.

Mr. Eisenhower drove directly back to the White House after the examination. He planned to spend a quiet, weekend there, awaiting the report from his physicians.

May Not Be Decisive.

Mr. Eisenhower told his press conference last Wednesday that the doctors' report will be an important — but not necessarily decisive—factor in his decision whether to run for re-election. He indicated he expects to announce that decision by the end of this month.

Emphasizing that the final decision will be his own, Mr. Eisenhower told reporters:

"I think I will probably trust my own feelings more than I will the doctors' reports. A doctor . . . doesn't have to think about the things I do in trying to solve this problem. . . . I have honestly got to be convinced that I think I can carry this job effectively."

Participating in today's examinations were Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, the President's personal physician; Dr. Thomas W. Mattingly, chief cardiologist at Walter Reed; Dr. Byron E. Pollock, chief cardiologist at Fitzsimons Army Hospital at Denver where Mr. Eisenhower was treated after his attack; Dr. Walter Tkach, assistant White House physician, and Maj. Gen. Leonard Heaton, commandant of Walter Reed.

4 KILLED, 7 INJURED IN HEADON AUTO CRASH

Four persons were killed and seven others injured last night in a headon automobile collision just south of Ste. Genevieve.

State patrol officers identified the dead as Coy Hoggard, 28 years old, of Portageville, Mo., driver of one car; Vickie Rae Patton, 5 months, Portageville; Mrs. Rena Hoggard, about 60, mother of the driver, and Javery Higgs, 36, Malden, Mo., driver of the other car.

'BALANCED DIET' RAT DIES, SWEETS-FED RODENT WELL

REDDING, Calif., Feb. 11 (UP)—A seventh grade science class teacher as Sequoiah elementary school has a problem.

In a diet experiment his class fed a white rat nothing but candy, cake and sweets. Another rat was given a carefully prepared "balanced diet," like all good children should eat.

The rat with the sweet tooth is doing fine but his properly fed buddy died.

SCHOOL OFFICIAL HITS AT INACTION OF DOWD OFFICE

Charges Circuit Attorney's Staff Failed to Prosecute 'Fence' in Theft by 3 Youths.

Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd's office was severely criticized yesterday by a St. Louis public school official for failing to prosecute a confectionery owner who signed a statement admitting he acted as a "fence" for three teen-age burglary suspects.

Clement A. Powers, director of the public schools' pupil welfare division, told the Post-Dispatch he believed citizens "have a right to demand" prosecution in the case. The confectionery owner, he said, was an adult who has admitted he had "incited juveniles to acts of delinquency."

Police arrested the confectionery owner Feb. 7 after the three youths, aged 14, 16 and 17, had made statements involving him in burglary of the Eliot Public School, 4042 Grove street, Jan. 5. The man admitted, police said, that he furnished the youths with burglary tools and received from them a typewriter and tools stolen from the school.

Warrant Refused.

The police department twice applied for a warrant to the Circuit Attorney's office and was refused on the ground a case could not be made.

First Associate Prosecuting Attorney Jasper R. Vettori said he believed he could make a case against the "fence," but that the case involved a felony and was beyond his jurisdiction. The Prosecuting Attorney's office handles only misdemeanors.

The eldest of the accused burglars, who identified himself as James Terry Gibson, 17, living in the 2000 block of Palm street, is charged in warrants with burglary and larceny in the school case and with burglary and larceny in the theft of $300 from a safe at the Midwest Card Co., 1113 Washington avenue, Jan. 7.

Powers said school officers had been plagued with vandalism, burglaries and larcenies in school buildings and were trying to put an end to it.

"In my opinion," he said, "if the laws are so worded and so interpreted by the Circuit Attorney that they can permit an adult to incite juveniles to acts of delinquency, furnish the tools

HELFRICH MET WITH GANGSTERS HERE LAST JULY

Acapulco Shooting Victim Also Visited Florida, Federal Authorities Say.

By CARL R. BALDWIN
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

Carl W. Helfrich, former East St. Louis gambler shot to death Friday in Mexico, made a brief visit to St. Louis last July and conferred with several underworld figures at a well-known midtown restaurant, federal authorities told the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

Helfrich fled the country in August 1951 to avoid prosecution on an income tax evasion charge, but is reported to have made several trips to the United States since then. He has been sought since May 1952 on an indictment charging him with evading payment of $494,388 in taxes.

Federal officials learned of Helfrich's St. Louis visit several months after he went back to Mexico, the Post-Dispatch was told. They never have been able to learn the nature of his business with the gangsters, it was said.

Visited Miami Also.

The Government has obtained evidence that Helfrich, who was killed near an Acapulco (Mexico) wharf where he maintained six motor launches, made several trips to Miami and other points in southern Florida in 1953 and 1954. He also has been visited by East Side political figures in Mexico, it was reported.

Acapulco police last night questioned disgruntled employes of Helfrich in a search for the man who killed him as he was walking from the wharf to his parked automobile. Helfrich, who was known as a coal dealer before becoming a fugitive from justice, recently had trouble with employes who operated the fishing launches for tourists. They threatened a strike.

Helfrich handed out salaries to the workers just before the shooting, the police told the Post-Dispatch. He sat for awhile on a bench near the wharf and then started for the machine.

Witnesses said a group of men was waiting for him in the parking lot. He was shot twice, in the head and body, as he opened the door to the driver's seat. The killer fled with his companions. Police said they expected to make an arrest soon.

Until about two years ago, Helfrich, 56 years old, lived in

TOZER JUMPED THE GUN ON LUG PLAN, DEMOCRAT LEADERS FURIOUS

Politicians Had Planned Quiet Anti-Tucker Collection — Cry Raised for Party 'Housecleaning.'

Sheriff Martin L. Tozer's recent attempt to put an anti-Tucker freeholder election lug on his employes was premature, and upset the plans of other Democratic politicians to collect campaign money quietly for the same purpose, the Post-Dispatch was informed yesterday.

Tozer told 90 employes last Monday that 1 per cent of their salaries was needed, and when that was publicized two days later it infuriated party leaders who had met secretly Feb. 3 to discuss plans for raising $35,000 from all persons holding patronage jobs, it was learned.

A board of freeholders is to be elected May 8 and given authority to submit a new charter, or a revision of the old, to the voters. Many patronage jobs would be subject to possible elimination in that process.

Tozer said the lug money was not for the May election but for expenses of the regular primary and general election campaigns.

City Treasurer John J. Dwyer, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, also issued a statement saying there was no plan for placing an anti-Tucker charter lug on patronage workers.

Demand for Clean-up.

The scheme by top-ranking Democrats to control the freeholders election has touched off a growing demand within the party for a "housecleaning" in the August primary, the Post-Dispatch was told.

Some South Side members of the Democratic City Committee have been particularly critical of the leadership of Dwyer and Tozer, who is committeeman from the Twenty-sixth ward besides being sheriff.

"These big-shots in the party can't expect us to go from door to door in our wards and say, 'Help beat the Mayor in the freeholders election May 8,'" one South Side committeeman said.

"They may be able to do that in a few north St. Louis wards, but not anywhere else."

All members of the Democratic City Commitee will be up for re-election in the primary. Tozer will also be required to seek re-nomination as sheriff if he decides to run again.

'Worse Than Callanan.'

Objecting bitterly to Tozer's action in putting an anti-Tucker charter lug on his employes, a powerful South Side politician told the Post-Dispatch:

"We toook Tozer before, not for himself, but because we were anti-Callanan and were trying to clean up the party. Now he looks worse than Callanan. We are against these lugs."

His reference to Callanan was to former sheriff Thomas F. Callanan, whose power in the party waned rapidly after his faction was soundly defeated in the primary election of 1952.

A lug seldom is placed on workers in patronage offices for a primary. One exception occurred in 1950 when the Democratic City Committee raised $25,000 to defeat a new charter proposed by a board of freeholders.

Employes of Tozer's office said he told them at a meeting recently that "we have to go out and beat the Mayor in May."

State Senator William E. Hilsman yesterday denied, as reported yesterday by the Post-Dispatch, that he had attended a meeting here of Democratic leaders to discuss plans for raising $35,000 to defeat any Tucker-supported slate of freeholder candidates. Hilsman and James Webbe, another Democratic State Senator from St. Louis, were reported to have been at the gathering.

Louis (Midge) Berra, a constable and Twenty-fourth ward committeeman, said yesterday he did not approach Michael L. Galli, a real estate dealer, to ascertain if Galli were willing to run for freeholder. The Post-Dispatch was told Berra had talked with Galli as politicians started a move to elect their own freeholders.

SMOKE BOMB GIVES FIRE DRILL PLENTY OF REALISM

DEEP CREEK, Va., Feb. 11 (UP)—Fire Chief Donald S. eKay set off a smoke bomb just outside the door of Deep Creek High School, figuring it would make a fire drill look more realistic. It did.

As a result: One teacher locked the door to her classroom and began putting her students out through a window; five ambulances and two police cars sped to the scene; three children were sped to a hospital for treatment of minor smoke inhalation, and Chief Keay himself was under observation at the hospital for possible smoke in his lungs.

MOSCOW STAGES PRESS SESSION FOR 2 DIPLOMATS WHO QUIT BRITAIN

Burgess and Maclean Say They Fled to Work for Peace, Denounce U. S. Policies as Dangerous.

By STANLEY JOHNSON

MOSCOW, Feb. 11 (AP) — Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess, two high ranking British diplomats who disappeared into mystery five years ago, revealed themselves in Moscow today.

They said they had been Communists since their college days, but denied they had been secret agents as charged in a British white paper last year.

They said they had come to the Soviet Union to work for peace and East-West understanding.

(This week, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said he believed that the British diplomats might have transmitted American secrets to the Communists during the Korean war.)

The dramatically staged development came just four days before the opening of the twentieth congress of the Soviet Communist party, and in the middle of a big Soviet campaign charging the United States is sending "spy" balloons soaring over Soviet territory.

Family With Maclean.

Maclean cleared up one additional mystery. He said his wife and children had indeed joined him here, as had long been supposed by the British.

Burgess and Maclean, who disappeared from London in May 1951, held a news conference in the television room of the National Hotel almost in the shadow of the Kremlin.

They did not answer questions, but handed out a statement to reporters for Reuters, British news agency, the London Sunday Times, and for Tass and Pravda. The conference lasted about five minutes.

Moscow radio quickly began broadcasting the entire statement.

It said they had come to the Soviet Union "in order to make our contribution to a policy aimed at achieving greater mutual understanding between the Soviet Union and the West, having become convinced on the basis of official information which was at our disposal, of the fact that neither British, nor still more American, policy at that time was seriously pursuing this object.

"The position which we occupied gave us every reason to think such a mutual understanding absolutely necessary if we wish to preserve peace.

Feared Western 'Plans.'

"We had every reason for coming to the conclusion that such mutual understanding was the object of Soviet policy.

"We had every possibility to know the plans of a small but powerful group of men who opposed the achievement of such a mutual understanding and for this reason we had every grounds to fear these plans."

"When we were in Cambridge we both were Communists," they said, but added that the British Foreign Office had wrongfully presumed they had become Soviet agents then.

"We, neither of us, have ever been Soviet agents," they added.

Neither man said anything about his life since they left England, but Richard Hughes of

PASTOR TO TAKE FLOCK FISHING ON ICE TODAY

MUSKEGON, Mich., Feb. 11 (AP)—Because he believes ministers should "unbend" sometimes to make religion a "living" experience, a Muskegon pastor is going to take his congregation ice fishing Sunday.

The Rev. Glenn Groth, pastor of Bethlehem Lutheran church, calls the outing a "fisherama" and says he may make it an annual event.

The minister expects more than 60 parishioners, including men, women and children, to join him. Men of the parish volunteered to provide breakfast for the group at 6:45 a.m. Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Groth said he will speak on his theme for the outing, stressing Christ's appeal to his disciples: "Come unto me and I will make you fishers of men."

Then the group will go in a caravan to nearby Muskegon lake to fish through the ice for perch. A student pastor will conduct a regular service at the church for those staying at home.

The Rev. Mr. Groth said: "I know there will be criticism. We've heard some of it already. But I can find nothing wrong with a church or its appointed ministers unbending to make religion a living, personal experience."

PRESIDENT ORDERS BULL --- A WEATHER VANE, THAT IS

MONTAGUE, Mich., Feb. 11 (UP)—A weather vane manufacturer was instructed to be "particularly careful" with one of its orders placed by a Pennsylvania dealer.

The vane, shaped like a bull, is for President Eisenhower's Gettysburg farm.

"We certainly wouldn't want a 'beef' on this order," the dealer wrote.

BALLOONS PICKED UP DATA DEEP IN RUSSIA FOR U. S.

Reds Didn't Bring Down All Bags — Quarles Says Moscow Misconstrues Facts.

By C. YATES MC DANIEL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (AP) —The United States sent a lot of balloons into the air and got back some information from deep in Communist Eurasia before grounding the Air Force gas bags this week in deference to a protest from Moscow.

Only a few Americans and Russians know just how important is this information that was recorded by instruments suspended from 500 plastic balloons, some of which were caught up in air currents that floated them behind the iron curtain.

A State Department note to Moscow Wednesday told Russia that the American balloons were launched to gather weather and scientific information of possible benefit to all the world. But the Russians contended that cameras found with other equipment parachuted from "captured" American balloons were designed to spy on Communist territory.

Statement by Quarles.

Air Secretary Donald Quarles accused Russia today of "elaborate efforts . . . to confuse meteorological balloons with the relatively low altitude leaflet balloons" launched by some private groups.

He said in a statement that the use of balloons for high altitude weather studies "has been openly under way" in much of the world, but that Russia, in objecting to the project, "is attempting to develop it into a diplomatic incident."

In a brief note, the United States also told the United Nations that protests against use of the balloons are "based on a misconstruction of facts."

Quarles defended use of the balloons as "an effort to learn more about . . . meteorological phenomena," and said they have been "employed in many countires," but because of Russian objections, he added, the Air Force has ceased launching any at points from which they might be expected to cross Red-held territory.

Quarles issued the statement after conferring with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, and this was taken to indicate that the State Department had decided to turn the balloon problem back to the Air Force. Dulles's department had insisted on acting as spokesman on the

SENATE INQUIRY REVEALS DONOR AS HOWARD KECK OF LOS ANGELES

He Admits Campaign Gift Case Refused to Accept From Lobbyist Came From 'Personal Fund.'

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11— The $2500 campaign contribution offered Senator Francis M. Case, South Dakota Republican, at the height of the Senate battle over the natural gas bill came from funds supplied by Howard Keck of Los Angeles, president of the Superior Oil Co. of California, it was revealed today.

The disclosure came in the closing hours of the second day of public hearings by a Senate select committee investigating charges by Case that the money came from someone with an "abnormal interest" in how he would vote on the gas bill.

Case denounced the overture in a Senate speech Feb. 3, and then voted against the bill. He had been favorably disposed toward the measure, though not committed, prior to the $2500 offer for his campaign.

The witness who named Keck as the source of the $2500 fund was John M. Neff of Lexington, Neb., who delivered twenty-five $100 bills to Sioux Falls, S.D., and left them for Case's upcoming primary campaign.

Testimony Is Surprise.

Neff, a lawyer and lobbyist for Superior Oil, surprised the experts in his testimony. It had been expected that he would plead a lawyer-client relationship and refuse to disclose the source of the money.

Instead, Neff readily testified that the money was given to him for the Case campaign last Jan. 13 in Neff's room at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C., by Elmer Patman of Austin, Tex., another attorney for Superior Oil, after they had talked about the pending gas bill and a contribution for Case.

He related that Patman had told him the money came from Keck's "personal funds." Neff said that Jan. 14 he took the money to Sioux Falls, and gave it to E. J. Kahler, business manager of the Sioux Falls Argus-Times, with whom he previously had discussed Case's stand on the gas bill.

Kahler subsequently delivered the $2500 in an envelope to John Griffin, Sioux Falls druggist and a Case campaign fund raiser, who still had it in his possession today, until he turned it over to the committee.

Political Contributions.

Patman, who followed Neff as a witness, testified that the money came from "personal funds" intrusted to him by Keck to take care of such expenses as tickets to testimonial dinners and political contributions. He estimated that the funds he dispensed for such purposes amounted to a "modest sum"—probably $5000 to $6000 a year.

He said he made no written accounting of how the money was spent. Occasionally, he said, he would see the "boss" and tell him what he had been doing with the funds. The "boss" would on those occasions inquire if he was "out," and, if so, the "personal fund" was replenished by Keck, sometimes in cash, sometimes by check. Patman insisted that the money was not Superior Oil funds.

Keck, who was questioned after Patman left the stand, confirmed the existence of the "personal fund" handled by Patman, which he said he had made available to him for a period of seven or eight years.

He said, however, that he did not know of the contribution to Case until Patman called him by telephone in Los Angeles last Monday, three days after Case had disclosed it.

Agreement in Testimony.

Neff and Patman seemed generally in agreement in their testimony that Case would not have received the contribution had he been firmly committed against the gas bill.

Keck said, however, that he would have approved the contribution if he had thought it a "proper" one. He did not say what standard he would have used to determine whether it was "proper."

Tracing of the money to the oil company executive was regarded as lending some substance to charges of opponents of the bill, that a huge gas and oil lobby spent vast sums of money in lobbying and propaganda in behalf of the legislation.

The disclosure appeared likely also to trigger a broader investigation to find out if the

Stormy Three Years Predicted By St. Louis U. Sunspot Watcher

The St. Louis area may expect more thunderstorms than usual, possibly resulting in tornadoes and floods, during the next three or four years, Prof. Edward M. Brooks, St. Louis University geophysicist, asserted yesterday.

He bases his long-range weather forecasts on the theory that extreme weather conditions coincide with spots on the sun, and a sunspot maximum occurs every 10 or 11 years. In 1947, the last peak year for sunspots, there was a flood on the Mississippi river, he pointed out, and the following year brought many small tornadoes.

The next sunspot peak, which may be of record proportions, is expected about the middle of 1957, a year earlier than previously predicted, Brooks said. The trend to violent weather may set in even this year, he said, and since tornadoes usually occur in March, April and May, there may be storms during the next few weeks.

The wet cycle predicted by Brooks may or may not materialize, but St. Louisans can vouch for the fact that things are pretty wet right now. With five inches of snow melting, it is extremely slushy.

Husband's Gift Fishing Tackle Helps Wife Land New Fur Coat

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Feb. 12 (AP)—Lou Conway, president of a fisherman's club, wanted some new fishing gear and a boat but he needed his wife's approval first.

He bought a salt water fishing rod, wrapped it as a gift and gave it to his wife, Margaret. She chuckled, turned the rod over to hubby, the fisherman in the family.

A few days later Conway spotted an outboard motor he wanted, had it gift-wrapped and sent to his wife, with an affectionate note enclosed. She laughed again, gave him the motor.

A third parcel—much bigger —arrived for Mrs. Conway this week. The note said: "The motor won't be much good without a boat. Here's the boat." Still a good sport, Mrs. Conway turned the boat over to her husband and waved as he went fishing.

When he got home yesterday Conway found a snazzy box on the table, with his name on it. He removed the ribbon and paper, opened the box and found a woman's fur coat, with an attached price tag, $600.

The note said: "Hope you like your new gift. Love, Margaret."

6 WEST EUROPE NATIONS DECIDE TO SET UP JOINT ATOMIC AGENCY

Foreign Ministers Agree on Pool Which Might Produce Bombs as Well as Peaceful Energy.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 11 (UP)—Foreign ministers of six western European nations decided today to create an atomic energy agency which might be called on to manufacture atomic weapons as well as energy for peaceful purposes.

The decision was reached in a four-and-one-half hour meeting of foreign ministers from France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands.

Belgium's Paul-Henri Spaak told a news conference afterward that the ministers would decide later whether atomic weapons were to be manufactured by pool nations as well as industrial energy.

He said the agency would be elastic enough to eventually incorporate other nations which might like to join. The ministers will report back to their governments and meet again to take final steps next month.

New Saar Talks.

The conference got off to a good start when two of the nations, France and West Germany, agreed just before it, to settle once and for all the Saar problem, the last major obstacle to Franco-German friendship. French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau and West German Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano decided to open talks on the Saar in Paris Feb. 20.

The atom pool, backed by the United States, is viewed as the first step toward even closer political and economic ties between the European nations.

Aims Defined in June.

Today's conference resulted from a meeting of the foreign ministers in Messina, Sicily, last June when the governments took first decisions toward the establishment of a joint atomic organization. There the ministers defined their aims as follows:

That a common fund should be established by contributions by each of the member countries which would provide capital for installations and research work.

That free and adequate access should be granted to raw materials, free exchange of scientific knowledge, technicians, by-products and special equipment.

That the results achieved should be pooled and financial assistance be given for their exploitation, and that non-member countries should co-operate.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, after a meeting with Spaak in Paris last December, announced United States support of a European atom pool. He said the United States was prepared to give financial aid and lend technical know-how to the community once it was established.

DUKE, BOB HOPE STAR IN BRITISH CHARITY MOVIE

LONDON, Feb. 11 (AP)—Britain's newest film star is the Duke of Edinburgh. He has taken up acting to help his favorite charity, the National Playing Fields Association.

The duke previously has appeared in one-minute movies making a straightforward appeal for funds. This time it's the real stuff—with Bob Hope as a co-star.

The movie opens with the duke taking a swipe at a cricket ball in a game with Britain's top players. The scene is contrasted with pictures of kids endangering their lives by playing on London's back streets.

Next you see the duke at Wembley Stadium, talking over the need for playing fields with famous British sportsmen. Bob Hope turns up as a school kid in cricket gear, pleading for some place to play.

People who worked on the movie say the duke is a wow. "He had to learn his lines and use makeup just like any other actor," said one technician. "And he never fluffed a word. He could make Hollywood any time."

Richard Stengel's Outstanding Legislative Record Made Him Democratic Choice to Unseat Dirksen

Earned Rating as One of Top Five in Illinois House in Each of His Four Terms.

By SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. Feb. 11 — Richard Stengel, for seven years a minor league star in Illinois politics, has moved into the big time and, with the general election more than eight months distant, is well along in his spring training.

At Springfield, Stengel was only a member of the House of Representatives, but his batting and fielding averages were so high that the Illinois Democratic slate-making committee rejected the names of older and better-known aspirants and chose him for the job of attempting to unseat United States Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen, right-wing Republican.

The process of seasoning which the 41-year-old Rock Island lawyer might normally have expected to undergo before seeking such high office would include some service in the State Senate and possibly a term as Governor. But Stengel developed rapidly during his four terms in the House to which he was first elected in 1948.

Outstanding From Start.

At the end of his freshman session he was among the five outstanding members chosen by the Legislative Correspondents' Association, and the Better Government Association commended him for his ability, independence, activity in committee work and skill on the floor of the House.

The correspondents have included him in their list at each subsequent meeting of the General Assembly and in 1953 the Independent Voters of Illinois gave him their "Best Legislator" award. After his first term, Adlai Stevenson, then Governor of Illinois, entrusted to Stengel the handling in the House of the administration's state road program.

During this second term, Stengel introduced a total of 50 bills which included, in addition to the highway program, measures relating to education and schools, crime prevention, judicial practice and public welfare.

Analyses Impressive.

But, above all, his service in the House established his reputation as a legislator who talked only when he had something to say. His clear analyses of measures both in committee and on the floor of the House were impressive. Standing an inch over 6 feet, he carries his 195 pounds easily; his manner is somewhat reserved but pleasant and courteous; his speaking voice is excellent and his delivery is without frills.

Following the example of two well known Democrats, W. Stuart Symington and W. Averell Harriman, W. Richard Stengel has become simply Richard Stengel.

By starting early, Stengel hopes to widen the circle of his personal acquaintances and overcome the disadvantage of never having made a state-wide campaign. He plans to cover the state at least three times. Against such vigorous opposition, the 60-year-old Senator Dirksen in Washington may find that he has some catching up to do when Congress adjourns.

Victory Forecast.

Stengel's supporters contend he can beat Dirksen even if President Eisenhower becomes the Republican Presidential nominee. They say they expect a 250,000 plurality in Chicago and Cook county due to the strength of Mayor Richard J. Daley's Democratic organization and lack of Republican harmony. But particular attention will be paid to the remainder of the state in an effort to reduce the Democratic "deficit" there to 100,000.

Many residents of suburban Chicago, Stengel's supporters say, will oppose Dirksen because of his extreme right-wing opposition to the Eisenhower program. Dirksen, who made the speech nominating the late Senator Robert A. Taft for President at the 1952 Republican National Convention, has been a strong supporter of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy.

In 1950, Dirksen won from former Senator Scott W. Lucas 1,951,000 to 1,657,000, a plurality of 294,000. Dirksen carried Cook county 996,000 to 988,000, a margin of 8000, and won downstate 955,000 to 669,000, a plurality of 286,000.

Eisenhower Margin 443,407.

President Eisenhower swept Illinois in 1952 — 2,457,327 to 2,013,920—a 443,407 plurality. He was able to carry Cook county by only 16,519—1,188,973 to 1,172,454 — but downstate he won over Stevenson 1,268,354 to 841,466, a plurality of 426,888.

The plurality of William G. Stratton in the state-wide vote for Governor in 1952 was 227,642; Stratton received 2,317,363 against 2,089,721 for Sherwood Dixon, who was placed on the Democratic ticket after Stevenson was nominated for President. Dixon, however, carried Cook county 1,216,582 to 1,125,934, a margin of 90,648. Downstate, Stratton picked up a plurality of 318,290; the vote was 1,191,429 to 873,139.

The picture changed greatly in 1954 when Senator Paul H. Douglas turned the tables on his Republican opponent, Joseph Meek. The total vote was Douglas, 1,804,000; Meek, 1,563,000; Douglas's plurality, 241,000. The Cook county organization gave Douglas a 312,000 margin — 1,058,000 to 746,000. And Douglas was able to hold Meek's downstate plurality to 72,000—817,000 to 745,000.

Farmers Critical.

It is in the downstate area that Stengel plans to spend much time trying to overcome the advantage that his Republican opponent now finds in his wider acquaintance. Illinois has thousands of Republican cornhog farmers who have complained about low market prices and have joined in the widespread criticism of Secretary of Agriculture Benson and the Eisenhower administration's insistence upon flexible farm price supports.

Stengel already is making speeches on the subject, advocating fixed price supports as a means of restoring farm income more quickly but recommending that other supplementary steps be taken at once. They include surplus disposal by increasing food allotments to the needy, expansion of the school lunch program and increased export under a barter plan.

Rock Island and its neighboring cities, proud of their name as the "agricultural equipment capital of the world," are vitally interested in farm income.

Stengel points out that in 1951, when farm prices stood at 107 on the parity scale, the Quad-City farm equipment industry employed 22,379 persons. With the parity ratio estimated at 85 per cent in 1955, employment had fallen to 16,194 in the farm machinery factories.

The Illinois Agricultural Association has commended Stengel for his support and leadership in obtaining passage of legislation sought by farmers.

Dirksen, who lives at Pekin, voted for flexible farm supports in 1954. He has had little to say about the farm price problem. He voted against large sums for soil conservation.

Reuben Soderstrom, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, has announced that Stengel would receive the "statewide support of labor." Other labor spokesmen, denouncing Dirksen for his support of the Taft-Hartley law, have declared that "Dirksen never did anything for labor — even by accident." Dirksen served in the United States House of Representatives from 1933 to 1949.

Organized labor turned thumbs down on former Senator Lucas who had hoped to be named by the Democratic slate-making committee at Chicago last month. A few days before the meeting, both AFL and CIO leaders informed the committee that Lucas was unacceptable because of his voting record; Stengel was among possible candidates they approved. As a result of his selection by the committee, Stengel will have no opposition in the April 10 primary. Combined AFL and CIO membership in Illinois is about 1,250,000.

The unemployment problem in some Southern Illinois counties long dependent upon coal mines that now are closed, received Stengel's attention at the last session of the Legislature when, with others, he successfully sponsored bills setting up an Industrial Development Commission to aid in attracting industry to the state, a program approved by the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

Stengel is of German-Welsh ancestry. His paternal grandfather came to Rock Island in 1850 and started a brewery which, in 1901, merged with two others to form the Rock Island Brewing Co. It passed out of existence with the coming of prohibition.

After his graduation from Rock Island High School in 1932, Stengel attended St. Ambrose College at Davenport, Ia. Then it became necessary for him to support himself if he was to continue his education and he went to Chicago where he attended DePaul University while working as an attendant at Chicago State Hospital from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. daily for $52 a month and his room and board.

His experience while working at the mental hospital was responsible for the interest he has shown as a legislator in measures providing adequate medical personnel and facilities for welfare institutions.

Transferring to the University of South Dakota, Stengel was graduated from law school in 1942, ranking third in his class. After working in the investigation department of the Office of Alien Property in Washington for a short time, he enlisted in the Navy and served as a sonar operator on anti-submarine duty. On leaving the Navy he became an assistant District Attorney for the Southern Illinois District. He now is in private practice as a member of the firm of Coyle, Stengel & Gilman.

South Dakota provided a bride as well as a law degree for Stengel. In 1943 he married Miss Lois Howell. Sharing their enthusiasm for skating, boating and fishing are Kathryn, 10 years old, and William R., 8.

The youngest child, Charles, 2, bears the first name as well as the nickname of Charles (Casey) Stengel, famed New York Yankee manager. The grandfathers of Richard Stengel and the Yankee manager were brothers and came to Rock Island together.

Stengel's hobbies also include do-it-yourself projects in his basement workshop well equipped with power tools. The home contains several examples of his handiwork which are notably free of the marks of an amateur.

Mrs. Stengel teaches a Sunday School class at Broadway Presbyterian Church, where Stengel has served on the Board of Trustees. She also has been an active member of the League of Women Voters.

Asked about the report that the Howell family was traditionally Republican, Mrs. Stengel pleaded nolo contendere.

"When I was a Republican, I couldn't tell you why," she said. "But now I know why I'm a Democrat."

MOLLET RETURNS FROM ALGERIA, IS GREETED BY RIOT

1000 Protest Against Arab Concessions — Premier Confers on Violence in Colony.

PARIS, Feb. 11 (AP)—Premier Mollet returned tonight from rebellion-torn Algeria and found a stone-throwing demonstration in progress against any French concessions to Arab nationalism.

About 1000 demonstrators scuffled with police on the busy Champs Elysees. At least 100 were arrested.

Immediately on his arrival Mollet called a cabinet meeting to report on his findings in Algeria and offer his ideas for halting violence by Arabs demanding self-rule.

Only A Few Blocks Away.

Mollet, whose experience in Algeria included a shower of rotten tomatoes from angry French colonials opposing Arab concessions, was conferring with French President Rene Coty only a few blocks from the scene of tonight's demonstration.

The shouting demonstrators smashed glass windows in the office of L'Express. This is the newspaper identified with former Premier Mendes-France, state minister in Mollet's cabinet.

To much of the French public, Mollet and Mendes-France represent a policy of compromise with North African nationalism.

Mollet spent the week in Algeria talking with European and Arab leaders in search of a solution to the guerrilla rebellion. He also installed Robert Lacoste as resident minister-general yesterday. He did this after encountering hostility which forced him to withdraw his previous appointment of Gen. Georges Catroux to that post.

Other Events.

Other events in the North African picture today included:

1. Habib Bourguiba, leader of the Tunisian neo-Destour Nationalist party, told a correspondents' luncheon meeting here that France must talk with her "real adversaries" if she wants to achieve peace in Algeria. Bourguiba, who successfully negotiated home rule for Tunisia, pointed to the "Algerian liberation front" as the mainspring behind that rebellion.

2. Francois Mauriac, Catholic writer and a strong supporter of Mendes-France, assailed Mollet in a newspaper article. He asserted Mollet's "weakness" in sacrificing Catroux was only encouraging the Communist campaign for a "popular front" alliance of left-wing parties.

3. France and Morocco set the stage for negotiations on a new treaty recognizing Morocco's independence within a French-Moroccan community.

Bridges Enters New Hampshire Primary as Delegate Candidate

Files at Last Minute—All-Out Battle for Control of G. O. P. Delegation Reported.

CONCORD, N.H., Feb. 11 (AP) — Senator Styles Bridges (Rep.), New Hampshire, jumped into New Hampshire's presidential primary as a delegate candidate at the eleventh hour tonight amid reports of an impending all-out struggle for control of the state's delegation to the Republican national convention.

Bridges, who was in Washington, entered the March 13 primary picture by remote control. A messenger acting for the state's senior Senator appeared at the secretary of state's office here just 25 minutes before the 6 p.m. deadline. He handed Deputy Secretary of State Harry E. Jackson a formal declaration of Bridges' candidacy for one of the 14 Republican convention seats at stake in the first test of voters sentiment in the presidential campaign year.

With the petition was a statement in which Bridges asserted his belief "it is important . . . that our party send to San Francisco a slate of delegates as well-rounded and truly representative of the Republicans of New Hampshire as is possible."

Statement by Bridges.

Bridges, chairman of the Senate Republican policy committee, said:

"If circumstances prevent the President from becoming a candidate, I have no comments and I shall be free to work for the Republican presidential candidate who, in my judgment, would be the strongest and soundest candidate, and who will have the best chance of leading the Republican party to victory in November."

Bridges has served notice that he will fight for a "free delegation" if the President does not run. The Senator said last month that he would enter the primary himself if there were any attempt to "corner" the delegation.

Gov. Lane Dwinell, leader of the organized Eisenhower forces in this state, is generally regarded as less conservative in his political outlook than Bridges.

Dwinell's secretary appeared at the secretary of state's office an hour before Bridges filed, and handed Jackson a letter in which one of the originally announced Eisenhower delegate candidates withdrew and refiled as a candidate for alternate delegate.

Another Withdraws.

Another Eisenhower delegate candidate friendly to Dwinell had withdrawn from the top-heavy Eisenhower delegate slate earlier in the day.

Otherwise, there were few significant late changes in the primary lists.

A total of 36 candidates will seek 14 G.O.P. convention seats, and 33 Democrats will fight it out for the 12 seats alloted to their party at its national convention.

In the G.O.P. column 25 delegate candidates are running as favorable to Mr. Eisenhower, seven favorable to William F. Knowland, Senate minority leader: one favorable to Chief Justice Warren and two uncommitted.

On the Democratic ballot Adlai Stevenson, the party's 1952 nominee is represented by a 12-member slate running "favorable" to his candidacy.

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.) Tennessee, whose supporters swept the 1952 primary has a slate of 12 "pledged" delegates but, at the last minute, three additional candidates entered the lists as "favorable" to Kefauver.

Thomas J. McIntyre, Kefauver campaign manager here, said the three late entries were "not part of our official slate."

Two governors, G. Mennen Williams of Michigan and Averell Harriman of New York, are represented by one candidate each. And four Democrats are running uncommitted.

President Sends Sympathy.

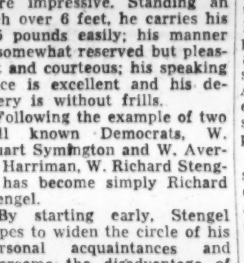

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (UP) —President Eisenhower sent a message to Italian President Giovanni Gronchi today expressing "deep sympathy" for the thousands of Italians caught in one of Europe's worst blizzards.

Charles E. Prefontaine Dies.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11 (AP)—Industrialist Charles E. Prefontaine died today. He was founder and chairman of the board of United Auto Parts Ltd., president of Master Motors Manufacturing Co., president of International Electric Co. and president of National Automotive Ltd. He was 62 years old.

G.O.P. RESTORED FAITH, STABILITY, SENATOR TELLS LINCOLN RALLY

Colorado's Allott Here, Says Party Ended Series of Crises — No New State Candidates.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

The Eisenhower Administration has restored faith and stability in the American system and eliminated the former drift "from crisis to crisis" under Democratic rule, United States Senator Gordon L. Allott of Colorado declared here last night.

In a speech before the fifty-sixth Republican Lincoln Day banquet at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson, Allott defended major Republican policies and attacked the record of the former Truman Administration.

The dinner meeting concluded the two-day rally of Missouri Republicans, which produced considerable speculation about the party's state primary contests but no new candidates for major state and congressional offices.

Party enthusiasm was at relatively low ebb, with G.O.P. state leaders and rank-and-file workers frankly worried over whether President Eisenhower will seek re-election. They said a decision by Mr. Eisenhower to run again could spark a resurgence of party spirit in Missouri.

Takes Slap at Truman.

Allott, Colorado's freshman Republican Senator, brought a cheer from the partisan audience by referring to Former President Truman as the "champion history rewriter of the Twentieth Century," in a slap at the former chief executive's memoirs appearing currently in the Post-Dispatch, the New York Times and Life Magazine.

"He (Truman) claims to be the champion of the 'common man,' yet we saw farm prices fall 38 per cent from January 1948 to December 1952," the speaker said.

"We saw inflation continue its upward spiral, eating up the increases in pay of the wage earner as it went.

"It was this same oracle who helped the 'common man' by sitting by and watching the consumer price index rise from 76 to 114, or 50 per cent, during the eight years he was laying the groundwork for the manuscript we now read.

"By contrast, the Eisenhower Administration checked this rise and held it to less than one point in three years."

Decline Started in 1951.

In discussing the farm problem, Allott said a steady decline in farm prices had started in 1951 under the Democrats.

"Past policies of the Democrats continued wartime production incentives too long into the peacetime period," he said. "Mountainous surpluses piled up and now overhang the markets. Farmers lost markets at home and abroad."

The Colorado Republican praised the present Administration for replacing planned deficits with a proposed balanced budget. He said this was accomplished by cutting federal expenditures 10 billion dollars. The Republicans, he added, have stabilized the value of the dollar and halted its shrinking buying power under the Democrats.

Few Candidates.

The number of avowed candidates for G.O.P. nominations to state offices was usually small at the meeting. Normally, at this time in election years, several candidates have filed for each of the party nominations and their primary campaigns are well under way.

Only two Republicans have announced their candidacies—Joseph M. Whealen of St. Louis for Governor and Jesse E. Smith of Springfield for Secretary of State. No one has tossed his hat into the ring in the races for United States Senate, State Treasurer, State Auditor or Lieutenant-Governor.

During the meeting, there was talk of the possibility that new state party leaders would be named to succeed the present officers, who engaged in a bitter factional dispute last year.

Perry Compton of Montgomery City, one of the factional leaders, declined to say whether he would seek re-election as state chairman. Compton said he thought the nominee for Governor should have a voice in naming the next chairman.

Welsh Undecided.

A. D. (But) Welsh of Ladue, Republican National Committeeman for Missouri, told the Post-Dispatch recently he had not decided whether to seek re-election to his national commitee post.

Being mentioned as possible successor to Compton are Richard A. Erickson of Kansas City, head of the Jackson County Republican Committee; Kenneth Wangelin of Poplar Bluff, a member of the state committee, and Stanley Ginn of Columbia, former superintendent of the State Highway Patrol.

E. W. Bromwich and Arthur K. Atkinson of St. Louis were discussed as possible candidates for national committeeman. Bromwich, a businessman, headed the Stassen-for-President movement in Missouri in 1948 and 1952, and was formerly treasurer of the Republican State Committee. Atkinson is president of the Wabash Railroad and is chairman of the new Republican finance organization.

Two women were mentioned as potential candidates for national committeewoman to succeed Mrs. Estelle Tanner of Jefferson City. They are Mrs. L. C. Davis of Boonville, an unsuccessful candidate for Congress in 1954, and Mrs. Horace Hedges of Kansas City, wife of a state committee member.

Neither Welsh nor Mrs. Tanner, who lost an intra-party fight over patronage last year to the faction headed by Compton and Barak T. Mattingly of St. Louis, attended the party meetings. Welsh was unable to attend because of business in New York, and Mrs. Tanner was visiting relatives in California.

Lt. Doherty, a Man of Courage, Says His Squad Will Drive Out Hoodlums

Associates Assert He, in New Post, Will Be Able to Back Up Any Warning.

By ROBERT H. COLLINS
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

Detective Lt. John Doherty, a calm, red-headed Irishman built like a Sherman tank, flicked the ashes from his big cigar and said matter-of-factly: "As long as I am head of the hoodlum squad, there will be no hoodlums in St. Louis."

Detective associates of Lt. Doherty, selected last week to head the Police Department's new hoodlum squad, agree he is a man who makes no idle statements and they believe he can back up any warning he may issue to the St. Louis underworld.

Two days after announcement of Lt. Doherty's selection to head the new squad, one of the city's most notorious hoodlums sent word: "Lay off me or you'll get it in the back."

"Don't miss," Doherty replied. "That will be your one and only chance."

Shot Man to Death.

The last time a thug threatened Doherty's life by moving his hand toward his hip pocket as to whip out a pistol, Doherty shot him to death. Asked if the records were correct on the killing, Lt. Doherty replied, "Yes. I shot him twice in the belly and once right through the heart."

"I will always defend myself and the lives and property of the citizens," Doherty said. Police records are replete with instances in which he has successfully "defended" himself and the citizenry.

Associates are unable to say just why Doherty's main interest in his professional life always has been centered around hoodlums. But even in his early days as a detective, he spent all his spare time talking with old-timers in the department asking questions about gangsters.

Veteran officers recall that his curiosity about gang bosses and hoodlums could never be satisfied. He established his own data and picture files on gangsters and during breaks between routine duties could be found memorizing pictures and information.

A fellow officer who has known Doherty for years says he is a man who in line of duty never raises his voice, never shows the slightest sign of temper or any other emotion "except that he has a sort of cold hatred for the hoodlum element."

"Bunch of Murderers."

"I won't have any of the hoodlum element in St. Louis," Doherty said. "I'm going to lock them up on sight and anybody who associates with them. Hoodlums are a bunch of murderers. They are no good because they prey on honest, decent citizens. No hoodlums are going to light in St. Louis for any reason whatsoever."

In those instances in which Doherty is attacked, a fellow officer said, "he hits with what I would judge to be about the same force as that of a kicking mule."

In 1952, Doherty was the subject of an official inquiry when John Randazzo, a contract hauler, appeared at Faith Hospital with both jaws and his chin broken. Randazzo accused Doherty of hitting him, which Doherty denied.

Doherty replied that John J. Vitale, ex-convict and former head of the Mafia here, was trying to frame him because of his continued efforts against hoodlums who frequented the restaurant where the fight occurred.

"Sure the lieutenant is tough, but what other kind of man would you want for the job he's in," said Detective Sgt. Frank Burns, member of the hoodlum squad. "These people we're dealing with aren't exactly gentle."

"The lieutenant is an extremely fair man and among other things has a sense of humor," Sgt. Burns said. "When some members of the lieutenant's squad miss two or three nights making any arrests, he comes by and says, 'You men be sure to roll up your car windows and lock the doors; otherwise some hoods may crawl inside and tell you they want to be arrested.'"

Doherty Highly Qualified.

By temperament, background and previous training, John Doherty is highly qualified to head the new hoodlum squad. That was the consensus of his superiors in choosing him.

Doherty, 37 years old, is a native St. Louisan. He knows the city like the palms of his huge hands. He attended Blewett High School and Brown's Business College where he studied English, business and finance.

During depression years he held various jobs, but the most important one to him was that of red cap at Union Station. It was there that he got to know detectives, and he used to accompany them as they met incoming trains to see gangsters arriving to visit St. Louis.

On the day he was eligible to become a policeman, he applied but was turned down because with huge arms and muscles developed as an amateur wrestler and weight lifter, he was overweight at 190 pounds for his height, 5 feet, 10 inches. After two weeks of a diet consisting of lettuce and hard boiled eggs, he was down to the required poundage and became a policeman.

In World War II, he enlisted in the Marine Corps and served with the First Division. On Okinawa, as a squad leader, he ran to pick up one of his men who had been shot. He turned in time to fend off a Japanese bayonet with his left hand which was pierced to the bone and now bears a two-inch scar.

As he stuck up his left hand, he killed the Japanese soldier by firing three shots from his .45 automatic into the enemy's mid section.

He earned his second Purple Heart when he was struck in the forearm by shrapnel and spent two weeks in the hospital. From that wound he has a scar about the size of a half dollar. On another occasion, Doherty received the Bronze Star for going into an area under enemy fire to retrieve a wounded Marine.

Taught Jujitsu.

Doherty learned jujitsu in the Marine Corps and became an instructor in it and also taught it after his return to the Police Department.

Doherty specialized in pistol marksmanship and qualified as an expert in the Marine Corps. He is now one of the three best pistol shots in the department.

He packs a .38 revolver on his left hip, and another snub-nosed .38 revolver in his top coat pocket. His other weapon is a 16 gauge sawed-off shotgun.

"This is one of my best weapons," he said, "because it's a dark alley weapon. I like it because I spend a lot of my time in dark alleys."

MANAGER, EMPLOYE ROBBED OF $893 IN FRONT OF STORE

William Lapushin, manager of Cass Drug Store, 1434 Cass avenue, and his brother-in-law, Boris Goldenhersh, 8724 Teasdale avenue, University City, were held up in front of the store last night and robbed of $893, police reported.

Lapushin told officers he and Goldenhersh, an employe, were in an automobile preparing to make a night deposit at a bank when a man approached and asked for hel pin pushing his own car. Then the man, a Negro, displayed an automatic pistol and demanded money.

The man took $600 contained in a bank deposit bag, another $114 from Lapushin' billfold, and $179 from Goldenhersh, Lapushin said.

EXTRA PAYMENTS ON G.I. HOME LOANS PERMITTED

Veterans holding G.I. mortgages may make extra payments on their loans or pay off the entire loan without a penalty charge, J. F. Kelley manager of the Veterans' Administration St. Louis Regional office, announced today.

Kelley said that should a veteran make additional payments at this time and later become in need of money, the extra principal could be applied against future payments.

Nearly 10,000 veterans in St. Louis and the 62 counties in eastern Missouri have paid their G.I. home loans in full since the beginning of the G.I. loan program in 1944.

TALK ON POLITICAL TACTICS

A speech on "Majority Political Party Tactics Against Opposing Parties" will be given today by Paul Preisler, St. Louis attorney, at 9:30 a.m. before the Adult Discussion Group of the Ethical Society of St. Louis, 3648 Washington boulevard.

LIGHTS POSSIBLE CAUSE OF JET CRASH IN COUNTY

County Counselor Says Filling Station's Illumination May Have Confused Pilot.

The latest crash of a jet fighter plane in St. Louis county, Friday night, may have been caused by filling station lights leading toward Runway 6 at Lambert-St. Louis Field, County Counselor Herbert C. Funke said yesterday.

A Marine Panther F9F from El Toro, Calif., coming in for a landing, hit the ground on the south side of Natural Bridge road, bounced across the dual-lane highway and smashed through a picket fence into the airport. The plane narrowly missed a transport truck, the only vehicle in the immediate vicinity.

Lt. James E. Edmark, the pilot, escaped with a fractured thigh and minor cuts. He is in St. Joseph Hospital, St. Charles.

3 Stations in Row.

"The county council may have slipped up in granting permits to three filling stations in a row," Funke remarked. "The light pattern from the stations leads toward the runway lights; they could confuse a pilot unfamiliar with the situation."

Comdr. Lewis T. Woodard, executive officer of the Naval Air Station, supports Funke's theory. Woodard, an experienced airman, said the outside lights may have misled Lt. Edmark into thinking he was near the end of the runway.

Officials of municipalities in the airport area and county authorities were spurred to action late last month, following the third jet plane crash in the county in seven months. A request that the Civil Aeronautics Administration make a survey of the hazards was proposed by county officials. It received the support of Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), St. Louis.

Lt. Edmark's plane was the third of a flight of three from the El Toro Base, to approach the field. Frank J. Sida, operator of a restaurant at 10955 Natural Bridge road, told a Post-Dispatch reporter he was sitting in his restaurant when he saw the first plane make a normal approach. The second plane came in "so low I thought it had hit the ground, and I ran outside to investigate," Sida related.

Plane Hits Ground.

Sida was watching Lt. Edmark's jet make its approach when the plane struck the ground and bounced. The only vehicle on the highway at the moment, Sida said, was a transport truck. "The driver was startled and put on his brakes," the witness added.

Reds Smashed Feet of Youths In Indochina, St. Louisan Says

Wanted to Make Sure Those Going South Didn't Fight Again, Medical Officer Declares.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11—Lt. Thomas A. Dooley III of St. Louis, 29-year-old Navy medical officer who became a hero of the Indochina war by his aid to refugees at Haiphong, told yesterday of amputating the feet of about 100 young men whose bones were smashed by the Communists before the youths were evacuated to non-Communist South Viet Nam.

"The Communists were simply making certain they would never be able to fight," Dooley said.

"'You want to go south?' they would ask the young men. Then they would beat their feet into a mush with the butts of their rifles. 'Now you can go south.'"

Lt. Dooley, a graduate of St. Louis University Medical School, is the son of Mrs. Thomas A. Dooley, 4402 McPherson avenue. He has begun a speaking tour under naval auspices, telling of his experiences and observations in the war-ridden country.

Many of his experiences were described in the Post-Dispatch when he was interviewed in St. Louis last December.

Eardrums Punctured.

"A young Viet Namese was teaching five children the Lord's Prayer," Dooley told a Pentagon audience. "The Communists caught him at it and killed him. Then they shoved chopsticks into the children's ears, puncturing the eardrums, permanently deafening them.

"The Communists objected to two phrases in the prayer: 'Give us this day our daily bread' and 'Deliver us from evil.'

"In a Communist country, according to the Communists, you get your bread from the government. You don't ask God for it. 'And don't you know,' they added, 'that there is no evil in a Communist country?'".

This incident occurred about a block from the rice paddy where he had his medical camp, Dooley said.

In operating the medical camp he improvised at Haiphong he fought not only disease but Communist propaganda that had the refugees believing Americans were monsters who ate their own children.

He went down from 175 to 118 pounds — partly from amoebic dysentery and malaria, partly from a rice diet, partly from beatings he suffered from the refugees he was treating.

He would inoculate a child with penicillin, for instance, to treat it for yaws. The child would break out in a penicillin rash. The mother would come back and beat him with a club. Two of his ribs were broken. But he would not tell the Navy for fear hey would pull him out.

Tried to Sell America.

He was desperately anxious to keep on with the job he was doing there, he said—the job of selling America to these natives.

"It was terribly important to 'make face' for America. This was at a time when we were making the Nationalist Chinese evacuate the Tachin Islands and the natives were saying:

"'We think you're a paper tiger, like they say. You don't stick up for your friends.'"

So Dooley would ignore the beating, go back to the woman's hut the next morning when he knew the rash would be gone. "See," he would tell the mother. "The rash is gone now and your baby is getting over the yaws. Aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

The woman would put her hands together in a position of prayer and ask his pardon.

Dooley convinced the natives that Americans don't eat their children, that Nevada has not been wiped out by atomic bomb tests, and that the refugee ships would not open up at the bows and spill the natives into the ocean on their way south.

WORK STARTING ON EXPRESSWAY LINK TO MARKET

Construction of Cut-Off to Take About 18 Months—3 Streets to Be Closed.

Construction begins tomorrow on the Market street cut-off, one of the most important links in the Daniel Boone Expressway. This leg, extending nine-tenths of a mile from Vandeventer avenue to Tower Grove avenue, will eliminate the bottleneck at the eastern end of the Express Highway.

Three streets in this area must be closed to traffic for approximately six months, Frank Kriz, city director of streets and sewers, announced. The sections now closed:

Boyle avenue between Papin street and Clayton avenue.

Gratiot street between Boyle and Sarah street.

Hawk avenue between Clayton and Sarpy avenue.

Construction of the cut-off will not interfere with the present arrangement by which traffic leaves the Express Highway and flows into Vandeventer, however.

The cut-off, extending the Express Highway eastward, will pass under Boyle and over Sarah, Clayton avenue, the Wabash Railroad tracks and Vandeventer, entering Market at present street level near Spring avenue. Construction will require about 18 months.

Samuel Kraus Co. has been awarded a $2,600,000 construction contract by the State Highway Department. Right-of-way for this leg of the expressway cost an additional $1,600,000, of which the city defrays its one-half share with 1955 bond issue funds.

Meanwhile, construction is proceeding on the Grand-Market underpass, another unit in the Boone Expressway. This is expected to be completed in July.

DAVID HOLLIS SLATED FOR MOSLEY'S POST

To Be Named by Matthews if Sheriff's Ouster Becomes Final.

St. Louis County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews said last night he would appoint David L. Hollis to fill out the term of Sheriff Arthur C. Mosley if Mosley's ouster by the Missouri Supreme Court become final.

Hollis, a former Maplewood city councilman, is president of the St. Louis Tool Co., 7835 Manchester avenue, Maplewood, and lives at 9800 Cottonwood lane, Rock Hill. He was appointed to the council in February 1950 and served three years.

The Supreme Court in January ordered that Mosley should leave the office because he had permitted carnival gambling and sought a share of a reward given two of his deputies for recovery of a load of hijacked whisky.

He asked for a rehearing, and the motion may be acted upon at Jefferson City tomorrow. If it is overruled, a writ of ouster would not be expected for several days.

Matthews said he had discussed Hollis with Republican members of the County Council and believed the appointment would be satisfactory to them. Hollis is a Republican but not active in party affairs, the Supervisor said, explaining that he "wanted somebody who was not active in politics."

The appointment would be effective until next Jan. 1, when Mosley's regular term expires, with an understanding that Hollis would not run for the office at this year's election, Matthews added.

He said Hollis was one of several considered, and that he had not received a formal recommendation from the county's Republican Central Committee.

Oil Man Provided $2500 Offered to Senator Case

il companies intruded in campaign activities in states other than South Dakota as part of their drive.

Moreover, the disclosure completely demolished charges by Senator J. William Fulbright Democ, Arkansas, and other proponents of the gas bill to the effect that Case's report was only a "last minute" maneuver to delay the vote on the measure, and that the contribution might have been "planted" in South Dakota by opponents of the measure to influence Senators to vote against it.

Bill Before Eisenhower.

Case's disclosure had no noticeable adverse effect on the vote, so far as the lobby was concerned. The bill, to exempt producers of natural gas from federal price regulation, was passed by the Senate Monday night by a vote of 53 to 38—a bigger margin than even its proponents had expected. It now is before President Eisenhower for signature or rejection.

In their testimony, both Neff and Patman emphasized that there were "no strings attached" to the money offer to Case, a point on which they were supported by Kahler, who had testified earlier as to his role in the handling of the contribution.

Neff's testimony disclosed that even though the scope of his duties for Superior Oil was supposed to be restricted to Nebraska, his expenses for a trip to South Dakota last November to sound out Case's friends, including Kahler, on his position on the gas bill, his trip to Washington on which he visited Case's office to discuss the gas bill and later obtained the money from Patman, and his return trip to South Dakota to deliver the contribution, were paid by the oil company.

Neff's Testimony.

Appearing grim and somewhat harried, Neff gave the committee, under questioning by Charles W. Steadman, committee counsel, this testimony:

He was hired in October, 1955, by Patman for lobbying and legal duties for Superior in Nebraska, and in November, on his own initiative, he drove about 300 miles from Lexington to Sioux Falls to find out about Case's stand on the gas bill. He said, he was interested in the measure being passed and had discussed it with Patman, who also favored it.

In Sioux Falls he telephoned from his hotel room several "strangers" on a list of Republicans furnished him by a hotel clerk. Eventually, he was referred to Fred C. Christopherson, owner of the Sioux Falls Argus-Leader, which had declared editorially for the gas bill.

He then went to the newspaper office, but Christopherson was not in. He told a receptionist he wanted to talk to someone about "Republican matters" and was ushered into Kahler's office. Neff was accompanied by Paul Whaley, the sheriff of Dawson County, Nebraska. Kahler was alone.

Discussed Gas Bills.

Kahler and he discussed the Shrine, politics, both South Dakota Senators, the elections, weather and finally got around to discussing the gas bill." In the discussion of politics in Nebraska and South Dakota he and Kahler agreed that the Republican party, and Case, might be in trouble, and "Kahler said Case might need some campaign funds."

Neff inquired if Case might "need contributions" and Kahler replied "he certainly would." Neff asked Kahler to find out how Case stood on the gas bill and let him know. Kahler said he "certainly would."

On Dec. 28 he telephoned Patman and told him he had to make a trip east because of a death in the family in New York and they set a date to meet in Washington in early January. Neff arrived in Washington Jan. 11 and stayed at the Shoreham, where Patman also was quartered.

They discussed the Harris bill, but Neff's trip to South Dakota did not come up. Neff already had told Patman in the Dec. 28 telephone call that he had been to South Dakota and that Case was favorable to the bill.

Second Discussion.

Again on Jan. 12 he and Patman discussed the Harris bill, but not Neff's plan to visit Case that day.

Neff went to Case's office in the Senate office building and tried three times to see the Senator, but he was either out or busy. So he talked with Miss Opal Van Horn, Case's legislative assistant about the gas bill. Miss Van Horn showed him a "basic letter" sent in response to querries about the Senator's position. It said the Senator generally favored the bill but was withholding final commitment.

In this visit Neff identified himself as a friend of Kahler's which, indeed, he was by now entitled to do, since Kahler had informed him by letter earlier that he had visited with Case about Neff's interest in the gas bill and it would be appropriate for him to call on the Senator personally.

The night of Jan. 13, Neff called Patman to his hotel room and told him about having seen Case's correspondence on his "attitude" and that he thought Case should have a campaign contribution.

Patman said, "I think I can help you out," and gave him twenty-five $100 bills, which he just happened to have handy. Patman told him there were no strings attached and he should make this clear to Case's campaign people when he delivered the money.

Neff didn't think either he or Patman would have been "interested" in making the contribution if Case had been found to be against the bill.

On Jan. 16 at 11 a.m., Neff left a plane at Sioux Falls and went directly to Kahler's office. The two again discussed "general things," including the gas bill which "was having difficulty but was a nip and tuck thing."

Neff told Kahler that he thought Case was a "right-thinking" sort of man and wanted to make a contribution, whereupon he handed Case an envelope containing the currency, or placed it on his desk, asserting the "no strings" priviso and adding that what he does on the gas bill makes no difference. He thereupon took leave of Kahler and went back to Nebraska.

Billed Company for Expenses.

The expense accounts which he turned in to cover these trips in the interest of the gas bill, which were outside his normal duties, were tendered to the company because he was the sole judge on the expense question and, anyway, he thought the company would be glad to know Case was for the gas bill.

Kahler's account of the transaction differed somewhat from Neff's on just how much they talked about the gas bill and Case, but on the big thing—delivery of the $2500—they were in accord.

As Kahler related it, Neff on his initial visit said he thought Kahler was in a position to find out how Case stood on the bill. Kahler wrote Case and got back the "basic reply" on Dec. 14, which he forwarded to Neff.

Kahler's narration contradicted Neff's statement they discussed campaign funds at their first meeting, then went on as follows:

Kahler was not quite so close to the Senator as he had led Neff to believe and when he told him later he had "visited" with Case it was just to impress the Nebraska man. Kahler was surprised when Neff called at his office Jan. 17 or 18, said he had been to Washington but had been unable to see the Senator.

Felt Important.

Neff then asked Kahler if he would accept a contribution for Case's campaign and was very specific on the "no strings" point. It made Kahler feel important to be accepting campaign contributions. Neff thereupon placed an envelope on his desk.

Neff left and Kahler "got busy" and didn't have time to look into the envelope for about an hour, when he discovered he had twenty-five $100 bills.

Kahler was so startled by the size of the contribution that he put the envelope in a safe and didn't give it another thought until Jan. 25, a week after receiving it, when he suddenly decided "Gee, I'd better call Senator Case."

He called Case from Sioux Falls and advised the Senator to lean back in his chair because he had some news for him, a $2500 contribution. He could just tell from the tone of the Senator's voice that he was flabbergasted, which he was.

Joked About Money.

They joked about how they could spend that much money in South Dakota. Case wanted to know who left the money and Kahler told him Neff, and Case didn't joke any more and instructed him to turn the money over to John Griffin, his Sioux Falls campaign fund-raiser, which Kahler did.

It pleased Kahler to be able to tell the Senator about the contribution and he felt good about being able to handle the money. At the time he thought it would enhance his position with the Senator, but he is not sure now that it did.

On Feb. 3 Griffin called Kahler at St. Paul, Minn., and read him a telegram from Case in which the Senator forwarned that the newspapers would be carrying headlines about what he was going to say in the Senate about the money. Neff never did tell Kahler where the money came from.

Griffin testified that Case called him about the money, expressed doubt it could be used and instructed him to keep it separate from other campaign contributions until he could check up on the donor.

By Feb. 2 Case had determined that the Neff who left the contribution and the Neff Kahler had written him about as being interested in passage of the bill, were one and the same.

Orders Money Returned.

The Senator followed this up by directing Griffin to return the money, or if that could not be done, to turn it over to the South Dakota Children's Home Association.

Case told him that "I think I am going to vote against the gas bill," Griffin said, adding that he advised Case to have a strong statement on his reasons, for delivery in the Senate because of the strong sentiment for the bill among his friends in South Dakota.

Case said he was unable to return the money to Kahler immediately because Kahler was out of town and wanted nothing more to do with it anyway.

Griffin also cleared up the mystery about a "fake" telegram bearing his name which was sent to Case urging him to vote for the bill. Griffon said he believed it was sent by a business associate who "stuck his head in the door" when he was busy and asked if he might use his name, and Griffin nodded assent.

In Safe Deposit Box.

While he had custody of the $2500 it was in his safe deposit box with a note appended: "Case campaign fund. Don't open until he comes to town." He said he attached the note for his family's guidance should he get killed in an automobile accident before getting rid of the money.

Patman testified he had known Neff 35 years and on three occasions had hired him for special work for the Superior company, the last time in October 1955, to handle "problems" for the company in the Nebraska Legislature.

He said h ehad discussed the Harris bill with Neff but that Neff was "not hired to do anything about it." No one else in the oil company knew Neff, he said.

"I was for the bill. I don't duck that," Patman said.

Patman said that on Neff's visit to Washington in January "he told me he would like to make a contribution for Case and asked me for some money for that purpose."

"We talked about it and I asked him how much he had in mind," Patman continued. "He said $2500. I thought about it carefully. I told him as a lawyer I knew corporations could not make campaign contributions under the law.

'Not Corporation Funds.'

"I told him I knew nothing about Case or his voting record. But finally I told him I had some funds in my possession that belonged to Howard Keck, and that if he (Neff) wanted to make a contribution, I'd go along with him, and I gave him $2500. He suggested that figure. At the time I gave it to him I said to make it clear that this is the money of an individual, not corporation funds, and has nothing to do with any bill in Congress or any likely to come up.

"He asked me, 'What if Case goes against the gas bill?' I said there are no strings attached and what he does is no business of mine."

Patman said he knew the money was "private funds" because Keck told him so. Keck, he went on, trusted him with things "over and above my official duties."

"In the rounds I make there's a cause for contributions" to both Democratic and Republican parties, he said.

Happened to Have Money.

Asked by Steadman how he happened to have $2500 cash in his possession, Patman said he had brought it with him from Austin, Tex., his home, and was going on to New York "and make some other stops."

"I admit I used the money for a purpose other than what I took it from home for," he told the committee.

Asked if it wasn't part of his regular duties to make political contributions out of Keck's funds, Patman replied: "I'm a lawyer, not a lobbyist."

Asked by Senator Walter F. George if Keck had "ratified" the Case contribution, Patman replied:

"Well, I called him and told tim about it and he hasn't fired me yet."

Keck, who also is a director of Gulf Interstate Gas Co. of Canada and the City National Bank at Houston, Tex., said there wasn't any clear cut arrangement between him and Patman on how the "personal fund" was to be used, but that it was not intended for legislative purposes.

He said he was always being called upon to make "political contributions or buy tickets and there has to be someone to expedite those matters."

The enate caucus room was jammed again today for the hearings.

Senator George said the committee would meet again Monday to hear Sheriff Whaley's version of Neff's first visit to Kahler.

Superior Oil a "Tremendous' Firm; Deals in Natural Gas.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11 (AP)—Oil industry sources today described the Superior Oil Co. as a "tremendous" organization which began in California and spread to Texas and Louisiana.

Its stock was reported as "probably the most expensive" oil issue on stock exchanges. It sells for about $1100 a share.

Unofficial sources said 51 per cent of the company stock was owned by the Keck family. William Keck Sr. is chairman of the board. His son, Howard, is company president.

The company is a producer rather than refiner or marketer and deals primarily in crude oil and natural gas products.

Effort to Bribe Washington State Supreme Court Revealed.

OLYMPIA, Feb. 11 (AP)—An attempt to bribe the Washington state supreme court with $500 cash and a promise of $4500 more if a case on appeal were decided in a certain way was disclosed today by Chief Justice Frederick G. Hamley.

The $500 in $10 and $20 bills and a letter were delivered in a sealed envelope by a Western Union messenger to Hamley as he conferred with four other justices of the court. It had been mailed to the Western Union office through the Olympia post office.

Justice Hamley said the bribe offer involved a case which had been argued on appeal last fall. He declined to identify the case, but said a $20,000 judgment had been awarded when the case was heard in the King county superior court.

"The purport of the letter was that the writer would like to have a particular case decided in a particular way," Hamley said. "The $500 was proffered as a contribution to the judges' campaign and offered $4500 more when the decision was handed down."

LONDON, Feb. 11 (AP)—Britain is seeking a share in Nile river waters that are important to Ethiopia and Sudan and vital to life in Egypt.

The British are concerned with the level of equatorial Lake Victoria—generally considered the main source of the White Nile—and how it affects British East Africa; Kenya Colony, the Uganda Protectorate and Tanganyika Trust Territory.

BARITONE WARREN SYMPHONY SOLOIST

Presents Two Groups of Songs and Receives Ovation After Each.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

The succession of piano and violin soloists who customarily appear at concerts of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra was interrupted temporarily last night when Leonard Warren, the distinguished Metropolitan Opera baritone, sang a group of operatic excerpts with the orchestra at Kiel Auditorium. Though the argument against vocal soloists at a symphony concert is still sound, Warren's performance was such as to justify the exception.

As in his stage roles, Warren's voice had a virile quality and a heroic magnitude and his artistic insight into the significance of the music was reflected continuously in stress and phrasing. Iago's "Credo" from Verdi's "Otello" was a perfect expression of the malevolent fury that motivates this character—more strongly in the opera than in Shakespeare's play as a matter of fact—and it was a splendid demonstration of vocal control.

In the famous "Ombra mai fu" from Handel's "Xerxes" he was equally impressive in a more meditative mood calling for greater fluency and more delicate inflection. In his second appearance after the intermission he sang arias from "Faust" and "Andrea Chenier," then added as encores the Prologue from "Pagliacci" and a song by Frank Bridge. The orchestra under conductor Vladimir Golschmann provided discreet, sustaining accompaniments except in the "Credo" when it was somewhat too robust as a background.

The audience gave Warren ovations after both his groups.

Weaving a symphonic program around a group of short vocal numbers offers special difficulties but Conductor Golschmann came up with one that was more than usually interesting and well diversified. Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony received a performance that expressed happily the youthful zest of this vivid, charming work. The orchestra was pliant, richly colored and well balanced though the finish applied to internal detail was more apparent in the opening number, the overture to Weber's "Oberon."

The atmospheric properties of Copland's "Quiet City" were effectively realized, with Robert Weatherly playing the trumpet solo parts with great skill. The concert was brought to a close with Ravel's "La Valse." The program will be repeated this afternoon.

NEWSBOY SHOT WITH AIR PISTOL, COMPANION ROBBED

One newsboy was shot and slightly wounded by a pellet from an air pistol and his companion was robbed of $7 last night at Lawrence and Flad avenues by two youths who fled in an automobile.

Frederick Trotter, 16 years old, of 3328 LaSalle street, a Negro, was taken to City Hospital where physicians removed the pellet from above his right eye. Ih had not penetrated the skull. The other newsboy, Thuluster Woodson, 15, of 2311 Biddle street, also a Negro, was robbed but not harmed by the youths. Trotter was shot by the driver when he said he had no money.

In a similar occurrence, two brothers, Thomas and Anthony Zimmerman, 12 and 10, respectively, of 1136 Kingsland avenue, were strongarmed and robber of $9.25 in newspaper receipts by two Negro youths in the 900 block of Beach avenue.

BOMBER OF PLANE TO BE EXAMINED, TRIED SUICIDE

DENVER, Feb. 11 (AP) — Authorities took John Gilbert Graham from Denver county jail in a straitjacket today for an examination at Colorado Psychopathic Hospital.

The move came less than 24 hours after Graham, accused of killing his mother and 43 others by dynamiting an airliner, failed in an attempt to choke himself to death.

A psychiatrist, Dr. John Hilton, said the examination would particularly determine if Graham had suffered any brain damage in his stay in the jail.

MOSCOW TO DES MOINES: 'LET'S GET TOGETHER AGAIN'

LONDON, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Moscow radio today broadcast good wishes to the people of Des Moines, Ia., and suggested more cornfield meetings between Russian and American farmers. The broadcast marked the first anniversary of an article in the Des Moines Register which resulted in such exchange visits last summer.

The talks between United States and Soviet farmers, Moscow said, did as much to improve Russian-American relations as last year's summit conference in Geneva.

The Mayor of Dnepropetrovsk broadcast a personal message to the Mayor of Des Moines suggesting the two cities "get to know each other better and become greater friends."

for them to do it, accept the stolen property in payment of a debt, admit all these acts in the presence of witnesses, sign a confession admitting these acts, and then not be brought into court, the people who want protection for their property under the law had better get up in arms.

"I agree there is no glamor or glory attached to prosecuting a case like this. But that is the sort of service the citizens of the community are entitled to and have a right to demand."

Case Called Strong.

The warrant was refused by Assistant Circuit Attorneys Edward W. Sumner and Claude Hanks when police applied for it Feb. 7 and 8. The second visit to the Circuit Attorney's office was made after Vettori made the observation to police he thought the case against the "fence" was a strong one.

Sumner told the Post-Dispatch yesterday the warrant was refused because he was of the opinion a case could not be made. He said the burglary suspects did not tell him they had informed the confectionery owner the typewriter and tools were stolen when they turned these items over to him to settle a $4 debt.

"We could have used Gibson as a witness against the fence," Sumner acknowledged, "but anyway, it's more important to get the suspected thief than the fence. We can get the suspected thief on two cases and the fence only on one."

Dowd could not be reached for a statement.

Police said Gibson admitted he and his younger companions broke into the school after the confectionery operator told them he would like to get a typewriter because he knew where he could sell one.

"Give me a screwdriver and I'll get you one over at the school," Gibson was quoted as saying. The confectionery man supplied a screwdriver and a crowbar, he said, and the youths forced entry through a coal chute in the school building.

$4 Debt Called Paid.

Gibson said he took the typewriter, a new one valued at $160, to the confectioner after the burglary. The man gave Gibson no money, but told Gibson he could consider a $4 debt paid, Gibson said. Some janitor's tools taken in the burglary were placed on shelves of the confectionery and found there by police, they said.

In a statement signed by the confectioner, he was asked this question by police: "Do you know where these articles came from?" The man answered, the statement indicated: "They informed me that they got them in a burglary at the Eliot School." The man then acknowledged he closed out Gibson's $4 debt in exchange for the typewriter.

Associate Prosecutor Vettori said he would issue a warrant charging receiving stolen property when police first applied to him, after being turned down by the Circuit Attorney's office. But later he said he was unable to issue the warrant because the typewriter was valued at more than $50, the division between petty and grand larceny.

Dowd and members of his staff have been involved in disagreements with police officers for a long time over the circuit attorney's policy of issuing warrants. Bad feeling between the two agencies was increased by public utterances made by Dowd in his handling of the extensive investigation of payoffs to police by brothel operators.

Dowd also has been criticized in recent months by circuit judges and a special committee of the St. Louis Bar Association. It was charged he violated civil rights of accused persons by holding them in jail for months without preliminary hearings or without bringing them to trial.

TWIN BROTHERS, 14, HELD IN KILLING OF CUB SCOUT

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 11 (AP)—Twin 14-year-old brothers were arrested tonight and charged with murder in the beating to death of a 9-year-old Cub Scout.

Thomas Williams Jr. and his brother, Joseph, were held without bail at the juvenile detention home.

The body of David Powell was found yesterday beneath the porch of a house. The Williams boys live with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams Sr., on the second floor of the house.

'MAD DOG' IRVIN SAYS HE WON'T FIGHT EXTRADITION

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 11 (UP)—Leslie (Mad Dog) Irvin, 31 years old, changed his mind today and said he would not fight extradition to Indiana, where he is scheduled for electrocution at Michigan City on June 12.

Irvin's decision followed a long-distance telephone conference with his attorney, Theodore Lockyear Jr., at Evansville, Ind.

Irvin, accused of six murders and convicted of one, continued to deny connection with any killing.

LETTER OPENER IS WEAPON IN $170 HOLDUP OF JANITOR

James A. Brown, a janitor for the Terminal Railroad, reported to police he was robbed of $170 at Union Station yesterday by a man who threatened him with a letter opener.

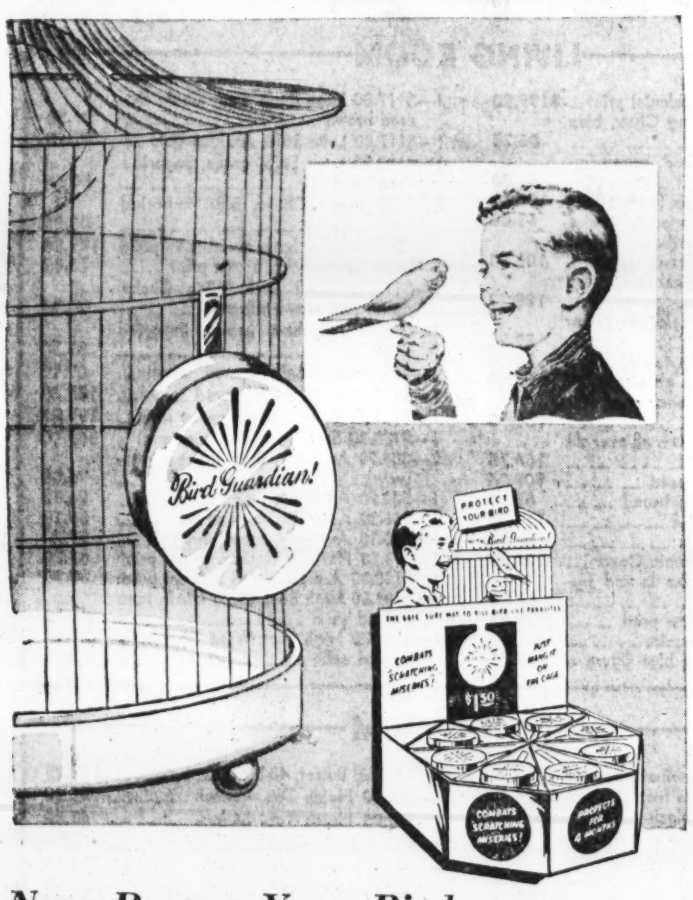

Brown, a Negro, said he was working in a washroom when another Negro pressed an object to his back and demanded his money. After handing over his wallet, Brown discovered he had been threatened with a letter opener, which he wrested from the robber. The man fled with the wallet, however. Brown, 69 years old, lives at 1518 Pendleton avenue.

Stevenson Rakes Administration For 'White Collar Corruption'

Says Eisenhower Meets Each Case by 'Throwing One of Wolves to Lambs, With Thanks and Medal of Honor.'

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 11—Adlai E. Steveson charged today that the Eisenhower Administration has dealt with each instance of "white collar corruption" in its ranks by "throwing one of the wolves to the lambs, with thanks and a medal of honor as he leaves."

The Democratic leader singled out no individual, but in a broad-scale attack on Republicans he referred obliquely to a number of cases. One was the operating fund established for Vice President Richard M. Nixon when he was a Congressman, and President Eisenhower's comment at the time of its disclosure that his associates must be clean as a hound's tooth.

Stevenson referred to it, sarcastically, as this Administration's "piety about hound's-tooth morality in government."

In resuming his active campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination after resting briefly following an eight-day California tour, Stevenson insisted the dangers facing this country could not "be smothered in a Republican chorus of 'peace and prosperity.'"

'Can't Make Up Mind.'

He asserted, also, that President Eisenhower's discription of his philosophy of government —"dynamic conservatism"—is "really the dynamic dilemma of an Administration which can't make up its mind."

Stevenson further charged that the Republicans are trying to avoid a discussion of the issues "to hide the fact that until the President announces his intention nobody actually knows where the Republican party stands, much less where it is going to stand on most of the vital questions that face the nation."

The former Illinois governor's most scathing attack on the Republicans since his unsuccessful campaign against President Eisenhower in 1952 took place at a $25-a-plate Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner of the Oregon Democratic organization.

In heaping scorn on the political opposition, Stevenson coined the phrase "creeping elephantiasis" and charged the party with playing "shell game politics" in which the nation is asked to guess under which administration member's actions or statements lies administration policy.

'Bold Words, Faint Hearts'.

"The American electorate has had all it is going to have of bold words and faint hearts," he said.

Stevenson spoke kindly, however, of the Oregon Democratic party and especially of the state's two Senators—Senator Richard Neuberger, whom he described as "one of the finest men we have representing us in Washington," and Senator Wayne Morse, "a national symbol not only of the issues and concepts that divide the (two) parties in a great election year, but of the means and methods by which we can better serve the needs of all the people of this country."

Noting Senator Morse's pending struggle for re-election in November, Stevenson said "massive forces now are being mobilized to silence this honest, eloquent voice which has never had any master except his conscience."

Senator Morse, who, as a Republican, was an early supporter of Gen. Eisenhower for President in 1952, was an honored guest at tonight's dinner. Senator Morse switched to Stevenson then the Democratic nominee, after Mr. Eisenhower won the Republican nomination. Later the Senator changed parties—first to become an independent, then a Democrat.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

In a press conference before his speech, Stevenson deplored the "temporary denial" of the right of a young Negro woman to attend classes at the University of Alabama because of mob violence.

He predicted the restoration of order on the Tuscaloosa campus and the return of Autherine J. Lucy of Birmingham to her classrooms.

At the same time, he said, the total Southern picture, including a happier situation on some other Southern campuses, "shouldn't be obscured by the hot headlines from Tuscaloosa."

He was asked at a press conference, for comment on the "Tuscaloosa incident."

'Only One Answer'

He said he would gladly comment. In fact, he added, he had prepared a statement on the subject. He pulled it from his pocket and read it to a sizeable audience of newspaper, radio, television and newsreel representatives.

He declared that when mob violence resulted on the Alabama campus "the sovereignty of the state of Alabama became the issue—and there can be only one proper answer." That answer was, he said, "The law must be obeyed."

He expressed the view that University officials had behaved responsibly and that the real trouble came from outsiders, not students.

Then he noted that Negroes had been admitted as students by the universities of Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas, without incident. He said this ought to be taken into account.

Plans Further Statement.

Stevenson, who had been put on the spot in California on the civil rights issue, said he hoped to get out a statement tomorrow on some of the problems in the South, such as desegregation, miscarriage of justice and the deprivation of the right of Negroes to vote, through duress or violence.

"Nobody can view except with alarm, dismay and distress," he said, "any miscarriage of justice anywhere."

OLIN MATHIESON TO BUILD TOWN FOR OHIO EMPLOYES

MARYVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 11 (UP)—A new town to provide homes for employes of the Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp. will be built in Monroe county, O., where the company is building an aluminum plant, it was announced today.

The town, with ultimate facilities for a population of 5000, will be 50 miles north of Marietta, O., and 60 miles south of Wheeling, W. Va. The initial phase is estimated to cost about $15,000,000.

The town will be named Carter after T. Carter Dye, executive to the president of the chemical firm, the announcement said. About 400 acres of land were purchased for the development. Completion of the project is scheduled for January 1958 to coincide with opening of the plant.

STORMS GROUND 4 SHIPS, DEATHS MOUNT IN EUROPE

LONDON, Feb. 11 (AP)—Blizzards scourged Western Europe today. They sent four ships aground and added to the suffering caused by a disastrous two-week freeze-up. The death toll mounted to 269.

Two Royal Air Force helicopters rescued 10 British seamen clinging to the side of their grounded tugboat, the 592-ton Rumania. The Rumania keeled over on the treacherous Long Sand, 15 miles off the English east coast as it tried to pull off the grounded Brazilian freighter Loide-Honduras.

Nine French fishermen stuck aboard the 70-ton trawler Marylis, ashore near Carnsore Point, southern Ireland.

A lifeboat went out to help the 215-ton Dutch motorship Tonny, aground off Scotland's east coast near Berwick. The ship floated off and later was reported drifting out to sea.

Icy winds from Scandinavia piled up huge snowdrifts over northern and eastern England. Ice on streets in Milan, northern Italy, paralyzed traffic.

Meatmarket workers in Montpellier, France, warmed up by ducking into their refrigerators. Inside the temperature was 27 degrees fahrenheit. Outside it was down to 10.

Lure for Litterbugs?

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (UP)—New York is testing vari-colored trash baskets to determine whether any particular color will induce litterbugs to deposit waste paper in receptacles rather than on the streets and sidewalks. Present receptacles are painted silver. Colors being tested include red, orange, yellow, green and blue.

SCHOOL ELECTION IN 5 COUNTY AREAS

R-7, R-9, Parkway, Berkeley and Clayton Districts to Vote on Bonds Tuesday.

Bond issues will be before the voters of five St. Louis county school districts next Tuesday, with the polls open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. A two-thirds favorable vote is needed for passage in each district.

The Kirkwood R-7 District will vote on a proposed issue of $2,650,000 for a new junior high school, expansion of the high school, additions to elementary schools and acquisition of a site for a new elementary school. Some delayed maintenance on existing buildings would also be met from the bond funds. An estimated 21-cent rise in the $3.25 tax rate would be needed.

In the Mehlville R-9 District it is proposed to issue $1,410,000 in bonds to finance the construction and equipping of additions to the senior high school and to four elementary schools. It is estimated the present tax rate of $2.28 would have to rise by 15 cents and ultimately by 23 cents to service the bonds.

Berkeley School District will vote on a proposed issue of $1,100,000 for additions to the junior and senior high schools and three elementary schools, as well as for site acquisition for a new junior high school building. It was estimated a 19-cent rise in the $2.16 tax rate would be needed to service the bonds.

Parkway Consolidated District voters will vote on a proposal for $750,000 in bonds, of which $350,000 would be used to supplement existing funds for a junior-senior high school and $400,000 for additions to five elementary schools. An estimated 20- to 25-cent increase in the $2.05 tax rate would be needed.

Clayton District voters will have two propositions before them. One is for $250,000 for additional classrooms at two elementary schools while the other is for $300,000 for a new swimming pool. It is not believed any rise in the $1.68 tax rate would be needed because of additions to the assessment rolls in the rapidly growing community.

W. N. SOUTHERN, 91, DIES; PUBLISHER FOR 53 YEARS

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 11 (UP)—William N. Southern, founder of the Independence Examiner and its publisher for 53 years, died today at his home after an illness of several weeks. He was 91 years old.

Southern gained national recognition for his columns written "in Missouri language," and for his syndicated weekly Sunday School lesson, published in more than 40 newspapers in various parts of the country.

Southern founded the Examiner in 1898; and the honorary title of "colonel" soon was bestowed on him by fellow townsmen. He retired in 1951 when he and Frank Rucker, co-owners, sold the paper to Stauffer Publications, Inc., of Topeka, Kan.

REPORTS BOOST IN RED BUYING OF 'HARD GOODS'

Aid Director Says Rise Was $25,000,000 in Half Year After West Eased Curbs.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (UP) —Foreign Aid Director John B. Hollister reported today that the Soviet bloc increased purchases of "hard goods" by $25,000,000 in the first six months after western trade controls were relaxed in 1954.

Most of the increase—$18,600,000 of it—resulted from Communist buying of metals, minerals and manufactured forms of these two items. A principal purchase was copper wire, a potentially strategic item.

Another $5,200,000 was accounted for by stepped up purchases of ships. Hollister said, however, that these vessels were not of "primary strategic value."

The foreign aid chief said that despite the increased communist buying of "hard goods," these items accounted for only 16 per cent of exports sent behind the Iron Curtain by free nations which co-operate in east-west trade controls.

The Senate Permanent Investigating subcommittee will open an investigation Tuesday to check on whether some important materials got into Soviet hands as a result of the trade control relaxation. The group is reported especially concerned about Britain's selling some large electric generators and a metal-working machine to Russia.

Senator Symington (Dem.), of Missouri, a subcommittee member, predicted some "very interesting" disclosures in the hearings.

"There is no question that the amounts of such items as copper, magnesium, rubber and modern machine tools which the American government has approved our Allies shipping behind the Iron Curtain during recent months has been of major help to the Communists in the building of their war machine," he said.

Subcommittee Chief Counsel Robert F. Kennedy said there were indications that United States Allies may be laying the groundwork for trying to get a relaxation of controls on shipments to Red China. He said there are evidences of a similar pattern that preceded the 1954 relaxation of controls over shipments to countries behind the European Iron Curtain.

Hollister's comments on trade were contained in a semi-annual report to Congress on operations under the so-called Battle Act during the first half of 1955. The law sets United States policy on trade with the Iron Curtain nations and requires that foreign aid be barred from any nation sending certain war-potential items to the Communist world.

The United States, Britain and other Allies agreed after the war to bar, or limit, the shipment of a long list of so-called strategic goods to these Communist nations. In 1954, however, the Allies negotiated a limited relaxation of the control of goods shipped to Russia and its European satellites. Britain initiated the relaxation move, just as it now is pressing for easing of trade with Red China.

Hollister conceded that the trade control revision brought about a "minor shift toward more purchases by the bloc of some of the decontrolled items." At the same time, he said, the Communist world cut down on its purchases of items always considered non-strategic.

"While it is too early in mid-1955 to see the full effects of the 1954 revision of export controls, it is clear that it did not stimulate a major expansion of East-West trade," he said.

"This experience is another refutation of claims of Soviet bloc spokesmen that export controls have been responsible for holding down the level of trade," he said.

Subcommittee sources apparently have information that the United States supported British sales of some 60,000 kilowatt generators and a horizontal boring mill to Russia. The British embassy here is asking London for information on the reported transactions.

A London dispatch, meanwhile, quoted a British Board of Trade spokesman as denying the story. He said embargo provisions exclude the export to Russia of 60,000-kilowatt generators although permitting the export of limited quantities of smaller units.

No export permits for 60,000 kilowatt generators or larger ones have been granted, the spokesman said, but licenses have been given for the export of smaller units within the limits of the embargo rules.

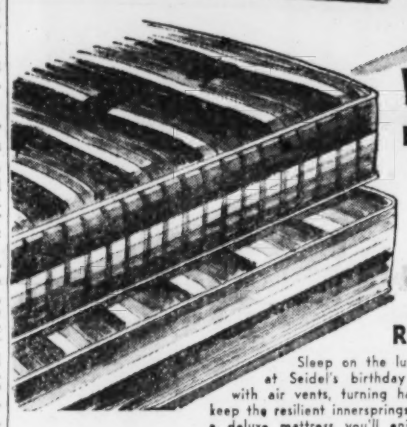

NORTHWEST SCHOOL MEETING

A public meeting to promote construction of a northwest high school will be held by the Northwest Schools Association at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Walbridge School, 5000 Davison avenue. The association is composed of residents of six elementary school areas.

Senate Group to Air Conflicting Views on Trade With Red China

Allies of U. S. Want Bars Relaxed but American Conservatives Are Expected to Oppose Any Change.

By GEORGE G. H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 — Congressional opposition, especially among conservatives, to relaxation of free world controls on trade with Communist China is likely to emerge in next week's Senate hearings on East-West commerce.

The hearings, to be conducted by the investigating subcommittee of Senator John L. McClellan (Dem.), Arkansas, may produce material that will affect the forthcoming review of restrictions on strategic trade.

On Feb. 1 President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Eden promised to re-examine the scope of the controls.

McClellan set forth his own views two days before Eden arrived in Washington. McClellan said a preliminary investigation by the subcommittee showed that allies of the United States are selling war goods (not munitions) to the Soviet bloc. He said it was difficult to believe that the relaxation in controls agreed on in August, 1954, took place with the concurrence of top officials of the United States.

British Trade With Reds.

The hearings, McClellan said, are intended to make known to the American people the effects of the 1954 relaxation. He said that Britain is one of the leading nations in trade with Communist countries.

Basic export controls on strategic items constitute one aspect of the free world's effort to achieve an international defensive security system, made necessary by aggressive Soviet policies recently expanded in the economic field.

Sixteen Western-oriented nations engage in the venture, the success of which depends on the degree to which each nation is willing to co-operate. In this effort, the United States can persuade and use economic and political levers, but cannot control the decisions of other countries. The system has been described as "a prodigy in international relations."

The issue currently does not involve anything approaching abandonment of controls. The United States has a total embargo on trade with Red China. This country has agreed to review the control lists with a view to strengthening other free world countries; the review might loosen some controls and tighten others.

Official and unofficial interpretations of the Eden-Eisenhower communique indicate some relaxation is probable, but not immediately. Negotiations that led to the 1954 relaxation took more than four months. Eden is well awars of the political facts of life in an election year in the United States. He is also under pressure because of Commonwealth economic considerations, however.

The British, who have recognized the legality of the Chinese Communist regime, think it is illogical to have different prohibitory lists for the Soviet Union and its satellites and for China. They note there is plenty of shipping between China and other Communist countries.

They say they cannot make a case in logic for a differential in the strategic controls, and that the only explanation the British government can make when questioned in the House of Commons is that the Americans want it that way.

The British think that if controls are to be enforced by the large countries they must be reasonable, or appear to be reasonable, to the small nations. They argue that Japan's economy would be strengthened by some China trade.

The British have not asked for and do not anticipate obtaining drastic revisions, but they definitely expect that some concessions will be made. They are particularly interested in Malaya, which, while on the way to independence within the British Commonwealth, now is subject to the economic policies of the mother country.

Case of Ceylon.

Malaya cannot ship its rubber to Red China. Ceylon, which is about as near China as Malaya is, can and does ship rubber to the Communists. Ceylon is an independent country within the British Commonwealth and a new member of the United Nations.

Ceylon has a relatively stable government, while Malaya is engaged in a desperate struggle with the Communists. The British argue that if Malaya could sell some rubber to Red China it would relieve the British taxpayer of a portion of his burden, shore up the Malayan economy and provide money for fighting the Communists. The British further say they have difficulty explaining the controls to Malaya in view of Ceylon's activities.

Further, the British point out that the Malayan trade probably would not mean that Red China would get additional rubber, since it is thought Peiping now obtains about as much rubber as it can process. Relaxation of the controls would permit Malaya to share in the China market, however.

United States figures show the free world exported crude rubber valued at $26,000,000 to China in 1952, $48,300,000 in 1953 and $43,200,000 in 1954.

Conflicting Policies.

The United States has two conflicting policies on Red China controls. The first is to continue maximum economic pressure on the Peiping government.

The second is to keep the group of free countries working together on controls so as to co-ordinate the restrictions and make them effective. There is naturally a division of opinion as to which policy should have precedence and a division on methods of gaining the objectives.

As far as the public is concerned, it is not easy to form a proper judgment. Most of the proceedings and negotiations on these matters are secret. Some countries have not even published the fact that there is an informal international committee riding herd on the controls.

This committee is known as the Consulative Group, which was set up at the ministerial level of representatives of the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization members and has headquarters in Paris. It has two 15-member working committees, a co-ordinating committee designated COCOM and a China committee designated CHINCOM. Japan, not a NATO member, takes the place of Iceland on CHINCOM. COCOM and CHINCOM are in virtually permanent session in Paris: G.G. meets only occasionally and handles major policy decisions.

In addition, special bipartite and tripartite committees are set up from time to time. Decisions of all the committees are unanimous; refusal of one or two countries to agree would defeat the purposes of the organization.

Details Kept Secret.

Details of the control lists worked out by the participating countries are secret. They involve mainly "strategic goods," a designation referring to goods which make a significant contribution to war-making power. There are bars on all arms and ammunition.

The levels of control differ. Some strategic goods are embargoed; others, of less importance, are restricted as to quantity; others are kept under surveillance by being placed on the so-called "watch list." In addition to the different levels, there are three main kinds of strategic lists:

1. The "international" lists those which all the cooperating countries have accepted as their minimum levels of control on the items set forth.

2. National lists, one of which is maintained by each co-operating country. Most United States export controls are administered by th eDepartment of Commerce.

3. The United States Battle Act lists, consisting of items this country thinks should be controlled by other free world nations. These lists, are administered by the the International Co-operation and adherence to them may be required as a condition precedent to receipt of foreign aid.

The Battle Act is the popular name for the Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951, which was sponsored by former Representative Laurie C. Battle (Dem.), Alabama. It has no termination date. Basic United States policies are set, within the Congressional framework, by the President and National Security Council acting with the advice of 10 Federal agencies.

Controls have existed in some countries since 1948 and have been co-ordinated through an international group since early 1950.

Eisenhower Reverses Policy, Approves Aid to Ceylon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (AP) —President Eisenhower has reversed United States policy against granting economic aid to Ceylon, it was learned today, as a step toward tightening American ties with the free countries of Asia.

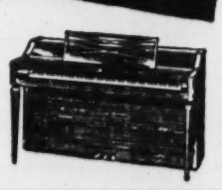

The State Department notified the Ceylonese government last night that an aid agreement had been approved after years of argument between the two countries over Ceylon's sale of rubber to Communist China. The aid program, to be announced early next week, will amount to about $5,000,000 for a year.

Ceylon is also expected to get assurance by mid-March of an Atomic reactor from this country. The Philippines and Ceylon have both sought to become the headquarters of a Far Eastern atomic energy plant and research center proposed last year by the United States.

BALLOONS PICKED UP DATA DEEP IN RUSSIA FOR U. S.

subject during the last several days of international controversy, with the result that there had been a tight lid of secrecy by the Air Force.

But many facts about American military interest in balloons are known and the State Department's prompt and softly-worded reply to Russia's protest served to underscore several points.

Dulles went out of his way, in the note to Moscow, to say that one American balloon, launched from California, floated across North America, the Atlantic ocean and the Eurasian continent into the western Pacific where its course was picked up by United States monitoring stations.

Dulles could have told the Russians that this was not the only camera-equipped American balloon to cross their country unmolested. The Russians know they didn't "capture" all of the balloons.

The Air Force announcement of its expanded balloon launching program, on Jan. 8, and this week's note to Moscow included the statement that the balloons carried cameras to photograph cloud formations.

Dulles remarked at his weekly news conference that if the balloon cameras happened to take pictures of ground installations when there were no clouds to be photographed, that would be "quite accidental."

The Air Force announced the start of its "Moby Dick" balloon studies of the upper air in July 1952. The stated purpose was to obtain information to "aid future Air Force aircraft and guided missile developments involving operations at increasingly higher altitudes."

The announcement added that the findings "also will be of direct benefit to the public through contributions to weather forecasting."

The military services are running several balloon programs simultaneously, for a variety of scientific and technical purposes.

The Navy pioneered the use of large plastic balloons for controlled altitude research. This is the "sky hook" program started nine years ago. In these tests, going ahead this week, the balloons are launched from Texas and regulated to ascend to about 100,000 feet. At that altitude, instruments record the effects of high energy cosmic particles that are normally distintegrated in the atmosphere.

To gain even higher altitude, the Navy has fired rockets from balloons floating at the 100,000-foot level. These have reached altitudes of 225,000 feet or more in the continuing search for facts about what the atomic particles might do to man-made satellites and missiles.

The Air Force "Moby Dick" balloons are regulated to rise to the jet stream, an air current up to 60 miles wide with speeds up to 150 miles per hour. This current generally flows from west to east, but its position shifts with the seasons.

The military want to know all they can learn about this jet stream because of its obvious effect on aircraft and missiles.

The Air Force started its "Moby Dick" launchings in the United States, then extended operations to Brazil, Panama, Japan and Okinawa. Scotland was added as a launching site early this year and, until Russia protested, research stations were ready to operate from other points in western Europe.

The "Moby Dick" balloons, measuring 45 feet to 110 feet in diameter, carry gondolas containing numerous weather, wind and atmospheric recording devices. One camera is trained on the instruments to provide a running record. Another camera, pointed earthward, photographs clouds and weather fronts.

Some of the balloons have automatic radio transmitters which help ground stations follow their course.

The Navy's controlled altitude balloons are smaller, measuring 39 feet in diameter. Several have been launched from Japan this winter and crossed the Pacific. One went down in Mississippi, another was last heard from over Newfoundland, and a third was reported 400 miles north of Detroit.

These smaller Navy balloons are regulated to float at about 30,000 feet. Their specific purpose is to provide information about the vagaries of the jet stream from eastern Asia across the North American continent.

All of the recording instruments are equipped with parachutes. Some information can be gleaned from the radio messages from the balloons in flight, such as the course and speed of the upper air currents. But the real pay-off comes with the recovery of the instruments and the camera records of the flight.

The Russians also launch upper air balloons. Two have recently floated over Japan. But the westerly flow of the upper air currents, most of the time, and the phenomena of downdrafts in the northern Pacific work against the likelihood of large numbers of Soviet gas bags floating over the United States.

MOSCOW, Feb. 11 (AP)—Pravda charged today that the United States Government is attempting to carry out unilaterally with balloons President Eisenhower's open skies program.

The open skies plan, proposed by the President at the Geneva conference last July, would involve Russia and the United States permitting each other to carry out aerial reconnaissance over each other's territory in order to eliminate fear of surprise attacks.

Eugene Litoshko, a writer for the Communist party paper, charged that the balloon operation had been assessed as a gross violation of international law and an open infringement of state sovereignty.

"Thus the essence of the matter is that American military authorities under the guise of 'scientific studies' have made an attempt to carry out unilaterally the program widely advertised in the United States as the 'open skies' plan," he wrote.

He denied American statements that the balloons are not a danger to air transport or human life, with a declaration that numerous facts utterly refute this argument. He did not list the facts.

STAMP CANCELLATIONS WILL ADVERTISE JUBILEE HERE

Most mail leaving St. Louis next August and September will carry cancelations advertising the Mid-America Jubilee to be held on the riverfront in September, it was announced yesterday by City-Country Cavalcade jubilee sponsors.

Special dies will be used at the post office and by business firms, through co-operation of Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann and the Post Office Department. An estimated 35,000,000 pieces of mail, destined for places throughout the world, will be canceled at the post office during the period.

JOSEPH DESLOGE'S WIFE HURT IN CRASH

Injured in County Collision —Pedestrian Killed in Another Accident.

Mrs. Joseph Desloge of Vouziers, Florissant, suffered a broken left thigh, dislocated left thumb and scalp lacerations yesterday when an automobile driven by her husband sideswiped another machine at Missouri Highway 140 and Taylor road, in Hazelwood.

Police said the other vehicle, southbound, had slowed to make a left turn and that the Desloge car, also southbound, tried to pass it on the left. William Reichardt of Florissant, driver of the other machine, said his directional signal was operating at the time.

The Desloges were driving a house guest, Mlle. Adrienne Zygomalas of New York, former lady in waiting to Queen Victoria of Spain, to Lambert-St. Louis Field to catch an airplane when the accident occurred.

Hazelwood police said Desloge drove Mlle. Zygomalas to the airport from the accident scene, a mile away, in an automobile borrowed from a passerby, then returned and accompanied his wife in an ambulance to Barnes Hospital.

Silas Woodward, a laborer, was killed yesterday when struck by an automobile as he was walking east in the 9100 block of Watson road, Crestwood. He lived at a tourist court at 9044 Watson road, Crestwood.

Walter E. Whitaker, a welder, Fenton Hills road, Fenton, driver of the automobile, told county police he was driving east in Watson and his vision was obscured by slush thrown over the windshield of the machine by a passing truck.

He said the windshield wipers did not clear away the dirty slush and he did not see the pedestrian until it was too late to avoid striking him. Woodward, he said, was walking on the pavement about a foot from the edge.

Royald Jones, a superintendent of Rawlings Sporting Goods Co., was killed yesterday about a mile and a half east of Pacific, Mo., on U. S. Highway 66, when the automobile he was driving skidded on slick pavement into the path of a tractor-trailer and was struck broadside, the Highway Patrol reported.

Jones, 44 years old, lived at 7546 Milan avenue, University City. He was in charge of the Rawlings plants at Licking, Mo., and Newburg, Mo.

Driver of the tractor-trailer was Harold Hausmann, 3600 block of San Jose lane, St. Ann, the Highway Patrol reported.

BAR ASSOCIATION INSTITUTE

Arch M. Cantrall of Clarksburg, W.Va., senior partner in the law firm of Stathers & Cantrall, will conduct an institute on law office systems for members of the Bar Association of St. Louis at 5 p.m. tomorrow at Hotel DeSoto.

He will present some new simplified techniques in the management of law offices.

SYMPHONY MAINTENANCE DRIVE TO START FEB. 21

The 1956-57 maintenance fund campaign of the St. Louis Symphony Society will be launched Feb. 21 with a luncheon at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson to which all workers in the drive have been invited.

Because the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, like all other symphonic orchestras throughout the country, is unable to meet all its expenses from ticket sales, the annual maintenance fund drive is needed to insure its financial security, it was explained by Lamar W. McLeod, general chairman of the drive.

Vice chairmen are August A. Busch Jr., Irving Edison, Alfred Fleishman, Newell S. Knight, Charles S. Lamy, Thomas C. Noel, Alvin S. Novack, Robert E. Stevenson and Orrin S. Wrightman Jr. Mrs. Reuben M. Morriss Jr. is chairman of the women's division and Mrs. Walter Graul is chairman of the vicinity workers.

FILE EARLY AND END WORRY, SAYS U.S. TAX MAN BLITHELY

The easiest way to take care of the annual headache of filing a federal income tax return is to file it early, Ernest M. Flinn, district director of Internal Revenue, advised yesterday.

Flinn said the early filing of returns eliminates prolonged worry by taxpayers and allows the department to take more time in advising taxpayers about problems that arise in filing returns. The deadline is April 16.

"The vast bulk of St. Louisans will find no difficulty in making out their own returns," Flinn optimistically predicted. "Our office stands ready to give assistance or advice to those who do get bogged down in the forms."

MISSING BRITISH DIPLOMATS SHOW UP IN MOSCOW

the Sunday Times said both looked well, happy and relaxed, although older and grayer. Both men wore dark suits and ties of Western style.

Maclean, considered by his former associates in the British Foreign Office as the more dominant of the two, was head of the American department of the British Foreign Office when he disappeared.

Burgess, who said he had worked for BBC and the British Secret Service before joining the Foreign Office, was second secretary of the British embassy in Washington and also conversant with the secrets of British-American diplomacy at the time.

"As regards Maclean," their statement said, "he was in the official diplomatic service in London and Paris, Washington and Cairo from 1935 to 1951, thus being part of the machine which, with the exception of the war period, was pursuing a policy unacceptable not only to Maclean but also to many others.

"He was by no means the only one in the Foreign Office to express before the war his negative attitude toward Britain's foreign policy, particularly as regards Abyssinia (Ethiopia), the civil war in Spain and the Munich events.

"However, after the war he found himself more and more alone.

"It was becoming increasingly difficult to find anyone to think of something else than the Communist menace, to understand the senselessness and danger of American policy in the Far East and Europe.

"To remain further in the diplomatic service was becoming impossible. In May 1951 there were clear signs that whatever plans he may have been making for his future, the Foreign Office and the security organs had their own intentions as regards him.

Phone Tapped.

"The telephones both in his office and at his home were being used as microphones for listening in. Counter-espionage agents followed him wherever he went, and one of his colleagues was sent to him for provocative purposes.

"For this reason, Maclean decided to go to the Soviet Union in order to contribute from there, to the best of his ability, to the achievements of mutual understanding between East and West.

"The difficulty of leaving the country while under police surveillance was solved by a meeting with Burgess who had just returned to London from Washington, where he was occupying a post in the British embassy.

"The latter not only agreed to organize everything necessary for departure, but he himself also took the decision to leave Britain."

Last year, the British Foreign Office, after long reticence on the affair, charged the two men long had been Soviet agents. A white paper said suspicion was directed at Maclean as early as 1949 when it became evident that some of its secrets were being leaked to Moscow.

The British Foreign Office said the pair took leave of London when the government ordered Maclean questioned, and a Labor member of Parliament, Lt. Col. Marcus Lipton, charged last October that they were tipped off by a third man. But the man named by Lipton as the tipster, Harold Philby, a former third secretary in the British embassy in Washington, was cleared and Lipton withdrew his charge.

The British Foreign Office announced, however, last November that two Foreign Office officials, whom it did not name, had resigned as a result of an investigation into the affair.

In September 1953, Maclean's wife also left England with her two small boys, and a girl born after Maclean's disappearance, and was presumed by the British to have joined her husband here.

Psychological Cold War Move by Reds, London Says.

LONDON, Feb. 11 (UP)—Authoritative British sources said tonight that Russia deliberately sprang Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess on the West to gain a psychological advantage in the cold war.

The British Foreign Office made no comment except to say that the appearance of the two fugitive diplomats in Moscow was an "interesting development."

Sources said the timing of the Burgess-Maclean statement could be linked to three developments:

1. The Eisenhower-Eden talks in Washington.
2. The Communist party congress opening in Moscow Tuesday.
3. The visit of Soviet Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev and Soviet Premier Bulganin to Britain next April.

The sources said the statement by the two Britons appeared to be a Kremlin-dictated move to discredit Britain and the United States by having two former officials familiar with the policies of both countries denounce them and praise Russia.

Demands in Washington for Investigation Likely.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (UP)—The State Department declined to comment today on the disclosure that former British diplomats Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess are in Moscow.

Diplomatic experts here said the statement which Burgess and Maclean issued was merely a "parroting of the Communist propaganda line" which seeks to blame the West, and primarily the United States, for East-West tensions.

It was considered likely that the statement would prompt new congressional demands for an investigation to determine whether the Britons slipped any United States secrets to Russia. Chairman James O. Eastland (Dem.), Mississippi, of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, has previously demanded an accounting from the State Department on this question.

SPEEDER REALLY GOING TO FIRE; COURT BAFFLED

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (UP)—So the traffic cop says: "Going to a fire?"

And the driver says, "Yes," and really is.

And the officer writes a ticket anyway.

Then what happens.

Magistrate Anthony M. Livoti scratched his head and reserved decision.

The ticketed driver was Harold Glicksman, director of the bureau of inspectors of the air pollution department. He was speeding through Brooklyn at 52 miles an hour toward a smoky chimney reported to him by radio.

Patrolman John Herzog was unimpressed.

"My client should have given this cop a summons," pleaded the smoke-chaser's lawyer, Bernard Dubin. "The cop was obstructing him in his performance of duty. Can one cop give another cop who is chasing a speeder a ticket? Can a cop give an ambulance driver a ticket?

Off hand, Livoti said he didn't know.

MISSOURI U. EX-STUDENT MENTALLY ILL, REDS SAY

TOKYO, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Peiping radio conceded tonight that Liu Yung-ming, the former University of Missouri student who chose to return to Communist China, was "mentally unwell." The broadcast said four doctors examined him in Canton and predicted he would regain his health.

"Our diagnosis is Liu Yung-ming is suffering from schizophrenia," said Dr. Huang Chae-kai, one of the four. This was the same diagnosis made at the Farmington (Mo.) state hospital where he was confined for five years. The doctor also said Liu was undernourished.

Liu was one of many Chinese students who entered American colleges before the Chinese mainland fell to the Communists in 1949. After he was hospitalized, Red China said he was detained without cause. He was cleared for repatriation this year.

39 FERRY RIDERS MISSING

TAIPEI, Formosa, Feb. 11 (AP)—Thirty-nine persons are now listed as missing in a ferry boat disaster off northwest Formosa Thursday.

The ferry, bound for Tansui from Pali, capsized in rough seas. Three of 23 survivors picked up later died. Nine bodies have been recovered.

DIES OF CRASH INJURIES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHESTER, Ill., Feb. 11—Steve Simko of Ellis Grove, Ill., died at a hospital here today of injuries suffered last night when his automobile apparently skidded on a snow-covered highway and struck an oncoming tractor-trailer truck driven by J. V. French, of St. Louis.

French was uninjured. State Police said the accident occurred on Illinois Route 3 near Chester, about 50 miles south of St. Louis.

$41,580 MADE AVAILABLE FOR DEFENSE HERE

First Definite Step Taken Toward Plan to Cope With Air Attack.

First definite step toward a comprehensive civil defense plan for the St. Louis metropolitan area became known yesterday with announcement that the Federal Civil Defense Administration has made $41,580 available for the first of four phases leading to a final plan.

First phase, to require about 90 days, will be devoted to "an initial detailed survey of 19 study areas listed by FCDA as essential to the Survival Plan Project," a statement from the St. Louis Office of Civil Defense said.

The project, to be financed by the federal agency, has been approved by five area civil defense agencies—those of the states of Missouri and Illinois, the East Side communities, the city of St. Louis and St. Louis county.

Phase 2 of the project will include the research and study indicated by findings of the phase 1 survey, together with preparation of maps and charts and compilation of statistical data.

The third phase will cover preparation of an operational plan for the metropolitan target area and each reception area outstate, and development of adequate educational and public information materials.

Phase 4 will consist of actual tests of the plan, followed by recommendations for modifications as indicated. Completion of all four phases will require an estimated year and a half.

Supervision of the project will be under a newly created St. Louis Evacuation Area Survival Planning Committee, composed of civil defense directors of the five area agencies involved and headed by St. Louis Civil Defense Director F. P. Hardaway.

$200,000 GOAL ESTABLISHED IN EASTER SEAL CAMPAIGN

A total of $200,000 will be sought in the Easter Seal Campaign of the St. Louis Society for Crippled Children, Charles E. Claggett, chairman of the drive, announced yesterday.

The campaign is conducted by mail and funds are used to provide follow-up care, appliances and services to physically handicapped children afflicted with various types of crippling conditions, Claggett said.

The seals will be mailed to homes in the area about March 10. The society is not a member of the United Fund.

BRITAIN ARMING ITS PLANES WITH AIR-TO-AIR MISSILES

LONDON, Feb. 11 (UP) — Britain is arming its Royal Air Force planes with their first sile that is rocket-propelled. It air-to-air guided missiles, the Ministry of Supply announced today.

The ministry announced development of a "fireflash" missile in large production for firing from American fighters at enemy planes in the air.

The United States Air Force already has its own radar-guided "Falcon" missile that streaks at supersonic speed toward a target aircraft and explodes even if it is a near miss because it has a proximity fuse.

Helfrich Met Gangsters Here Briefly Last July

Mexico City. He had an interest in an automobile agency at Guadalajara, about 300 miles northwest of Mexico City, and was acquainted with a number of well-known American expatriates, including William O'Dwyer, former Ambassador to Mexico and Mayor of New York City.

The motor launches were operated as the Helfrich Fishing Co.

Helfrich's former wife, attractive 31-year-old Mrs. Alma Helfrich, still lives in Acapulco. They have been divorced twice, the second time last November.

Helfrich was closely associated with leaders of the East St. Louis political machine in the 1930s and 1940s. His companies—he operated three coal firms and a hauling company—held a virtual monopoly at one time on supplying coal to city and state agencies on the East Side.

A stubborn man who became furious when he was crossed, Helfrich was involved in many controversies over charges he furnished coal below contract specifications to East St. Louis schools and relief clients.

In 1943 he obtained a 10 per cent interest in the Hyde Park Club, which ran wide open and returned rich profits to its operators until Illinois state police closed it in 1950.

The 10 per cent interest was held by Helfrich from 1943 through the first six months of 1945. His interest was then reduced to 7 per cent and he no longer was connected with the casino after 1946.

Capone Syndicate Move.

The 1945 reduction in Helfrich's interest came at the same time the Chicago Capone syndicate muscled into the Hyde Park operation. There was a considerable reshuffling of partners after the gangsters entered the picture. Helfrich was believed to be sharing his cut with East Side politicians.

Internal revenue agents began checking into Helfrich's financial affairs after World War II. They became curious about reports Helfrich made a number of trips to Paris, Tokyo and other world centers. Reasons for these trips were never disclosed.

A few days before the Government filed $401,994 in tax liens against him in August, 1951, Helfrich cashed securities and checks totaling $78,107, sold his personal belongings, and vacated his apartment at 8301 Delmar boulevard, University City.

Helfrich also sold the apartment building in which he lived. It was a fashionable four-family building featuring a swimming pool. The property brought $80,000 at a quick sale, Internal Revenue agents said.

The Government tried unsuccessfully to bring Helfrich back from Mexico to face trial on a 13-count indictment charging the income tax evasion. The indictment charged he failed to record income in the books of his four companies and that he falsified his checking account records and income tax returns.

The indictment was based entirely on income derived from the businesses and did not include any profits from his gambling venture. The charge covered the years 1946 through 1949. He expanded his coal business in 1946, using all his resources to find sources of supply during the coal mine strikes. He even furnished fuel to railroads.

His divorced wife, the former Alma Walton of East St. Louis, was questioned extensively on several occasions by tax agents. Some of her personal belongings, including a short mink coat, luggage, dishes and silverware, were seized and sold for less than $2000 by the Internal Revenue Service last spring.

Questioned by Tax Men.

At the time the personal belongings were seized, Mrs. Helfrich had returned to St. Louis from Mexico and was staying at the Park Plaza Hotel. She was questioned by tax agents then and later was a witness before the federal grand jury at Danville and in the United States tax court in St. Louis.

She testified at a tax court hearing in January 1955 that she did not sign a joint income tax return on which the Government was seeking $189,364 in taxes, interest and penalties. The court ruled later she was not a party to the return.

In December 1951, Helfrich's coal hauling equipment and other business property in East St. Louis was sold for $27,826 at an auction held by the Internal Revenue Service.

Helfrich was divorced twice from each of his two wives. His first wife divorced him in 1928, remarried him in 1929 and got a second divorce in 1944, on the ground of desertion. They had a daughter, now about 25 years old.

The second Mrs. Helfrich was married to Robert Ritter of East St. Louis early in World War II. This marriage ended in divorce shortly after the war. She was married to Helfrich in Arkansas in 1947 and obtained an uncontested divorce at Juarez, Mexico, in November 1951 on the ground of incompatibility, then remarried Helfrich later.

In the 1940s Helfrich owned two airplanes, a land plane which he kept at Parks Metropolitan Airport and an amphibious plane based at International Falls, Minn. He used the amphibious plane frequently to fly to his lodge near Lake of the Woods in Canada.

Helfrich's body was sent to Mexico City last night for shipment to East St. Louis where he will be buried.

New Peiping Envoy to Korea.

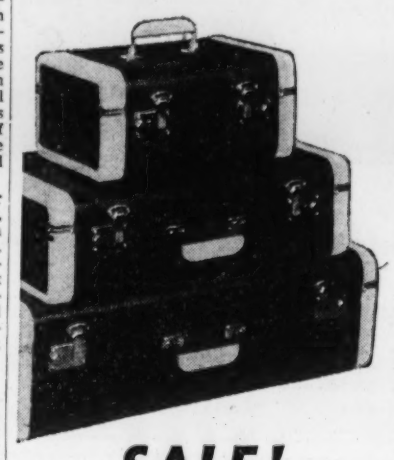

TOKYO, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Peiping radio said today Communist China's Mao Tse-tung had named Chiao Tsao-kuang ambassador to North Korea. The broadcast said Mao "relieved" former Ambassador Pan Tzu-li. It gave no reason.

Art Institute Head Discounts Uproar on Admitting Modernists

Malcolm Cowley Doubts Acceptance of 4 Expressionistic Painters Means Revolutionary Change.

By EDWARD A. HARRIS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PALO ALTO, Calif., Feb. 11—Malcolm Cowley, noted author, critic and president of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, has no fears the institute will be led astray or torn asunder by the admission of a group of modernist painters.

A visiting lecturer in literature at Stanford University here, Cowley was unable to attend the annual dinner meeting of the Institute in New York where the membership was informed of the results of a secret new membership ballot, but he acknowledged that considerable controversy arose over the issue.

The traditional artists in the Institute, or at least a substantial number of them, had misgivings about the admission into their midst of abstractionists like Stuart Davis, who once nailed an eggbeater, a rubber glove and an electric fan to a table and painted them scores of times.

Other Modernists Admitted.

In addition to Davis, the group of seven artists elected this year included modernists Jack Levine, Mark Tobey and Ben Shahn, the largest number of modernists ever admitted to membership in the Institute in one year. In the art world this was a momentous development, possibly signifying a trend or revolutionary turn toward expressionism and abstraction, but Cowley does not think so.

"The election of these artists," he explained to the Post-Dispatch, "was based upon the tested achievement of each individual. It doesn't indicate a revolution or a new policy, and in the elections next year you may even see different results."

But a fight there was, at least in private. "Some of the senior members of the Institute were opposed to the election of any abstractionists," said Cowley, who spoke only reluctantly of the controversy.

Old Controversy.

"They had no particular animus toward the abstractionists. There was nothing personal about it. It's an old controversy in the art world. Of course there has been broad disagreement in the art department of the Institute for many years between the more traditional artists and the modernists.

"But this year most of the artists elected were modernists, whereas the modernists had rather hard sledding in years past, when Institute elections came up. In fact it was only last year that, for the first time in the Institute's history, several modernists were elected to membership. Naturally, then, the more traditional artists were grieved when so many modernists were elected this year."

He conceded that among those who opposed the admissions with alarm were some very prominent artists but declined to identify them. The argument flared up at the annual dinner meeting, but the election of the new artists stood. Cowley did not volunteer how he had voted in the secret ballot. He said:

"I think all the members are fine, including the new group and the ones who opposed their admission. I like them all."

Three Departments.

Cowley, whose home is in Sherman, Conn., pointed out that there are three departments in the Institute — art, literature and music. Total membership is limited to 250. About half the members are in the literature department, about three-eighths in art and the balance in music. Although disagreements in the art department have swirled up from time to time, he said there have not been any serious differences in the department of literature, of which he is a member, for the last 15 or 20 years.

Thus modern poets and new school writers admitted to the Institute have not met with resistance from the more traditional poets and writers.

Cowley went on to explain that the secret ballots are sent to the entire membership annually. In the first, or qualifying ballot the members of each of the three departments nominate candidates for election. Based on the support given each candidate, the Institute qualifies two more names than the number actually to be selected to fill vacancies; thus this year nine artists were "qualified" and seven chosen in the second election balloting.

Election Called Democratic.

The election this time of a majority bloc of modernists thus reflected the sentiment and wishes of a majority of the entire Institute membership. "That's democratic," observed Cowley, "and that's the way it should be done—by secret vote."

Davis, 61 years old, started but as a disciple of Robert Henri, who founded the so-called "ashcan school" of art. He first felt the impact of abstractionism in 1913 at an exhibition of modern European art in this country. It was in 1927 that he nailed the eggbeater, rubber glove and electric fan to a table and painted nothing else for a whole year. One of the results, entitled "Eggbeater No. 3," has been acclaimed by abstractionists.

Tobey, 63, started his career by copying magazine covers, took up teaching art, went to China in 1934 and became interested in the various manifestations of calligraphy as art forms. He started "white writing," which is not writing as such but a distortion of calligraphic symbols that has been highly praised by some art critics and denounced by others.

Levine, 41, is regarded as an expressionist who deals more with the content of a subject he paints than most abstractionists; he also tends at times to satirize and to dwell more on the human interest side of a given subject. He has been exhibited at Jeu de Paume, Paris; the Carnegie International exhibitions three times, and at the Metropolitan Museum (Artists for Victory) in New York. Shahn, probably the most famous of the four, is a modernist but not an abstractionist, leaning more toward expressionism.

61 ON COUNTRY DAY TOUR

A total of 61 students of St. Louis Country Day School are participating in that institution's third annual educational tour, which began yesterday.

The group was flown to Chicago for a three-day tour of the Museum of Science and Industry, Adler Planetarium, the Museum of Natural History, Shedd Aquarium, the Chicago Board of Trade and the stockyards.

5 Syrian Bedouins Killed.

DAMASCUS, Feb. 11 (AP)—Five Syrian bedouins were killed and several wounded in an intertribal fight yesterday near the Turkish border, Interior Minister Ali Buzo announced today. He said gendarmes rushed to the area, stopped the 30-minute battle, made several arrests and confiscated arms.

REUTHER MAY MAKE GOOD WILL VISIT TO INDIA

Labor Leader Would Try to Counteract Anti-American Effects of Tour by Russians.

MIAMI BEACH, Feb. 11—Walter P. Reuther is considering a good-will visit to India next month. He got the blessings of the merged labor movement this week for the project.

The visit by the president of the United Automobile Workers would be designed to counteract the anti-American effects of the Indian tour made this winter by Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin of the Soviet Union and Nikita S. Khrushchev, head of the Soviet Communist party.

The invitation to visit India came to Reuther from the Indian National Trade Union Congress and was indorsed by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru. The State Department, through Ambassador John Sherman Cooper, has urged acceptance.

Reuther told leaders of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations at a private meeting here last Thursday that he was favorably inclined toward making the trip. He said he hoped he could give the Indians an affirmative idea of what the United States stood for in world affairs.

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, and other members of its high command made it clear they felt Reuther, a vice president of the merged group, should go. The atuo union chief said he would make a final decision after returning to Detroit and studying his union calendar.

AFL-CIO FOR U. N. MIDEAST AGENCY

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 11—Establishment of a permanent commission of five by the United Nations for preservation of peace in the Middle East was urged today by the AFL-CIO executive council which stated that the situation in that area had deterioriated in the last two months.

The proposed commission would be composed of small neutral nations not having a direct interest in that area. It would be empowered to survey national defense needs of each country and recommend the military establishment required for its national security. It also would inspect periodically these establishments with a view to assuring "their continued defensive character."

Arms to Egypt Cited.

"In the few months since the AFL-CIO constitutional convention adopted its policy on Israel on Dec. 7, 1955," the council said, "the situation in the Middle East has deteriorated because of the continued shipment of arms to Egypt.

"This deterioration is the result of the Soviet imperialist drive to exploit Arab-Israel friction and of the Communist policy in the Middle East and Africa. The free world must thwart this immediate threat to peace by at once supplying Israel with the defensive weapons it needs to offset the increased offensive strength of any possible aggressor."

Five principles should guide the United Nations in creating a commission, the council stated. They are mutual respect for territorial integrity and sovereignty, non-aggression, non-interference in internal affairs, and equality and peaceful relations.

U. N. Sanctions Urged.

The council called also for U.N. sanctions, by decision of the Security Council, in event of aggression or violations of the existing truce. It urged that the U.N. sponsor a conference of representatives of Middle East governments to facilitate resolving of their disputes and difficulties.

"Issues which this conference fails to resolve," it was suggested, "should be referred to the U.N. general assembly for further consideration and action.

"The U.N. should set up an initial fund of $500,000,000 to be expended for solution of the Arab refugee problem. Israel should contribute a substantial part of this fund, the remainder being supplied by other governments in order to eliminate this source of tension."

The AFL-CIO executive council asserted that appropriate

FIRE RUINS MOST OF MOLINE SCHOOL

16 Classrooms Destroyed —Flames Rage for 4 Hours.

Fire of undetermined origin yesterday destroyed most of the 18-room Moline elementary school, 1860 Chambers road in north St. Louis county.

Firemen from five communities battled the blaze for more than four hours and prevented it from spreading to an adjacent auditorium-lunchroom portion and a temporary two-room structure in the rear.

The fire destroyed 16 of the 18 classrooms in the one-story brick building. Eight rooms were in a 30-year-old portion and eight were in a part built 12 years ago.

The roof collapsed, sending flaming debris through the floor into the basement, where some of the classrooms were. No persons were in the school when the fire began shortly after 6 a.m., it was reported.

Superintendent E. M. Lemasters of the Riverview Gardens School District said there would be no classes for the 700 pupils for at least a week. Arrangements for the students to attend other schools will be announced later, he said.

Lemasters said he would have no immediate estimate of damage from the fire, which was fought by members of the Moline, Ferguson, Jennings, Riverview and Black Jack fire departments.

The superintendent said the school's 21 teachers would meet tomorrow to discuss plans for placing the students in other schools.

He added that he had received offers from two churches in the area for temporary use of their facilities. They are St. Sebastian Catholic Church, whose pastor offered to give up parochial school space for a half-day daily, and Northminster United Presbyterian Church, Lemasters said.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD GROUP

Mrs. Miriam Frew Garwood of New York, a consultant for the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, will be here Tuesday to discuss enlargement of the St. Louis Planned Parenthood Association's service to married persons.

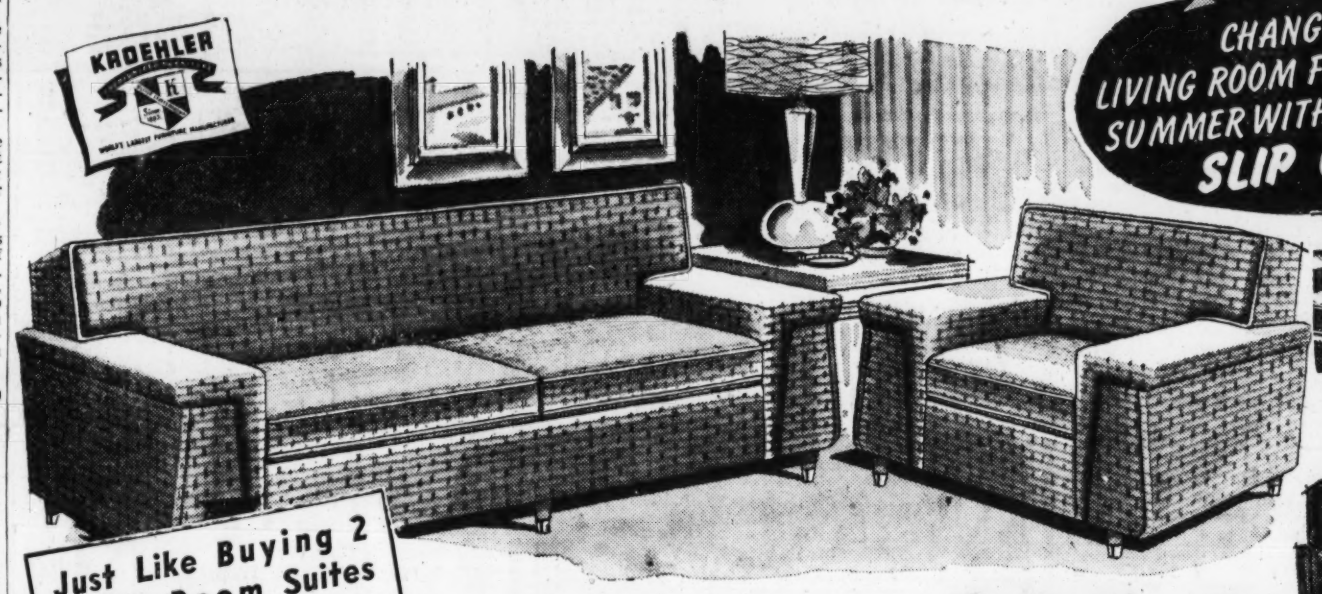

Beginning Wednesday, Mrs. Garwood will begin a two-week study of ways to establish new affiliates of the organization at Cape Girardeau, Caruthersville and Poplar Bluff, in southeast Missouri.

RIVERFRONT FUND PLEA TO BE TAKEN TO WASHINGTON

City Delegation to Meet With U.S. Officials Thursday to Press for $5,000,000.

City officials and representatives of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Association will meet with Government officials in Washington Thursday in an effort to get Congress to appropriate the $5,000,000 authorized last year for the riverfront memorial.

William W. Crowdus, president of the association, announced a meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday in the office of the Secretary of the Interior with Under Secretary Clarence Davis, Conrad Wirth, director of the National Park Service, and United States Senator Alben M. Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky, chairman of the United States Territorial Expansion Memorial Commission, which was established to foster development of the riverfront memorial.

Two Who Will Attend.

Representatives of the local association who will attend the meeting are Claude I. Bakewell, attorney and former United States Representative, and Morton D. May, president of May Department Stores Co.

They are members of a special three-man committee named by the executive committee of the local association to confer with Government officials. Crowdus is the third member, but will be unable to attend the meeting.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker and City Counselor Samuel H. Liberman, who will be in Washington Wednesday to attend a Senate hearing on airline companies' applications to serve St. Louis, readily agreed to stay over and attend the Thursday meeting.

Others who will participate in the conference are: Former Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis; Senators Stuart Symington and Thomas C. Hennings Jr.; Representatives Frank M. Karsten, Thomas B. Curtis and Mrs. Leonor Sullivan, and Ronald J. Foulis, a former St. Louisan now living in Washington and vice president of the local association.

The executive committee of the local association, Crowdus said, believes that the National Park Service erred when it asked Congress to allocate only $150,000 for the memorial in a supplemental appropriation request.

"We feel we are entitled to something more than a token after waiting more than 20 years for a start on developing the memorial," he said.

St. Louis voters in 1935 approved a $7,500,000 bond issue as the city's share of the $30,000,000 memorial, relying on a promise that the Federal Government would provide matching funds on a 4-to-1 basis.

Although Congress failed to provide the matching funds, the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt made available $6,750,000 in emergency relief funds, by executive order. The 40-block site on the riverfront was purchased and cleared with these funds and $2,250,000 of the city bond issue funds.

CITY HALL, POLICE COURTS TO BE CLOSED TOMORROW

City Hall and the city's two police courts will close tomorrow in observance of Lincoln's birthday. Offices at the County Court House at Clayton also will be closed except for the circuit and magistrate courts, the circuit clerk's office and the prosecuting attorney's office.

St. Louis and Washington universities will have classes as will public and parochial schools in the city and county. Most banks will remain open. Mail deliveries will be made as usual and the main Post Office as well as branch offices will be open.

The Federal and Civil Courts buildings will be open and in the Municipal Courts building the circuit courts will continue in session and the circuit attorney's office and prosecuting attorney's office will be open.

TODAY IS NEW YEAR'S DAY OF YEAR 4654 FOR CHINESE

Today is New Year's day according to Chinese calculations, and some 300 St. Louisans of Chinese extraction were wishing each other best wishes for a happy and properous 4654.

Custom calls for a somewhat quieter observance than the Occidental kind, with exchange of greeting cards and baskets of fruit during New Year's day calls.

The Chinese year just ended was longer than usual, having started Jan. 24 of 1955. The year is based on solar and lunar calculations and New Year's can fall on any day between Jan. 21 and Feb. 19. In 1957 it will be on Jan. 31.

SEARS CONTRIBUTES STOCK TO WASHINGTON U. FUND

Shares of common stock of Sears, Roebuck & Co. worth $24,000 have been given to Washington University's Second Century Development Fund by the company, it was announced yesterday.

Entirely unrestricted as to the purpose for which it may be used, the gift was presented to Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley by Russel L. Savage, group manager for the company.

Company officials said the gift was a recognition by the company of the university's contribution to the continuing welfare of the St. Louis community.

U.S. DELAYS ORDER BARRING DYE FOR FLORIDA ORANGES

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 — Oranges are apparently going to remain orange—for another three years, at least.

At a House interstate and commerce subcommittee hearing yesterday, Florida citrus industry witnesses and the chairman of the Food and Drug Administration agreed that it would be all right to keep on dyeing oranges for a while.

Oranges, particularly in Florida and Texas, get ripe inside before they get ripe-looking on the outside. Most people refuse to believe that an orange that looks green can actually be ready to eat. Growers and shippers have been using artificial coloring for 30 years or more.

Nobody complained until last fall, when the FDA decided that the coal-tar dye might be poisonous. They had the Secretary of Agriculture issue an order that the dye would not be certified for use on oranges after Feb. 15.

Representative James A. Haley (Dem.), Florida, introduced a bill to rescind the order and permit continued use of the dye. Yesterday George P. Larrick, Food and Drug Commissioner told the committee the FDA had reconsidered, and would permit the use of the dye to continue for another three years. In that time food and drug scientists will conduct further tests.

MILK PRICE HERE INCREASES TWO CENTS OVER DECEMBER

Milk producers in the St. Louis market area received an average price of $4.45 per hundredweight for 3.5 per cent milk during January, Fred L. Shipley, market administrator, announced yesterday. The price represented a 2-cent increase over December and a 32-cent increase over January 1955.

Daily sales in the Class I category (fluid milk, cream, skim milk, buttermilk and flavored milk drinks) decreased 3.03 per cent during the month of January as compared to December.

There were 4016 producers delivering milk to the market in January, a decrease of 80 from the previous month, and 415 less than were supply the market in January 1955.

'KISMET' PLANNED AT MUNICIPAL OPERA

Musical Slated to Be Given as Closing Two-Week Production.

Negotiations for the first St. Louis presentation of the Broadway musical hit, "Kismet," have been virtually completed, the Municipal Theater Association announced yesterday.

The musical would be presented as the closing two-week production for the Municipal Opera season this summer. "Kismet" closed on Broadway last April, after a run of 583 performances in almost 17 months.

A touring company has been giving the show, but booking difficulties prevented its appearance here.

Three songs from "Kismet" —"Strangers in Paradise," "This Is My Beloved," and "Baubles, Bangles and Beads" —became hit tunes. The musical, based on an Arabian Nights theme, tells the story of a poet-beggar who rose from poverty to the rank of Emir within 24 hours.

Applications for season tickets to the Municipal Opera are still being accepted at the association's office in the Arcade building from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

PRESIDENT NAMES AID FOR AVIATION STUDY

Edward P. Curtis to Direct Survey of Needs for Facilities.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (AP) —President Eisenhower today named Edward P. Curtis of Rochester, N. Y., a special presidential assistant to direct a long-range study of the nation's requirements for aviation facilities.

Emphasis will be on civilian aviation, although Curtis will have the co-operation of the Department of Defense as well as the Commerce Department.

In a letter to Curtis, who is vice president of the Eastman Kodak Co. and a World War I pilot, Mr. Eisenhower said he was asking the study "because the rapid technical advances in aviation and the remarkable growth in the use of air transportation have confronted the nation with serious aviation facilities problems."

He added that modern aircraft "can be operated in the numbers required by the national defense and the civilian economy only if airports, navigation aids, air traffic control devices and communications systems are suitable for their needs."

"Moreover," the President said, "anticipated further increases in aircraft, the introduction of jet propulsion for civil as well as military aircraft, the advances being made in vertical flight, and the greater use of higher altitudes, all presage much heavier future demands upon our facilities for navigation and traffic control."

The President authorized Curtis to formulate legislative and other recommendations arising from the study.

The White House said the new staff post would be a full-time job effective March 1. Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said he assumed Curtis will receive a salary, but that this has not yet been worked out.

REORGANIZATION OF CITY MENTAL CARE PROPOSED

Plan to Improve Treatment Calls for State to Take Over Serious Cases.

A plan for reorganization of the city's psychiatric services to improve treatment of the mentally ill at Malcolm Bliss, Homer Phillips and St. Louis Chronic hospitals was announced yesterday.

The plan is contingent on the state promptly taking over care of patients needing intensive and prolonged treatment, explained Dr. Walter E. Hennerich, city hospital commissioner.

All three municipal hospitals are crowded, with a large number of beds occupied by chronic cases awaiting admission to state institutions. Many of these patients have been awaiting transfer for one to five years, Dr. Hennerich stated.

Changes Proposed.

If the state can be persuaded to take such patients without delay, the following changes will be made at the city hospitals:

Malcolm Bliss will be re-established as the one central admitting and diagnostic center for acutely disturbed patients, both white and Negro. As soon as additional nurses and other attendants can be recruited, two wards now vacant at Bliss will be reopened. A separate ward is planned for treatment of acute alcoholism.

A 90-day limit would be placed on the stay of patients at Bliss. With new treatments available in psychiatry today, it is believed most patients will be ready for return to the community in less than three months. Patients requiring long care would be transferred promptly to a state hospital.

Chronic Hospital is to be operated primarily for patients without serious psychiatric disability. Psychiatric consultation will be available there.

Homer Phillips will maintain an in-patient psychiatric service to handle mental problems arising within the hospital, as well as a psychiatric out-patient clinic.

Drafters of Plan.

The reorganization plan was drawn up by Mrs. Edward G. Brungard, director of public welfare, and Dr. Hennerich, in consultation with the city's psychiatrists.

Emphasizing the need for a revised setup, they cited the fact that Malcolm Bliss, despite the growing psychiatric needs of the community, is admitting less than half the number of patients accommodated in 1945.

City facilities are jammed by chronic and custodial patients occupying beds that otherwise would be available for mental patients needing short-term treatment, Dr. Hennerich stated, adding: "The ultimate solution of this problem must be that the state accept its responsibility for the indigent mentally ill patient of St. Louis."

PRACTICAL NURSE COURSE

An accredited one-year course in practical nursing, sponsored by the St. Louis Board of Education, will begin Feb. 20, it was announced yesterday. Katherine Spross, co-ordinator at Hadley Technical High School, is receiving applications.

She said that trained practical nurses are in demand in view of the general shortage in the nursing profession. Positions open to them, after training, include general hospital duty, veterans hospitals, homes for the aged, doctors' offices, industrial plants and private duty.

THESE AMAZING COLOR-TONE SHAMPOOS are not dyes—but rich shampoo plus true certified color!

"My new COLOR-TONE SHAMPOOS are as easy to use as an ordinary shampoo," says cosmetic genius Helena Rubinstein. "But here's the wonderful difference: While you're washing out the dirt, glorious new color is flowing in. The longer you leave the suds on your hair, the more color effect you get.

"After years of research with the doctors at my laboratories, I have perfected these revolutionary shampoos that not only color your hair but also keep it shiny, healthy, and radiantly full of life! COLOR-TONE SHAMPOOS contain temporary certified color—not drastic dyes you can't wash out."

COLOR-TONE SHAMPOO is made for every shade of hair. If yours is a betwixt-and-between type that needs a pick-up, burnish it with a reddish glow, lighten it with golden sparkles or give it deep, warm tones. Change your hair from drab to divine with COLOR-TONE SHAMPOOS! 1.25, double size 2.50.

Neighborhood Improvement To Be Theme of 8 TV Programs

First Discussion to Be on KETC Friday—Sponsored by Citizen's Council.

What can be done to improve the livability of neighborhoods throughout the St. Louis area will be discussed in a series of eight television programs sponsored by the Citizens' Council on Housing and Community Planning.

The first of the half-hour programs will be presented on Station KETC next Friday at 9 p.m. Andrew Brown, a member of the West End Community Conference; Mrs. Frederick Faust, a representative of the Consumers' Council, and the Rev. Carl Siegenthaler, director of Caroline Mission, will take part in the informal discussion, with George Arms, KETC operations manager, acting as moderator.

In homes scattered throughout St. Louis and St. Louis county, listening groups will review the presentation and make suggestions which may be used as the basis for subsequent programs.

"Neighbors Talk" will be the theme of the series of Friday night programs to be presented at two-week intervals. Members of neighborhood councils will be invited to bring up problems of their areas. Some of the programs will be illustrated by slides, charts and films.

Traffic and parking bottlenecks, "the rights and wrongs" of zoning regulations, neighborhood conservation, city planning, urban renewal, slum clearance, public housing, industrial redevelopment—these and many related problems will be discussed not only from the point of view of planning experts but also from the point of view of the average citizen. The public will be invited to present queries and criticisms to the Citizens' Council or to KETC.

A preview of the first program will be a feature of the annual dinner meeting of the council, to be held Tuesday at 6 p.m. at 3646 Washington boulevard.

HALL SAYS MANY DEMOCRATS ARE FOR EISENHOWER

G.O.P. Chairman Draws Parallels Between President's Views and Lincoln's.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 11 (AP)—Leonard W. Hall said tonight that millions of Democrats who voted for President Eisenhower in 1952 "are as eager as any Republican" to have the chance to vote for him again this year.

The Republican national chairman said the Democratic leadership should "lay their cards on the table and meet the challenge that the President's Lincolnesque philosophy of government presents."

"If they do accept this challenge," he declared, "America will be better for it, because we will score a landslide victory that will even overshadow the sweeping success of 1952.

"In fact," he added, "we'll do that whether they do or don't accept the challenge.

Lincoln Day Speech.

Halls speech, at a Lincoln day dinner sponsored by the Illinois Republican state central committee, drew what he called "remarkable parallels between Mr. Eisenhower and Abraham Lincoln.

"Just as Lincoln attracted all shades of political opinion to his cause, so has President Eisenhower won the esteem, the affection and the respect of these Democrats who no longer are happy about the course of events in their own party," he said.

Hall said that Lincoln, like Eisenhower, "owed much of his strength to the fact he was not narrowly partisan in politics."

"I can truthfully testify that President Eisenhower has never to my knowledge decided any important issue on narrow political grounds, but has held steadfastly to his ideal of the Preeidency as representing all the people and not just one party," he asserted.

"That is, of course, because Eisenhower, like Lincoln, is a moderate.

Judged by Achievements.

"He knows that party politicians often forget in the heat and pressure of a campaign, that the American people judge political parties by what those parties achieve for their welfare, dignity and freedom; not by what political leaders promise, still less by what they say about each other."

Hall said the firm position taken by Mr. Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles stopped the fighting in Korea, avoided further entanglement in Asia in 1954, and at Geneva last year "led the whole world away from the threat of atomic annihilation."

"Let me suggest," he went on, "that bringing this country into a foreign war and softness toward predatory world Communism are two subjects on which the present leadership of the Democratic party might well maintain complete and contrite silence."

"Sees What Lincoln Saw."

The Republican party chairman pictured Mr. Eisenhower as seeing "on a world scale, what Lincoln saw in America."

"That's why the Eisenhower foreign policy seeks a just and lasting peace based on the right of all men to live a free life," he said.

Hall said the Democratic party leadership should "rise above the enticements of 'give-em-hell' electioneering and discuss frankly some of our real national problems."

"I have never felt more convinced of the soundness of the Republican position than I do today under the leadership of Dwight D. Eisenhower," he added.

"In a world darkened by Marxist Socialism, the President has the courage and the statesmanship to still hold high against all intrusion the blazing torch of freedom."

MALTA VOTING ON CLOSER TIES WITH ENGLAND

VALLETTA, Malta, Feb. 11 (AP)—The people of Malta voted today in a referendum to decide whether to make this small island colony virtually a part of the United Kingdom.

The voting started with the 300,000 Maltese sharply divided.

The issue threatened to split the long standing alliance between the Roman Catholic Church and the island government, now in the hands of the Labor party of Premier Dom Mintoff. The island is predominantly Catholic.

The voting continues tomorrow and the result is expected to be known by Monday night.

Under Mintoff's plan, Malta would have three seats in the British Parliament.

DEATH OF WELLSTON CHILD LAID TO STRANGULATION

An autopsy in the death of Mary Dwyer, 2½-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dwyer, 1583 Wellston place, Wellston, disclosed the child died of strangulation and suffocation caused by vomiting, the coroner's office in Clayton reported yesterday.

The girl was found dead in bed Friday after being left in the care of her 14-year-old brother. Mrs. Dwyer said she believed the child had swallowed a liquid detergent. Traces of a soapy solution were found in the stomach and throat in the autopsy, it was reported.

BOARD EXPECTED TO PROPOSE RISE IN SCHOOL TAX

Issue Would Go to Voters April 12 — Social Security to Hike Spending.

A St. Louis school tax rate higher than the present levy of $1.15 on each $100 of assessed property valuation is expected to be recommended tomorrow by a special committee of the Board of Education.

The new rate proposal, after it has been approved by the full board, will be submitted for a vote at a special election scheduled for April 12.

If the board asks voters to approve the new rate for one year or for two years, a simple majority will be required. Approval of the levy for a four-year period would require a two-thirds majority. Partly for this reason, the board probably will not propose a four-year tax.

Additional Expenditures.

The board is expected to be forced to ask for a higher tax rate principally because it must make provision for at least $1,700,000 in additional expenditures for the 1956-57 fiscal year.

The largest new item would be the board's share of payments to the federal social security program for board employes. The employes are expected to approve at a special election in March a proposal to obtain social security coverage in addition to their present retirement system.

If the social security plan is approved, the board will have to contribute about $900,000 the first year, of which $387,000 would be retroactive payments for 1955 and about $500,000 on payments for 1956.

Other Increases.

Other increases in expenditures for the next school year will be about $600,000 for the normal pay advances for teachers, and about $200,000 for hiring new teachers to take care of the rising number of pupils and to make some further reduction in the pupil-teacher ratio.

In addition to these costs, there will probably be other increases in school expenses, which have risen steadily for a number of years. The board's budget for the current fiscal year is about $2,000,000 higher than expenditures in 1954-55.

In order to meet a similar cost rise for the coming fiscal year, the board would have to levy a higher tax rate, unless additional revenue could be obtained from other sources.

Since each penny in the tax rate produces about $160,000, it would take a 10-cent levy increase to provide for an addition $1,700,000.

Foundation Program Short.

Another factor in the school tax problem is that the new state education "foundation program" will not be fully financed this year or next, and thus the board's share of state funds will not be as large as had once been hoped.

The special board committee, of which Mrs. Edward M. Harrington is chairman, is expected to announce the proposed tax rate after its meeting tomorrow with an advisory group representing more than 20 civic, political and labor organizations.

Mrs. Harrington said this was probably the first time such a group had met with board members and officials to assist in the final determination of a new tax rate. She emphasized that the group was separate from the citizens' organization which will be formed later to help campaign for the new rate.

THE REV. GEORGE H. MURCH FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW

Funeral services for the Rev. George Herbert Murch, retired Baptist minister, will be tomorrow at 2 p.m. at Third Baptist Church, North Grand and Washington boulevards, with burial in Valhalla Cemetery.

The Rev. Mr. Murch, 86 years old, died Friday night of a heart ailment at Deaconess Hospital where he had been under treatment for the last seven weeks. DEADLINE SET AS MARCH 3 FOR JUDGESHIP APPLICATIONS

Deadline for submission of applications for filling the circuit judgeship left vacant by the retirement of William S. Connor is March 3, the Eighth Circuit Judicial Commission announced yesterday.

The commission will select three nominees from the list of qualified attorneys in whose behalf applications are filed either by the lawyers themselves or other persons. Gov. Phil M. Donnelly will then choose Judge Connor's successor from the panel of nominees.

Written applications should be submitted to Judge Lyon Anderson of the St. Louis Court of Appeals. Other members of the Eighth Circuit Judicial Commission are Albert Miller, Hubert J. Kutz and Victor Jacquemin Jr. Judge Connor, whose term expires Dec. 31, 1958, has retired at half of his $14,000 annual salary because of ill health. He lives at 929 Buena Vista avenue.

GEN. PHILLIPS

Pentagon Would Have Fired Anyone But MacArthur Before Truman Acted

Military Men Believed Far East Commander Piled Blunder Upon Blunder After Inchon Landing in Korea but Hesitated to Relieve Him Because of His Undoubted Ability, Reputation and Political Backing.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Retired)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.

MILITARY judgment supported President Truman when he relieved Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his Far East command April 11, 1951. The dismissal brought a general sigh of relief in the Pentagon where he had long been a problem.

Responsible military officials felt that Gen. MacArthur was not in sympathy with the policies governing the conduct of the Korean war and was trying to thwart them; that he had failed to comply with direct orders concerning policy statements by him, and that he was flouting civilian authority.

Furthermore, it was their opinion that after the great success of the Inchon landing MacArthur had made one military blunder after another leading to the most serious defeat ever suffered by a United States army.

While the officers most concerned were wringing their hands over MacArthur's conduct of operations and they communicated their doubts and suggestions, they nevertheless felt that it was inappropriate to overrule his actions. This was due to the American policy of giving the commander on the spot maximum authority within the scope of general directives on the conduct of war. If the general in the field goes astray, the solution, under this policy, is to relieve him rather than to tell him in detail what to do.

Had the commander in the Far East been anyone but MacArthur, with his great and well-earned prestige, his military record and career and, in addition, his political backing, his relief would have been recommended earlier for purely military reasons.

Attack on Marshall, Bradley.

MacArthur, in his rejoinder last Thursday to ex-President Truman's narrative of the General's relief, asserts that "the two military men, Generals Marshall and Bradley . . . were both personally hostile to me. Gen. Marshall's enmity was an old one but Gen. Bradley's was more recent. It undoubtedly had its origin in my refusal to accept him as my senior ground commander for the invasion of Japan when he was recommended by Gen. Marshall."

Not since the controversies following the Civil war has any such effort been made by one American General to impugn the integrity of another; and the fact is that both Generals Marshall, at time Secretary of Defense, and Bradley, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, twice advised President Truman against relieving MacArthur.

After the military disasters of November and December, 1950, in which our forces barely escaped a Dunkirk without chance of rescue, MacArthur made numerous statements to the press blaming the "privileged sanctuary" in Manchuria and other limitations on his freedom of action for the defeats. Military opinion at that time was that he was trying to exculpate himself from responsibility and place it elsewhere.

Dec. 6, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, by direction of the President, instructed MacArthur that "no speech, press release, or other statement concerning military policy should be released until it received clearance from the department of defense."

March 20 MacArthur informed the enemy that he was prepared to discuss conditions of settlement in Korea and that there was strong feeling that a diplomatic effort should be made before any major forces crossed the thirty-eighth parallel. He was asked for recommendations as to what authority he needed to provide for the security of the U.N. forces and to maintain contact with the enemy.

Unauthorized Announcement.

Four days later, MacArthur informed the enemy that he stood "ready at any time to confer in the field with the commander-in-chief of the enemy forces in an earnest effort to find any military means whereby the realization of the objectives of the United Nations in Korea might be accomplished."

This message was unauthorized, violated the directive of Dec. 6, and ruined the U.N. plan to try for an armistice.

Opinion in official circles in Washington was general that MacArthur had deliberately made his proposal to thwart the U.N. plan. MacArthur made his position plain when he wrote later to Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr., "There is no substitute for victory." Had the U.N. plan been successful it would have ended the conflict without victory.

MacArthur has disclaimed any intention of interfering with the U.N. plan and calls his effort for an armistice a normal exchange between commanders in the field.

Mr. Truman writes that this act, the last of a series, was what determined him to relieve MacArthur.

Friday, April 6, Marshall, Bradley, Dean Acheson and Averell Harriman met with the President and learned that Mr. Truman had made up his mind to relieve MacArthur. Marshall and Bradley urged the President to think it over. Again on Saturday, Marshall and Bradley urged the President to discuss the question with his friends in the Senate before acting.

The President asked for the views of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. These were given to Marshall Sunday afternoon. They were, in brief:

1. That McArthur was not in sympathy with the decision to try to limit the war to Korea;

2. That MacArthur had failed to comply with the directive to clear statements of policy; and

3 That the Joint Chiefs felt that the military must be subjected to control by civilian authority.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff agreed that for these reasons MacArthur should be relieved.

Later that day it was learned that the Mutual Broadcasting Co., the Chicago Tribune outlet, had cleared all channels for 8 a.m. the next morning. Suspecting a leak, Mr. Truman thought MacArthur, knowing what was in the wind, was going to resign and Mr. Truman determined to act first. He directed Marshall to cable MacArthur that he was relieved from his command.

Series of Military Mistakes.

Nothing went right in Korea after the Inchon landing Sept. 15, 1950, until Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway assumed command after the death of Gen. Walton W. Walker. In the Pentagon this was considered as due to a series of military mistakes.

MacArthur had estimated that it would take a month for the forces at Inchon and those fighting at Pusan to make a junction. Instead, they met in a week and enemy resistance disintegrated completely. It is a military axiom that a defeated enemy must be pursued to the limit of endurance to keep the enemy from a chance to reorganize. This would have indicated that Seoul, where substantial North Korean forces remained, be bypassed and the enemy pursued to the north. Instead it took ten days of heavy fighting and serious casualties to capture Seoul and drive the enemy back on his lines of communication. This enabled MacArthur to have Syngman Rhee make a grand entry Sept. 29.

Instead of pursuing the enemy with the Marines and the Seventh Division, which had made the landing, MacArthur withdrew them, the Marines to ships and the Seventh Division by truck to Pusan, where they were loaded on ships, to make another amphibious landing at Wonsan on the east coast. Pursuit was delayed until Walker's Eighth Army could come up from Pusan. It did not get under way until October.

There were serious, but not insuperable, logistic difficulties in pursuit. Many military students believe that had MacArthur pursued immediately, his forces could have reached the Yalu before any Red Chinese had had time to enter Korea. Had this been the case, they further believe—although this can only be speculation—the Red Chinese would not have attempted an invasion and MacArthur would have had his victory.

The second amphibious operation at Wonsan was an anti-climax. By the time the Marines landed there, and the Seventh Division farther north, on Oct. 29, the Korean army had already captured Wonsan and had advanced 50 miles north of it.

Thus for five weeks during the most critical period of the war these two powerful divisions were out of action.

The Pentagon was greatly disturbed at this time that Gen. Walker's Eighth Army operating mostly to the west and Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond's X Corps operating from the east coast, were not under a single command, their movements were not co-ordinated nor were the two forces joined. Almond was MacArthur's chief of staff at the same time he was commanding in Korea. If Almond received orders from Tokyo that he did not like, he had them changed. MacArthur claimed that he was coordinating the actions of the two separate forces.

MacArthur Underrated Reds?

By the end of October, the ROKs had captured Chinese prisoners and Almond had identified them as regulars and members of Chinese army units. Nov. 3, Maj. Gen. Charles A. Willoughby, MacArthur's intelligence chief, had identified eight Chinese armies with a strength of 415,000 men in Manchuria and special units of 3000 men each from three of these armies had been identified in North Korea.

Both Walker's and Almond's forces headed for the border. Nov. 3, north of Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, the Eighth Army, gaily racing for the Yalu and strung out in long lines on the roads, was attacked by Chinese forces estimated at 60,000. The Eighth Army had to pull back for reorganization, but the X Corps continued toward the border.

MacArthur does not appear to have taken the Chinese intervention seriously. He planned a great "compression" offensive to start Nov. 25. Walker felt quite differently. He flew to Tokyo to express his fears about the Chinese, but the offensive started and on the next day 200,000 Chinese attacked the Eighth Army. Two days later the X Corps was attacked in great force. The Eighth Army was driven from north of Pyongyang to 50 miles south of Seoul and the X Corps was forced to evacuate Hungnam at great cost.

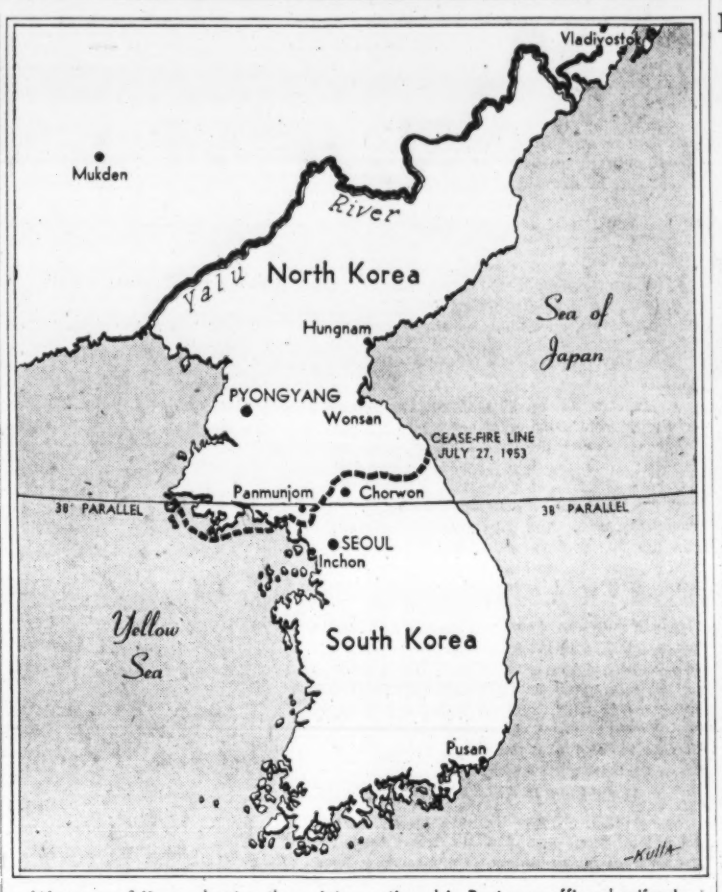

These same forces, united under Gen. Ridgway and inspired by his leadership, turned around and drove the Red Chinese back across the thirty-eighth parallel.

Military students believe that had MacArthur taken the Chinese intervention seriously and united his forces earlier, the great defeat and costly retreats never need have taken place.

The problem of the "privileged sanctuary" in Manchuria was carefully studied by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The Army had almost no anti-aircraft for defense and said that it could not provide any. It was pointed out that the U.N. forces gained much more from freedom from bombardment south of their lines than it could have gained from the small efforts possible north of the Yalu. A single Red bombing raid could have utterly wiped out the port of Pusan and destroyed the United States capacity to bring in supplies.

On the other hand, the Air Force had been unable even to keep cut the two rail lines used by the Chinese in North Korea. Only the last 100 miles south was kept cut for a time and even this effort eventually had to be abandoned. It was considered impossible, if these two lines could not be kept cut, to do any better

Brazil New Testing Ground In the Global Struggle of Communism vs. Free World

Moscow Offering Economic Aid, Washington Carefully Watching as Playboy President With Cabinet of Many Political Hues Prepares to Tackle Underlying Problems of Racing Inflation and Dire Poverty.

By DONALD GRANT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 11.

BEHIND the carnival masks of the Mardi Gras celebration in Brazil lurks a restless spirit of unrest and revolution. The new government headed by a playboy society surgeon, Juscelino Kubitschek, is trying to bring order out of chaos. Not the least difficult of Kubitschek's problems is to prevent Brazil's Communists from taking over the country.

The Kubitschek government came to power only with the tacit consent both of the Communists and of the "former" fascist Green Shirts. This is not the first time in recent history that the extremes of right and left have combined in such a manner, of course, but in Brazil the Communist strength in the combination far outweighs that of the fascists.

Back of the immediate problem of Communism are the basic social facts on which both Communism and Fascism feed. Brazil is a developing rather than an underdeveloped country. It is dangerously easy to assemble statistics showing spectacular economic progress, but there are terrible distortions which perhaps inevitably occur in a rapidly expanding economy. Brazil has severe shortages of power and transportation, but, more importantly, Brazil is a land of contrasts and contradictions in human terms.

The Copacabana district in Rio, for instance, surrounds the famous lush beach flanked by luxury hotels and apartment houses; but Rio, and even the Copacabana district itself, contains some of the worst slums in the world. There are probably more Cadillacs in Rio than there are in St. Louis, but there are also more men, women and children without shoes and without food or medical attention. Outside the cities the poverty is even worse, especially in the north where the condition of plantation workers has been compared to that of the villages in India.

Comparison with India cannot be carried too far, however, as the writer was reminded by a diplomat from India in Rio. "If only India had the natural resources, the land, and the relatively few people on the land—not to mention the remoteness from pressing world political problems—" the Indian said, "we would make of India a land of milk and honey within 10 years or less."

KUBITSCHEK

Problem of Racing Inflation.

Instead of milk and honey, Brazil has racing inflation which is estimated to be increasing prices at the rate close to 25 per cent a year. This has impoverished and embittered the middle class, turning them back toward green-shirted Fascism, which flourished in prewar days, and further pressing upon the workers, turning them increasingly toward Communism.

Yet any attempt to stop inflation is bound to be painful and to lead to political protests. Is the Kubitschek government strong enough to weather such a storm? Few observers really believe it is. The Kubitschek government was described by one Brazilian newspaper editor as "a salad"—a combination of landowners, big business men, pro-United States elements, Fascists, Peronistas and Communists. "It is not digestible," the editor added.

What After Kubitschek?

The question then is what happens after Kubitschek? The Communists have their answer, of course, although it is not at all certain or even likely that they will succeed, as success is measured in Moscow. What is possible is that Communist pressure inside Brazil, combined with clever economic action by Soviet Russia, will produce a government leaning far enough to the left to disrupt the "hemispheric system" which is one of the foundations of the program for the containment of Communism under the leadership of the United States.

Brazil is roughly half of South America both in territory and population. Traditionally, relations between the United States and Brazil have been especially close. Material damage to that relationship, in the opinion of United States foreign policy officials, would be disastrous.

A hint of the coming struggle for control of Brazil was given in an interview which Russian Prime Minister Bulganin gave the magazine Vision, which is circulated widely throughout Latin America. In that interview last month, Bulganin said the Soviet Union might export to Latin America "industrial equipment and machinery, including equipment for the oil industry." Bulganin or his advisers well knew that getting the rich oil deposits in Brazil out of the ground is one of the critical problems of the country. If Russia could contribute materially to a solution of that problem without offending the nationalistic sensibilities of Brazilians, there would be powerful political repercussions throughout Latin America.

The State Department in Washington, while officially ignoring the Bulganin "offer," is reacting by working very hard to counteract pressure both from Russia on the outside and from the Communists inside Brazil. Vice President Nixon's trip to Brazil for the Kubitschek inauguration was a part of the United States response, especially Nixon's announcement of a new $35,000,000 loan for the expansion of Brazil's steel industry.

Goulart's Visit to the U. S.

What may be even more important is the projected trip to the United States of Brazil's Vice President, Joao Goulart in May. Goulart, usually known here by his nickname, Jango, may in fact be the political future in Brazil. In the strange coalition of the Kubitschek government, he represents the political force of labor, the strongest single element which certainly includes Communist-led as well as non-Communist-led groups. Jango is a good-looking young man of 36 with unlimited ambition and a keen political intuition. In Washington he will be given a view of the world before him. Every effort will be made to convince him that his best future lies in an anti-Communist pro-United States direction.

Communism in Brazil is an uncertain quantity. In Brazil the Communist party is illegal. It thus is cloaked in conspiracy. The cloak, to be sure, is a thin one. Luiz Carlos Prestes, the nominal head of the party, is in hiding, but he regularly publishes wordy manifestos in Imprensa Popular which is certainly as much a Communist newspaper as the Daily Worker of New York.

United States sources estimate that the Communists of Brazil can count on 500,000 votes in any election, although there probably are not more than 60,000 members of the party. President Kubitschek polled 3,000,000 votes last fall. A study of the election results indicates that if the Communists had in fact accounted for 500,000 votes, Kubitschek could not have been elected without the Communists.

Perhaps a better gauge of Communist strength is found in expressions of policy

MARQUIS W. CHILDS

'If the Present Now Quarrels With the Past, Then Surely the Future Will Be Lost'

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1956, the Pulitzer Publishing Co.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.

RELATIONS between the United States and the uncommitted nations of Asia have struck a new low. For a variety of reasons, including some egregious blunders, the United States position in this part of the world has been steadily deteriorating. At the same time, the challenge of Soviet Russian Communism is being pressed in a far more insidious form than ever before. The masters of the Kremlin have adopted the technique of economic aid and penetration.

This danger is real, yet in the face of that danger we in the United States continue to be preoccupied with an old quarrel that for at least six years has been a major distraction taking time and energy from the central task of making the United States strong and resolute for world leadership.

The quarrel over who "lost" China, over who is to blame for Korea, is like a smouldering volcano. It flares up anew as it has done in the bitter dispute between former President Truman and Gen. MacArthur. Even when the volcano is not spouting, its brooding presence has a paralyzing effect on American policy.

A man of Gen. MacArthur's stature might well have rested on the dignity of his reputation or on the eventual verdict of history, but his reply Thursday, with the familiar insinuation of treason in high places, is so violent that it is bound to generate more heat and little light. The record as sifted and combed and sifted again shows that on the threat of Communist aggression in Asia no one was wholly right or wholly wrong.

In 1948 and 1949, as the disaster of the Chiang Kai-shek forces in China was reaching its climax, it is true, as Gen. MacArthur says, that the preoccupation in Washington was with Western Europe, but the general himself in March, 1949, was remarkably complacent about the United States status in Asia.

In an authorized interview distributed by the United Press and printed in the New York Times on March 2 of that year, he drew the United States line of defense in the Pacific leaving out both Formosa and Korea. MacArthur, then in command of the United States forces in Asia, said:

"Our defensive disposition against Asiatic aggression used to be based on the West Coast of the American continent. The Pacific was looked upon as the avenue of possible enemy approach.

"Now the Pacific has become an Anglo-Saxon lake and our line of defense runs through the chain of islands fringing the coast of Asia. It starts from the Philippines and continues through the Ryukyu archipelago which includes its main bastion, Okinawa. Then it bends back through Japan and the Aleutian island chain to Alaska.

"Though the advance of the Red armies in China places them on the flank of that position, this does not alter the fact that the only possible adversary on the Asiatic continent does not possess an industrial base near enough to supply an amphibious attacking force.

"War industries in Russia are in the region of the Ural mountains, from which their output, I believe, of weapons and munitions would have to be hauled over 4000 miles of mainly single-track railroad to Vladivostok."

The MacArthur defense perimeter of March, 1949, clearly excluded two areas that have since been called vital to United States security, Formosa and South Korea.

Jan. 12, 1950, Dean Acheson, then Secretary of State, also drew a defense perimeter in an extemporaneous speech at the National Press Club. He took in the same territory as MacArthur did and he also excluded Formosa and Korea. This was six months before the Communist attack on South Korea.

Repeatedly, in the aftermath of that attack and in the years that have followed, Acheson has been accused of inviting the Communists to take over all of Korea, yet MacArthur's own statement could have been considered an even more direct invitation than Acheson's.

Here is a good illustration, in the view of this observer, of the folly of trying to pin on any one individual the blame for the mistakes of the past.

MacArthur, as pro-consul in the Far East, intended that Japan should develop as the Switzerland of Asia. In the interview of March, 1949, he said: "We never intend to use Japan as an ally. All we want her to do is to remain neutral."

The policy so declared has been completely reversed in the past three years under the direction of Secretary of State Dulles. Great pressure has been put on the Japanese to abandon neutralism and pacifism. The goal today is a Japanese defense force capable of resisting attack. The establishment of American air bases on Japan has brought widespread popular resistance including violent demonstrations.

Gen. MacArthur's policy of neutralism for Japan may have been entirely right for the time and phase of the Japanese occupation which he directed. In the light of hindsight and the rise of Red China, it may seem to have been disastrous, but no one has raised a question as to his motives. It has been assumed that he was acting on his best judgment in the light of all the knowledge then available.

It is just here that the long quarrel has had such tragic overtones. No one, perhaps not even Dulles himself, would argue that every move of the Eisenhower Administration in the foreign field has been perfect. In the light of later events, the system of military pacts in the Far East and the Middle East may yet prove to have been a tragic error in that they produced irreconcilable divisions in those areas. Already the question of whether any possible military advantage may have outweighed the political consequences is an open one.

To continue to quarrel over a post mortem is to compound damage already done—to air our divisions to the world, to spread our weaknesses on the record, to lose more time when time is rapidly running out.

In May, 1940, when Britain's fate hung in the balance with Europe overrun, a violent attack developed in the House of Commons against those in power who had failed to keep England strong and ready. In that hour Winston Churchill rose to say:

"If the present now engages in a quarrel with past, then surely the future will be lost."

Those are words that we might have recalled with profit at any time in the past six years.

The present need is for a constructive, creative approach to the problem of winning uncommitted peoples. It is a task that will not wait forever.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Tests to Be Canceled

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

How could any conceivable benefit accruing from another United States Pacific H-bomb test compensate for the devastating loss of prestige in Asia which we would suffer from it?

We have already killed tens of thousands of Asians with the first A-bomb bursts at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and in 1954 we "dusted" Japanese fishermen.

Records of the United Nations Trusteeship Council for June 21, 1955, show the United States representative in the debate on the Pacific Trust Territory as stating that the inhabitants of Rongelap atoll would return to their homes "when the Administration had been advised the island was free from radiation and habitable."

Thus by implication he conceded that 15 months after the March 1, 1954, test at Eniwetok 300 miles away, the atoll was still too "hot" for human habitation. There are about five other atolls within 300 miles of Eniwetok.

When the United States assumed trusteeship over the Marshall, Caroline and Mariana islands, it agreed that the interests of the inhabitants should remain paramount.

How can this be reconciled with the holding of another test which through a "miscalculation" or wind change might easily render other islands uninhabitable or even result in loss of life?

We can avoid gross international irresponsibility only by canceling the tests.

As the Bus Goes By

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

You seem to be the champion of the Negro race in its desegregation battles all over these United States. Why not be consistent in your "ideals" and take up the cause of innocent children who because of their religious beliefs cannot ride in the same busses with public school children?

Remember, it is the parochial and private school that is the greatest menace to Communism in this country. M. J. DOSTAL.

Report From California

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In this column Jan. 29 you printed the letter of Inez Hall of Wood River, Ill., castigating your editorial stands on various issues and telling you what she thinks of your paper.

It is her opinion and she is certainly entitled to it.

My opinion is that she is fortunate in having the Post-Dispatch nearby. I have to send 2000 miles for it so I can get both sides of the story. She would love it out this way. Everything is told one way!

I suggest, with sincerity, that the people in the St. Louis area read the time-honored Post-Dispatch platform.

I have seen the Post-Dispatch support Republican, Democrat or independent policies and I wish, Inez, as one voter to another, that there were a newspaper like it out here.

Consulting the People

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

One complaint frequently voiced about political conventions is that the nominees selected do not necessarily represent the wishes of the voters. One reason, perhaps, is that the voters in most states have no opportunity to voice their wishes.

An impartial poll may well serve to provide the voters with a voice. Certainly, when the poll in New York showed that Stevenson is a 3-to-1 choice over Harriman, that is clear indication that in Harriman's state Stevenson is the popular choice.

Why not a similar poll in this territory? If Eisenhower doesn't run, Republican sympathizers could indicate their preference from among Nixon, Knowland, Jenner, Humphrey, Dulles or Dewey. On the Democratic side there are Stevenson, Kefauver, Harriman and a host of favorite sons including Symington.

Memoirs—and Lessons

In relieving Gen. MacArthur of his command in Korea, President Truman has made the choice which is as right as it was difficult. Mr. Truman has only done what Gen. MacArthur would have done to any subordinate officer who made a practice of ignoring orders from higher authority. The one difference is that Gen. MacArthur would have done it after the first breach. He would not have waited to be goaded to act.

Post-Dispatch, April 11, 1951.

This is what we said nearly five years ago when Harry S. Truman, then President, reluctantly removed Douglas MacArthur from his command in the Far East. The issue was clear then. It still is clear after Gen. MacArthur's bitter and intemperate condemnation of that portion of the former President's memoirs which deal with the MacArthur dismissal.

The one best way to sort out the conflicting accounts is to read them. That is why the Post-Dispatch has published every word of Gen. MacArthur's purported rebuttal as well as the Truman memoirs. We want our readers to be able readily to weigh the evidence and to decide for themselves. The truth is too important to have it shaped by partisans on either Harry Truman's side or Douglas MacArthur's.

We speak of the General's screed against his former Commander-in-Chief as a "purported rebuttal." We do so because Gen. MacArthur, for all his many words, does not rebut. In large part what he does is to raise irrelevancies and attack the motives of those who disagreed with him.

For example, he says that Gen. Marshall, who was then Secretary of Defense, and Gen. Bradley, who was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, "were both personally hostile to me." But he is not content with this ugly generalization. He spells it out. In the case of Gen. Bradley he asserts that the hostility "undoubtedly had its origin in my refusal to accept him as my senior ground commander for the invasion of Japan when he was recommended by Gen. Marshall." Then he goes on to discredit Gen. Bradley's military capacity in Europe in terms of the casualties sustained by the troops in the armies under Gen. Bradley's group command.

The Post-Dispatch's military analyst, retired Brig. Gen. Thomas R. Phillips, reviewing Gen. MacArthur's unrestrained assault on those above him, writes elsewhere in this section that "not since the controversies following the Civil War has any such effort been made by one American general to impugn the integrity of another."

This blast is lamentably unfair to Gen. Marshall and Gen. Bradley, two of the most distinguished of United States soldiers. For the record shows that they twice caused Mr. Truman to delay in dismissing Gen. MacArthur from his command. When they joined in supporting the decision it was for three reasons: first, that Gen. MacArthur was not in sympathy with the policy to limit the war to Korea; second, that he failed to follow the directive to clear statements of policy; and third, that in our government the military must be subject to civilian authority.

These reasons all stand after Gen. MacArthur fires his salvo of smoke shells.

Moreover, as the Phillips commentary shows, there are those who now read the record to say that Gen. MacArthur should have been relieved because of "military mistakes." This particular military opinion is that after the Inchon landing, nothing really went well in Korea until Gen. Ridgway assumed command in the field.

Let us leave that to the military historians. It is enough now to know that Gen. MacArthur can no more be certain that his proposal to carry the war outside Korea would not have started World War III than he could be certain that the Chinese Communists would not enter the war if he pushed the American and other U.N. troops to the Yalu river. He did not believe the warnings from Peiping that the Red Chinese would not stand by. So finally he was confronted with overpowering forces and arms. His explanation is in terms of spy rings and blame for others.

There are two lessons in all this—one for the moment and one for history.

The lesson for history is that military men should be military men. They have no business trying to plan global strategy to fit their notions of what is salvation for the world. They can and should advise, and if the provocation is great enough they ought to resign and say why. But in our system of government they cannot be allowed to make themselves dictators of policy.

The lesson for right now is that the United States cannot afford to debate this issue at length when so much of our planning and effort should be going into ways and means to save Asia from Communist domination. Armed aggression was stopped in Korea—whatever Gen. MacArthur says. Now let the free world find out how to demonstrate to the uncommitted millions of India, Indonesia and elsewhere the difference between serfdom and liberty.

On the Firing Line

We commend to our readers the editorial from the Tuscaloosa (Ala.) News which is reprinted under the cartoon on this page. Tuscaloosa is the home of the University of Alabama. The university in turn was the scene of mob action against Miss Autherine Lucy, a new student. The News deplores this incident in no uncertain terms and opposes the mob spirit. While much of the nation's press has done the same, the difference is that the Tuscaloosa News is next-door neighbor to the mob. This Alabama newspaper has displayed a brand of courage and responsibility which ought to be expected of a free press, but is often the more noticeable relative to the distance from the firing line.

A Must Among Magazines

The tenth anniversary of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists is an occasion which we hail warmly. Editor Eugene Rabinowitch and his associates can look back on a decade of achievement that has been solid and distinguished. They mean to celebrate it by publishing this year "a series of special symposia discussing the changes in society brought about by the spectacular growth of science during these 10 years."

When the Atomic Age broke in 1945, the scientist generally was hardly a political animal. This was especially true of scientists in the fields that make up nuclear physics. But the mushroom cloud over Hiroshima was a galvanizing force for them even more than for all the rest of the world. Deeply moved by a growing sense of their responsibility as citizens in a democratic society, they sought to participate in it as never before. The Bulletin is one of the finest manifestations of that phenomenon. Its first issue appeared on Dec. 15, 1945.

Since then, working in an unfamiliar field, the atomic scientists have done a job that would be a credit to veterans. Their Bulletin has striven ceaselessly to keep the public informed of nuclear facts and, more important still, of what those facts mean. The magazine has spoken out courageously against secrecy and security restrictions which retarded the nuclear program or persecuted scientists. It has been world-minded—significantly, the lead article in the current issue, by Mr. Rabinowitch, is on "International Co-operation of Atomic Scientists." Technically one of its most remarkable accomplishments has been its high degree of readability for laymen.

At 10, the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists has already earned the right to be called one of the most important magazines in today's world.

One Way to Lobby

The special Senate hearing on the $2500 campaign gift to Senator Case is drawing a sketch of the worst kind of lobbying. The investigators have finally found that the cash was smeared with oil.

Surely nobody in this day and age would expect a professional lobbyist to go to a United States Senator and say, "See here, Senator, I'll give you $2500 cash to vote for the natural gas exemption bill." That would be naive, not to mention that it would also be illegal.

This is not what happened when John M. Neff, Nebraska lawyer-lobbyist, donated 25 $100 bills to the North Dakota Senator's campaign fund. Mr. Neff denies any attempt to bribe, and Senator Case voted against the gas bill. What, then, did happen?

The testimony so far shows that in November Mr. Neff went to South Dakota to inquire about Senator Case's position on the gas issue. In December, he exchanged letters on the subject with E. J. Kahler, a friend of the Senator's. In January, Mr. Neff gave Mr. Kahler the $2500, and also visited the Senator's Washington office. Nine days after he received the gift, Mr. Kahler told Senator Case about it, though Kahler was hard put to explain the delay. The Senator was "flabbergasted." Eight days later, Senator Case revealed the story to the Senate.

Buried in this neat chronology are three important points:

1. Mr. Neff was an oil lobbyist. He was paid by the Superior Oil Co. for his trip to Mr. Case's home state, and the fact that he was "reimbursed" after the trip instead of being paid beforehand does not make any difference.

2. Mr. Neff did contribute $2500 to the Case campaign fund. And he concedes now that he got the money from an attorney for Superior Oil Co., and "understands" it came from Howard Keck, described as president of Superior Oil of California.

3. Mr. Neff did show an unusual, or at least a professional, interest in the Senator's stand on the gas bill. All involved knew of Neff's interest.

Call this operation a campaign gift, call it a display of a citizen's admiration for a Senator, call it legal or call it anything at all but bribery. It goes to the root of an evil in public life.

Was It All They Asked?

In asking the Army Engineers whether it is true that they requested no more than the $101,000 which the Budget Bureau recommended for St. Louis flood control this year, Senator Symington is only seeking what should be public knowledge. Missouri's junior Senator says his office has received a report to that effect and he has requested the facts from Maj. Gen. E. C. Itschner, assistant chief of engineers.

The Engineers told Congress last fall that $600,000 could be put to good use this year. If little more than a sixth that amount were requested, it would seem to indicate something less than a burning enthusiasm for getting on with the job.

In either event Maj. Gen. Itschner will surely want the true facts known about where his agency stands.

Class in Caves

The class in elementary speleology will come to order. The textbook is "Celebrated American Caves," edited by Charles E. Mohr and Howard N. Sloane, published by the Rutgers University Press and sponsored by the National Speleological Society. We are pleased to report that we have read the assignment for today, pages 269-289, Ozark Cave Life, and stand ready to be examined on it.

In the first place Missouri is one of the most heavily caved states. We have about 1000 caverns in our deep Ozark bed of limestone. Only Kentucky with approximately 2000, Tennessee with 1500 and Virginia with 1200 have more. Arkansas ranks up pretty well with 300. New York can boast but 100 and our undercaved neighbors, Kansas and Illinois, must be content with only 30 and 25, respectively. California may be passing Missouri up in some ways but it will be a snowy day in August when California's 150 caves can overtake our cool 1000.

But we must not make the mistake of seeming to emphasize figures and so to suggest that Missouri's caves are merely like Methuselah's years—great in numbers. Mr. Mohr, who writes the chapter on Missouri caves, makes it very clear that our caverns are of particular fascination for speleologists. This is because in addition to their unusual minerals, Missouri caves have been found in recent years to contain "new strange denizens of underground rivers and lakes." And what are these new strange denizens? Nothing less than very rare sightless salamanders, blindfish, and other odd manifestations of underground animal life that your true speleologist would give his eyeteeth to meet face to face in some deep-down slimy black pool.

Missourians will be gratified to know that Mr. Mohr, who has descended into caves a thousand times from Canada to Mexico, rates the Ozarks as "this rich but still only partly known portion of our American underworld." All this is most impressive, yet we harbor one lingering doubt about Mr. Mohr. How can the country's leading speleologist, perhaps the hemisphere's and maybe even the world's, live in Connecticut, a state with only a measly 10 caves?

Why the Country Needs Reserves

In these days when hydrogen bombs are a reality and intercontinental ballistic missiles are looming on the horizon it is a relief to hear Army Secretary Brucker say that atomic blitzes and pushbutton warfare are "dangerous myths." There have been too many predictions of sudden holocausts.

Although Secretary Brucker disagreed in his speech before the National Press Club with retired Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's charges that Army cuts were made for budgetary and political reasons, he did stress the need for ground soldiers whether in a brushfire war or nuclear one. In doing this he said that the Army's "highly mobile force of 1,034,500 men" afforded "a proper margin of safety."

But he also added that this standing Army must be backed by "a very substantial reserve force." That is where the rub comes. The Army Reserves, despite the recruiting program that began last summer, are still a far cry from being anything like "substantial." So, by Secretary Brucker's own comment on the Reserves, this nation does not have the Army it should have if it is to be properly prepared.

A Visit to Vachel Lindsay's Grave

The great Illinois poet who wrote "Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight," "The Eagle That Is Forgotten (John P. Altgeld)" and, best known, "The Congo," was buried 25 years ago in Oak Ridge Cemetery in Springfield, Ill., his birthplace. His grave is near that of Lincoln. George C. Stuart, who wrote the tribute which is printed here for the first time, is minister of the First Christian Church of Bloomington, Ill.

There is no image here,
No pattern for the mind to take and hold
Against a time of pain.
There is no ritual, strict and familiar,
That takes away the stare of grief.
There is only a stone,
Captured in a wood of stones, upright and brief,
That holds the eye in line with the great shaft
Where the Lincolns lie.
There is no sound,
Only the loneliness of planned betrayal of privacy
That cemeteries know,
And a great bell swinging,
Swinging without a sound.

When young his footsteps found their pattern on this hill,
Brought it into town,
Into every town in the U.S.A.,
Singing with something in his blood that flowed with rivers,
Something in the mind that sought the edge of earth,
Something in the soul that burst the soil
And sheltered it with leaf.
Something within him leaned against the future
Like a mule against a wagon-tongue.
He plowed the earth with song,
Planted the prairie with his restless word,
And walked and walked until the stars
Led him to the hill again.

What he had kindred with this land
Was oak and rock and leaf,
Tall elms and maples burning in the sun
And the wild spinning of the rain.
He was bell-tone measured to the Sangamon.

Now winter has its way with him.
Violence goeth where it wills
Leaving its images strewn in wrecked valleys.
Only gentleness is dead and the iron deed rules:
There is no god but winter in the mind
And silence and a name returning into stone
And a great bell swinging, wildly hoping,
Clamoring for sound.

Peace at What Price

From the Tuscaloosa (Ala.) News

When mobs start imposing their frenzied will on universities, we have a bad situation.

But that is what has happened here at the University of Alabama. And it is a development over which the University of Alabama, the people of this state, and the community of Tuscaloosa should be deeply ashamed—and more than a little afraid.

Our Government's authority springs from the will of the people. But their wishes, if we are to be guided by democratic processes, must be expressed by ballot at the polls, by action in the legislative halls, and finally by interpretation from the bench. No intelligent expression ever has come from a crazed mob, and it never will.

And make no mistake. There was a mob, in the worst sense, at the University of Alabama Monday.

Every person who witnessed the events there with comparative detachment speaks of the tragic nearness with which our great university came to being associated with a murder—yes, we said murder.

And "if they could have gotten their hands on her, they would have killed her," that was the considered judgment, often expressed, of many who watched the action without participating in it.

The target was Autherine Lucy. Her "crimes"? She was born black, and she was moving against Southern custom and tradition—but with the law, right on up to the United States Supreme Court, on her side.

What does it mean today at the University of Alabama, and here in Tuscaloosa, to have the law on your side?

The answer has to be: Nothing—that is, if a mob disagrees with you and the courts.

As matters now stand, the university administration and trustees have knuckled under to the pressures and desires of a mob. What is to keep the same mob, if uncontrolled again, from taking over in any other field where it decides to impose its wishes? Apparently, nothing.

What is the answer to a mob? We think that is clear. It lies in firm, decisive action. It lies in the use of whatever force is necessary to restrain and subdue anyone who is violating the law.

Not a single university student has been arrested on the campus and that is no indictment against the men in uniform, but against higher levels which failed to give them clean cut authority to go along with responsibility.

What has happened here is far more important than whether a Negro girl is admitted to the university. We have a breakdown of law and order, and abject surrender to what is expedient rather than a courageous stand for what is right.

Yes, there's peace on the university campus this morning. But what a price has been paid for it.

Hell's Canyon Over There

From The Pleasant Hill (Mo.) Times.

We read that the United States is taking a "most grave view" of Russia's economic and military penetration of the Mediterranean area. Among other things, the Soviet has offered to help build a high dam on the Nile. Why that should be a worry puzzles us. Couldn't Secretary McKay just issue a license to build three low ones instead?

The TRUMAN MEMOIRS

Mr. Truman Fires Gen. MacArthur for Challenging National Policy...Advisers Unanimous in Agreement.

By HARRY S. TRUMAN
Thirty-third President of the United States.
NINETEENTH ARTICLE, VOLUME II.

GENERAL MacARTHUR repeatedly advised the Joint Chiefs that in his opinion the war should be expanded by attacks on air-fields in Manchuria, by a blockade of the China coast, and by the utilization of the Formosa Chinese.

In a message on December 29th, for instance, after restating his views, he said that he knew that this course of action had been rejected because of fears that it might provoke China into all-out war with us. In his opinion, however, this was not pertinent, for he thought that nothing could aggravate the situation vis-a-vis China. What the Russians might do, nobody could tell. If he received the four additional divisions he asked for for Japan, however, he would be able to slow them up if they attempted to attack there.

It was also his opinion that if we did not intend to expand the war, the only other choice would be to contract our position in Korea gradually until we were reduced to the Pusan beachhead and then evacuate, despite the fact that this would have a poor effect on Asian morale.

On January 9th, the Joint Chiefs of Staff informed General MacArthur, with my approval, that the retaliatory measures which he had suggested were being given consideration in Washington. He was further assured that I appreciated fully the extent to which Chinese Communist entry into Korea and now into South Korea had changed the situation. However, he was advised that there were other considerations which required us to maintain our present policy in Korea, and he was therefore directed to defend successive positions, inflicting as much damage on the enemy as possible. Primary consideration, however, should be given to the safety of his troops and to his basic mission of protecting Japan. If it should become evident, in his judgment, that evacuation was essential to avoid severe losses of men and materiel, then he was to withdraw to Japan.

MacArthur Asks for Clarification.

General MacArthur responded to this directive the following day with a request for clarification. He stated that his command was of insufficient strength to hold a position in Korea and simultaneously to protect Japan against external assault. He further asserted that if he had to continue to operate under the limitations and with the strength that he had been given, the military position of his command in Korea would eventually become untenable. He pointed out that the United Nations troops were tired as a result of a long and difficult campaign, that they were he asserted, embittered by unwarranted criticism, and that their morale was sinking rapidly. In his opinion, unless there were overriding considerations, his command should be withdrawn from the Korean peninsula just as rapidly as was tactically feasible.

On the other hand, he said, if political reasons—(Mr. Truman's note—"Political," in its use in these discussions refers to world affairs and not to the home front)—demanded that we hold a position in Korea, then we ought to accept the military consequences which he predicted would be heavy casualties and a grave hazard to the security of Japan.

When General Marshall brought me this message from MacArthur, I was deeply disturbed. The Far East commander was, in effect, reporting that the course of action decided upon by the National Security Council and by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and approved by me was not feasible. He was saying that we would be driven off the peninsula or, at the very least, suffer terrible losses. Events were to prove that he was wrong, but it was the proper procedure for him to voice his doubts and to ask for reconsideration of the Washington decision.

I asked the National Security Council to meet in a special session on January 12th to discuss the MacArthur message and what should be done about it.

Another Explanation for MacArthur.

At this meeting, I expressed the view that it was important to keep MacArthur fully informed on political as well as military matters. We had done that all along. He had received copies of many important papers even though few, apparently, had really found their way to his desk. I would therefore send a personal message to General MacArthur bringing him up to date on our foreign policy. This (in part) was my message to MacArthur:

"January 13, 1951

"* * * I wish in this telegram to let you have my views as to our basic national and international purposes in continuing the resistance to aggression in Korea. We need your judgment as to the maximum effort which could reasonably be expected from the United Nations forces under your command to support the resistance to aggression which we are trying rapidly to organize on a world-wide basis. This present telegram is not to be taken in any sense as a directive. Its purpose is to give you something of what is in our minds regarding the political factors * * *

"* * * Our course of action at this time should be such as to consolidate the great majority of the United Nations. This majority is not merely part of the organization but is also the nations whom we would desperately need to count on as allies in the event the Soviet Union moves against us. Further, pending the build-up of our national strength, we must act with great prudence in so far as extending the area of hostilities is concerned. Steps which might in themselves be fully justified and which might lend some assistance to the campaign in Korea would not be beneficial if they thereby involved Japan or Western Europe, in large-scale hostilities. * * *

"* * * In the worst case, it would be important that, if we must withdraw from Korea, it be clear to the world that that course is forced upon us by military necessity and that we shall not accept the result politically or militarily until the aggression has been rectified.

"In reaching a final decision about Korea, I shall have to give constant thought to the main threat from the Soviet Union and to the need for a rapid expansion of our armed forces to meet this great danger.

"I am encouraged to believe that the free world is getting a much clearer and realistic picture of the dangers before us and that the necessary courage and energy will be forthcoming. * * *

"The entire nation is grateful for your splendid leadership in the difficult struggle in Korea and for the superb performance of your forces under the most difficult circumstances."

General MacArthur had, as he had in previous wars, displayed splendid leadership. But I wanted him to accept, as a soldier should, the political decisions which the civil authorities of the government had determined upon.

Enemy Stopped, Pushed Back in Korea.

Our forces stemmed the tide in Korea in January 1951. The enemy was stopped and in some sectors of the front pushed back. The Chinese had apparently reached a point where their supply lines were getting too long for effective operations.

Throughout the early months of 1951, Defense and State Department officials met repeatedly to plan possible courses of action in Korea and in Asia generally.

In March, as the tide of battle in Korea began to turn in our favor, both groups favored a new approach to a negotiated cease-fire. The reasoning was that since we had been able to inflict heavy casualties on the Chinese and were pushing them back to and beyond the 38th parallel that, in the first place, it would now be in their interest at least as much as ours to halt the fighting, and secondly, the invaders stood substantially ejected from the territory of the Republic of Korea.

The Department of State drew up a statement which they proposed I should issue. On March 19th, Secretary Acheson, General Marshall, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff held a meeting at which they discussed this draft. They also agreed to inform General MacArthur that there was going to be a Presidential announcement and to ask him to offer his recommendations.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff sent this message to General MacArthur:

"State Department planning a Presidential announcement shortly that, with clearing of bulk of South Korea of aggressors, United Nations now preparing to discuss conditions of settlement in Korea. United Nations feeling exists that further diplomatic efforts toward settlement should be made before any advance with major forces north of 38th parallel. Time will be required to determine diplomatic reactions and permit new negotiations that may develop. Recognizing that parallel has no military significance, State has asked Joint Chiefs of Staff what authority you should have to permit sufficient freedom of action for next few weeks to provide security for United Nations forces and maintain contact with enemy. Your recommendation desired."

In his reply General MacArthur recommended that no additional restrictions be imposed on his command. He pointed out that with the forces at his command and operating under the limitations which had been placed on him, it was not practicable for him to attempt to clear North Korea of the enemy and that he felt for that reason his current directive covered the situation quite well.

Gen. MacArthur Saying Farewell to His Troops

Relieved of command by President Truman, the General takes the call to the colors in farewell ceremonies in Tokyo before he and his party began the long trip back to the United States.

Again MacArthur Upsets Mr. Truman's Plan.

Following the receipt of MacArthur's reply, further details of the proposed Presidential announcement were worked out. Furthermore, State Department officials met with the Washington representatives of the other nations that had troops in Korea in order to obtain their approval to the proposed draft.

The thought behind this was that a suggestion of our willingness to settle, without any threats or recriminations, might get a favorable reply.

Unfortunately, the careful preparations were all in vain. The many hours spent to secure the approval of the other governments, the detailed discussions among diplomats and defense leaders became useless when, on March 24th, General MacArthur released a statement that was so entirely at cross purposes with the one I was to have delivered that it would only have confused the world if my carefully prepared statement had been made.

What General MacArthur said was this:

"Operations continue according to schedule and plan. We have now substantially cleared South Korea of organized Communist forces. It is becoming increasingly evident that the heavy destruction along the enemy's lines of supply, caused by our round-the-clock massive air and naval bombardment, has left his troops in the forward battle area deficient in requirements to sustain his operations. This weakness is being brilliantly exploited by our ground forces. * * *

"Red China, of such exaggerated and vaunted military power, lacks the industrial capacity to provide adequately many critical items necessary to the conduct of modern war. * * *

"Even under the inhibitions which now restrict the activity of the United Nations forces and the corresponding military advantages which accrue to Red China, it has been shown its complete inability to accomplish by force of arms the conquest of Korea."

"The enemy, therefore, must by now be painfully aware that a decision of the United Nations to depart from its tolerant effort to contain the war to the area of Korea, through an expansion of our miliary operations to its coastal areas and interior bases, would doom Red China to the risk of imminent military collapse. These basic facts being established, there should be no insuperable difficulty in arriving at decisions on the Korean problem if the issues are resolved on their own merits, without being burdened by extraneous matters not directly related to Korea, such as Formosa or China's seat in the United Nations. * * *

"Apart from the military area of the problem where issues are resolved in the course of combat, the fundamental questions continue to be political in nature and must find their answer in the diplomatic sphere. Within the area of my authority as the military commander, however, it would be needless to say that I stand ready at any time to confer in the field with the commander-in-chief of the enemy forces in the earnest effort to find any military means whereby realization of the political objectives of the United Nations in Korea, to which no nation may justly take exceptions, might be accomplished without further bloodshed."

'Challenge to Authority of the President.'

This was a most extraordinary statement for a military commander of the United Nations to issue on his own responsibility. It was an act totally disregarding all directives to abstain from any declarations on foreign policy. It was in open defiance of my orders as President and as Commander-in-Chief. This was a challenge to the authority of the President under the Constitution. It also flouted the policy of the United Nations.

By this act MacArthur left me no choice—I could no longer tolerate his insubordination.

In effect, what MacArthur was doing was to threaten the enemy with an ultimatum—intimating that the full preponderance of Allied power might be brought to bear against Red China. To be sure, he said that this would be a political decision, but considering his high office, the world would assume that he had advance knowledge that such a decision would be made.

From capitals all over the world came rush inquiries: What does this mean? Is there about to be a shift in American policy?

There was more involved than the fate of a prepared statement that the President of the United States had intended to make, or even than the diplomatic furor created by this "pronunciamento," as the Norwegian Ambassador called it when he inquired what it meant at the State Department. What was much more important was that, once again, General MacArthur had openly defied the policy of his Commander-in-Chief, the President of the United States.

I held a conference with Dean Acheson, Robert Lovett, and Dean Rusk at noon that day—Saturday—and reviewed the order which had been sent to MacArthur on December 6th, requiring that all public statements should be cleared with the department concerned. I asked the others if there could be any doubt as to the meaning of this order, and they all agreed that it was a very clear directive.

I instructed Lovett to have a priority message sent to General MacArthur that would remind him of his duty under this order, for the main thing to do now was to prevent further statements by the General.

Mr. Truman 'Deeply Shocked.'

I was aware of the fact that in an earlier statement the same month, General MacArthur had already issued a challenge to the policy of the President. On March 7th, he had dictated a statement to reporters to the effect that unless I accepted his policy there would be "savage slaughter." However, he had then at least admitted that it was not his to make the decision. But now, by his statement he had in a very real sense influenced the course of policy, and further statements like this could only do untold harm.

I can only say that on that day I was deeply shocked. I had never underestimated my difficulties with MacArthur but, after the Wake Island meeting, I had hoped that he would respect the authority of the President. I tried to place myself in his position, however, and tried to figure out why he was challenging the traditional civilian supremacy in our government.

Certainly, his arguments and his proposals had always received full consideration by me and by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. If anything, they—and I—had leaned over backward in our respect for the man's military reputation. But all his statements since November—ever since the Chinese entry into Korea—had the earmarks of a man who performs for the galleries. It was difficult to explain this latest development unless it is assumed that it was of importance to the general to prevent any appearance that the credit for ending the fighting should go elsewhere.

I reflected on the similarities in the situation that had faced Abraham Lincoln in his efforts to deal with General McClellan. Carl Sandburg tells a story about Lincoln's relationship with McClellan: The general occasionally made political statements on matters outside the military field, and someone asked Lincoln what he would reply to McClellan. Lincoln's answer, so the story goes, was this: "Nothing—but it made me think of the man whose horse kicked up and stuck his foot through the stirrup. He said to the horse: 'If you are going to get on, I will get off.'"

Lincoln was patient, for that was his nature, but at long last he was compelled to relieve the Union Army's principal commander. And though I gave this difficulty with MacArthur much wearisome thought, I realized that I would have no other choice myself than to relieve the nation's top field commander.

If there is one basic element in our Constitution, it is civilian control of the military. Policies are to be made by the elected political officials, not by generals or admirals. Yet time and again General MacArthur had shown that he was unwilling to accept the policies of the administration. By his repeated public statements he was not only confusing our allies as to the true course of our policies, but, in fact was also setting his policy against the President's.

'Greatest Respect for MacArthur The Soldier.'

I have always had; and I have to this day, the greatest respect for General MacArthur, the soldier. Nothing I could do, I knew, could change his stature as one of the outstanding military figures of our time—and I had no desire to diminish his stature. I had hoped, and I had tried to convince him, that the policy he was asked to follow was right. He had disagreed. He had been openly critical. Now, at last, his actions had frustrated a political course decided upon, in conjunction with its allies, by the government he was sworn to serve. If I allowed him to defy the civil authorities in this manner, I myself would be violating my oath to uphold and defend the Constitution.

One reason that we have been so careful to keep the military within its own preserve is that the very nature of the service hierarchy gives military commanders little if any opportunity to learn the humility that is needed for good public service. The elected official will never forget—unless he is a fool—that others as well or better qualified might have been chosen, and that millions remained unconvinced that the last choice made was the best one possible. Any man who has come up through the process of political selection, as it functions in our country, knows that success is a mixture of principles steadfastly maintained and adjustments made at the proper time and place—adjustments to conditions, not adjustment of principles.

These are things a military officer is not likely to learn in the course of his profession. The words that dominate his thinking are command and obedience, and the military definitions of these words are not definitions for use in a republic.

That is why our Constitution embodies the principle of civilian control of the military. This was the principle that General MacArthur threatened. I do not believe that he purposefully decided to challenge civilian control of the military, but the result of his behavior was that this fundamental principle of free government was in danger.

It was my duty to act.

I wrestled with the problem for several days, but my mind was made up before April 5th, when the next incident occurred.

MacArthur's Letter to Joe Martin.

On that day, Representative Joseph W. Martin, the minority leader in the House, read a letter in the House which General MacArthur had addressed to him. Martin, an isolationist with a long record of opposition to forward-looking foreign policies, had written to MacArthur early in March, and, among other things, had said that it was sheer folly not to use Chinese Nationalist troops in Korea. Then he had asked if this view paralleled the general's.

General MacArthur's reply, written on March 20th, read as follows:

"I am most grateful for your note of the eighth forwarding me a copy of your address of February 12. The latter I have read with much interest, and find that with the passage of years you have certainly lost none of your old time punch.

"My views and recommendations with respect to the situation created by Red China's entry into war against us in Korea have been submitted to Washington in most complete detail. Generally these views are well known and generally understood, as they follow the conventional pattern of meeting force with maximum counterforce as we have never failed to do in the past. Your view with respect to the utilization of the Chinese forces on Formosa is in conflict with neither logic nor this tradition.

"It seems strangely difficult for some to realize that here in Asia is where the Communist conspirators have elected to make their play for global conquest, and that we have joined the issue thus raised on the battlefield; that here we fight Europe's war with arms while the diplomats there still fight it with words; that if we lose this war to Communism in Asia the fall of Europe is inevitable, win it and Europe most probably would avoid war and yet preserve freedom. As you point out, we must win. There is no substitute for victory."

'Challenge to Existing National Policy.'

The second paragraph of this letter was in itself enough of a challenge to existing national policy. MacArthur had been fully informed as to the reason why the employment of Chinese Nationalist forces was ruled out. He himself, only eight months earlier, had indorsed the merit of this decision. Later when he had changed his position and reopened the subject, he had again been advised that this was part of the policy on which the President had decided. So, in praising Mr. Martin's logic and traditional attitude, he was in effect saying that my policy was without logic and violated tradition.

Now, the tradition of which he wrote—that of meeting force with maximum counterforce—is in itself not one that exists outside of military textbooks. To be sure, it is a good rule for the employment of troops; but it has no bearing on the relations between governments or between peoples. The American people have accomplished much and attained greatness not by the use of force but by industry, ingenuity, and generosity.

Of course, the third paragraph of MacArthur's letter was the real "clincher." I do not know through what channels of information the general learned that the Communists had chosen to concentrate their efforts on Asia—and more specifically on his command. Perhaps he did not know just how much effort and how much sacrifice had been required to stem the Communist tide in Iran—in Greece—at Berlin. Perhaps he did not know how strenuously the Kremlin wished to block the emergence of a united front in Western Europe. Actually, of course, my letter of January 13th had made it clear that Communism was capable of attacking not only in Asia but also in Europe, and that this was one reason why we could not afford to extend conflict in Korea. But then MacArthur added a belittling comment about our diplomatic efforts, and reached his climax with the pronouncement that "there is no substitute for victory."

But there is a right kind and a wrong kind of victory, just as there are wars for the right thing and wars that are wrong from every standpoint.

As General Bradley later said: "To have extended the fighting to the mainland of Asia would have been the wrong war, at the wrong time and in the wrong place."

The kind of victory MacArthur had in mind—victory by the bombing of Chinese cities, victory by expanding the conflict to all of China—would have been the wrong kind of victory.

'The Time Had Come to Draw the Line.'

The time had come to draw the line. MacArthur's letter to Congressman Martin showed that the General was not only in disagreement with the policy of the government but was challenging this policy in open insubordination to his Commander-in-Chief.

I asked Acheson, Marshall, Bradley and Harriman to meet with me on Friday morning, April 6th, to discuss MacArthur's action. I put the matter squarely before them. What should be done about General MacArthur? We discussed the question for an hour. Everyone thought that the government faced a serious situation.

Averell Harriman was of the opinion that I should have fired MacArthur two years ago.

Secretary of Defense Marshall advised caution, saying he wished to reflect further. He observed that if I relieved MacArthur, it might be difficult to get the military appropriations through Congress.

General Bradley approached the question entirely from the point of view of military discipline. As he saw it, there was a clear case of insubordination and the general deserved to be relieved of command. He did wish, however, to consult with the Chiefs of Staff before making a final recommendation.

Acheson said that he believed that General MacArthur should be relieved, but he thought it essential to have the unanimous advice of the Joint Chiefs of Staff before I acted. He counseled that the most careful consideration be given to this matter since it was of the utmost seriousness. He added, "If you relieve MacArthur, you will have the biggest fight of your administration."

We then joined the Cabinet for the regularly scheduled meeting. There was comment all around the table, of course, about the letter to Martin, but there was no discussion of the problem of what to do with MacArthur. After the Cabinet meeting, Acheson, Marshall, Bradley and Harriman returned with me to my office, and we continued our discussion.

I was careful not to disclose that I had already reached a decision. Before the meeting adjourned, I suggested to Marshall that he go over all the messages in the Pentagon files that had been exchanged with General MacArthur in the past two years. Then I asked all four to return the following day at nine a.m.

The next morning, Saturday, April 7th, we met again in my office. This meeting was short. General Marshall stated that he had read the messages and that he had now concluded that MacArthur should have been fired two years ago. I asked General Bradley to make a final recommendation to me of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on Monday.

On Sunday, the eighth of April, I sent for Acheson to come to Blair House, and I discussed the situation further with him. I informed him that I had already that morning consulted with Snyder. I then told Acheson that I would be prepared to act on Monday when General Bradley made his report on the recommendations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Joint Chiefs of Staff Unanimous.

At nine o'clock Monday morning I again met with Marshall, Bradley, Acheson and Harriman. General Bradley reported that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had met with him on Sunday, and it was his and their unanimous judgment that General MacArthur should be relieved.

General Marshall reaffirmed that this was also his conclusion, Harriman restated his opinion of Friday. Acheson said he agreed entirely to the removal of MacArthur.

It was only now that I answered that I had already made up my mind that General MacArthur had to go when he made his statement of March 24th.

I then directed General Bradley to prepare the orders that would relieve General MacArthur of his several commands and replace him with Lieutenant General Matthew Ridgway, the Commanding General of the 8th Army in Korea.

The same group reported to me at the White House at 3:15 on Monday afternoon with the drafted orders, which I signed.

It was decided that the notification of these orders should be given to General MacArthur through Secretary of the Army Pace, who was then in Korea. We understood that he was at 8th Army Headquarters. I asked Acheson to transmit the orders to Pace through Ambassador Muccio and that Pace was to go to Tokyo and personally hand the orders to General MacArthur.

But our message was delayed in reaching Pace, first because of mechanical difficulties in transmission, and second, because Pace was at the front with General Ridgway.

I requested Secretary Acheson to inform Congressional leaders and to advise John Foster Dulles of our action regarding MacArthur, and to ask Dulles to go to Japan and assure the Yoshida Government that the change in commander would not in any way affect our policy of pushing the Japanese Peace Treaty to a speedy conclusion. This Dulles agreed to do.

A change in plans became necessary, however, when, late on the evening of April 10th, General Bradley came rushing over to Blair House. He had heard, he said, that the story had leaked out and that a Chicago newspaper was going to print it the next morning. That was when I decided that we could not afford the courtesy of Secretary Pace's personal delivery of the order but that the message would have to go to General MacArthur in the same manner that relieving orders were sent to other officers of the service.

Special News Conference at 1 A.M.

Under these new circumstances, I felt compelled to have Joseph Short, my Press Secretary, call a special news conference for 1:00 A.M. April 11th, which was as quickly as it was possible to have the orders, in their slightly changed form, reproduced.

The reporters were handed by announcement of General MacArthur's relief.

"With deep regret," this announcement read, "I have concluded that General of the Army Douglas MacArthur is unable to give his wholehearted support to the policies of the United States Government and of the United Nations in matters pertaining to his official duties. In view of the specific responsibilities imposed upon me by the Constitution of the United States and the added responsibility which has been entrusted to me by the United Nations, I have decided that I must make a change of command in the Far East. I have, therefore, relieved General MacArthur of his commands and have designated Lieutenant General Matthew B. Ridgway as his successor.

"Full and vigorous debate on matters of national policy is a vital element in the constitutional system of our free democracy. It is fundamental, however, that military commanders must be governed by the policies and directives issued to them in the manner provided by our laws and Constitution. In time of crisis, the consideration is particularly compelling.

"General MacArthur's place in history is fully established. The Nation owes him a debt of gratitude for the distinguished and exceptional service which he has rendered his country in posts of great responsibility. For that reason I repeat my regret at the necessity for the action I feel compelled to take in his case."

Portrait of a City Boss Is Almost Factual

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch

THE nature of practical politics on the municipal level is described comprehensively and with discernment in "The Last Hurrah" by Edwin O'Connor. This is a novel, I should add, and a good one in many respects. Its pace is brisk, its characters are vivid and plausible and the complex of forces that affect the government operations of a certain American city are clearly indicated. "The Last Hurrah" incidentally has been chosen as the year's prize among those submitted to the Atlantic Monthly Press.

EDWIN O'CONNOR

THE LAST HURRAH, by Edwin O'Connor. (Atlantic-Little, Brown, 427 pgs., $4.00.)

The central character, Frank Skeffington, is a descendant of an Irish immigrant who was forced from his native sod by the potato famine of 1847 and came to America along with some 4,000,000 others. Like many a compatriot Frank turns to politics as the surest way to preferment. His success and the reasons for it constitute the substance of Mr. O'Connor's story.

At the time the novel opens Skeffington has been a definitive "boss" for nearly four decades and as he is now 72 years old and nearing the end of a four-year term, his numerous enemies hope, without daring to believe it, that he will retire as mayor of the city. He has no such intention, of course; he feels certain that he can make it again and at the appropriate time—a birthday dinner given in his honor by the party leaders—he fires the opening gun of his campaign.

HIS operation from that time forward is much the same in style and thoroughness as in all his previous successful bids for office. Through his ward lieutenants and his own unremitting personal efforts he reminds the faithful of past favors and holds out the promise of more to come, interviews hundreds of visitors every day and unravels their problems for them, presents the key of the city to a popular jazz virtuoso, attends a wake, banishes a dissolute henchman to outer political darkness when he threatens to become a liability, forces a political enemy to provide the financing for a housing project by threatening to embarrass him through his family and so on.

Woven into the fast moving record of contemporary events are various references to the past which indicate the reason for Skeffington's strength and his popularity. His method is easily summarized; reward your friends, punish your enemies and bestow largesse upon the needy. This together with a charm of manner and an easy wit is enough to endear him with the devoting mass.

The portrait of Skeffington that emerges is in general a likable one. He is ruthless and cynical but never mean. Moreover one feels that he has a genuine attachment to the people and evidently he believes that his system of serving them is more effective than a more high-minded and less practical one.

The author is also successful in describing associated personages including the old Cardinal who detests Skeffington because the latter has converted his race and religion into political assets. Most of these characters are types but since they are also imaginatively endowed with unique personal traits they survive as individuals.

AS a description of a city machine it is quite as revealing as any copiously documented field study. And here no doubt is its weakness. It is a little too close to the facts, an impression that grows all the stronger when one of the characters says in effect that the Frank Skeffington type of city boss is obsolete. The reason for this conclusion is unassailable; the welfare activities of the Federal government have relieved the underprivileged of their dependency upon the charity of ward heelers.

"The Last Hurrah" then is scarcely more than a fictionalized political analysis of a familiar situation whose impact would have been much the same if it had been strictly factual. This is not to underrate Mr. O'Connor's understanding of human motives and his skill at making them intelligible. His framework, however, is too rigid to permit a rich and abundant play of the imagination. One hopes that in his next novel he will start with his characters rather than a situation.

A flyleaf carries the usual statement saying that all the characters are fictional. If it weren't for that one might have sworn that Jim Curley of Boston had sat as a model for the author's central character.

Japanese Master of Design

KATSUSHIKA HOKUSAI, by Ichitaro Kondo. (Charles E. Tuttle Co., 76 pgs., 44 plates, $1.)

Reviewed by
HOWARD DERRICKSON

LAFCADIO HEARN, the well-traveled Greek-Irish interpreter of Japan to the Occident, wrote from his adopted Land of the Rising Sun in 1890:

"There is more art in a print by Hokusai than in a $100,000 painting of the West. It is we who are the barbarians!"

The sincerest form of flattery was accorded Hokusai by Monet, who swiftly appropriated the Japanese master's brightly flung shadows and system of shortcuts when his woodblock prints became available in France in the abundant form of wrapping paper in the late 1850s.

From Hokusai and other Japanese printmakers, Degas developed his asymmetrical layouts and plunging lines of sight, with figures off-balance or truncated at the picture's edge. Others who profited from their passion for things Japanese include Van Gogh, Whistler, Manet, Vuillard and Bonnard.

To Western eyes, therefore, the plates which are the major part of this pocket book bring fewer esthetic surprises than might be supposed. By the same token of familiarity, this Hokusai volume is an excellent, if obvious, choice for the launching of a 13-book venture in publishing that promises to build a whole new wing, with a low admission charge, in Andre Malraux's "museum without walls."

Publisher of the series is the Charles E. Tuttle Co. of Rutland, Vt., and Tokyo, in co-operation with the Japanese firm of Kodansha. The text of the initial booklet has been translated by Elise Grilli, art critic for Tokyo's foremost English-language daily. It traces the stylistic evolution of an inspired and dedicated leader in one of the world's most influential flowerings of art—the school of the Japanese woodblock print.

Hokusai, who used several other names during his 89-year life, became one of history's most popular and most prolific artists. When he died in 1849, the year before Hearn's birth, Hokusai had created more than 30,000 picture designs. Of the 44 plates chosen for inclusion in this book, 29 are in color, and the tones seem true.

Similar format will be used in later numbers of the series, which will present the work of Hiroshige, Utamaro, Sharaku and nine other Japanese masters who deserve a wider Western public.

HISTORY

Print Order: 150,000

AMERICAN HERITAGE: Vol. VII, No. 2. (130 pgs., $2.95.)

A. MERVYN DAVIES

THE success of "American Heritage"—the magazine of history sponsored jointly by the Society of American Historians and the American Association for State and Local History—has been nothing less than phenomenal. It began its present career little more than a year ago—on a proverbial shoestring and a hope. The print order for this latest issue is no less than 150,000. It is worth inquiring, what is the explanation of such spectacular growth?

We can see three or four reasons for it. First, the way it has united readibility and historical scholarship. The happiest change to overtake the writing of history in this generation has been that history no longer has to be bad literature in order to be good scholarship, as it once had to be. History has regained the real readability it had in the days when Parkman and Prescott were its writers, read and loved by so many as they were. The historians responsible for putting out "American Heritage" have made it their objective "to lift the fascinating story of America from its musty archives and make it live again, so that Americans may better sense their past and understand their present."

Secondly, the editors know the value of eye appeal; they have seen the way the National Geographic Magazine has built its success over the many years on this and they believe that the American past provides them with the same opportunity. The color reproductions in each issue of "American Heritage" are as fine as modern printing can make them.

As an example of what "American Heritage" can do—anyone who has visited the Cyclorama in Atlanta and seen that magnificent panoramic painting of the Battle of Atlanta must have come away wishing that he could "take it away" with him for further study. Now, in its latest issue "American Heritage" has enabled him to do that—with ten pages of full-color reproductions of the five segments of the painting, together with an account of the battle by Bruce Catton, leading Civil War authority, which adds a great deal to the viewer's comprehension of the painting.

In this way art is tied in with history and culture, one being the reflection of the other two, which is the way it should be; not art for art's sake, but art for what it tells us about our past.

Thirdly, range of interest. Each volume, some may feel, has almost too much diversity; it tends to be more of a medley than it need be—which is a possible criticism. The editors might do well to consider the advisability of confining each volume to three or four central themes, one, say, for each century or period of American history.

FINALLY, there is the editorial strength that lies behind this venture, the fact that the men responsible for it are among the nation's leading historians — led by Allan Nevins, winner of two Pulitzer prizes—who are fully mindful of their responsibility to contribute so far as they can to a better understanding of the problems of the present.

Thus the new issue contains the first of what may well prove a notable series of articles by distinguished historians on "Times of Trial in American Statecraft" — the times when our nation missed opportunities to increase its own peace and prosperity. In this year of commemorating Benjamin Franklin it is fitting that the first article should deal with his scheme—the Albany Plan of Union—for a continental union which if it had been adopted might well have averted the split with Great Britain.

Father Abraham and His Boys

R. E. HASWELL

TWO years ago, Mrs. J. G. Randall published a persuasive and appealing defense of Abraham Lincoln's often maligned wife, Mary. Now, in "Lincoln's Sons," with the same combination of scholarly precision and feminine chattiness, she has drawn together what is known of Lincoln's children and his paternal relations with them.

A number of things stand out. First, even by "modern" standards, Lincoln was an indulging father, eschewing punishment and avoiding discipline. Tad in particular was given free rein for mischief that came close at times to having political repercussions, as when he waved a Confederate flag while his father stood at a White House balcony.

Second, all three of the sons, while they were children, were attractive and popular, though quite different in personality. The difficulties that arose between Robert and his father came more from an excess of affection, on the father's part, and of emulation, on the son's part, than from any conflict or shortcomings of character.

Finally, Mrs. Randall has succeeded in making her five people—Abraham, Mary and the three sons—all plausible in terms of ordinary human nature. She even makes us sympathetic towards both Robert and his mother in the tragic and bitter years after Lincoln's assassination.

Somehow, one feels that Mrs. Randall, in spite of obvious special pleading, has come closest of all biographers to the common reality of the Lincoln family. She seems to know them and to present them, not as a student or psychologist, but as a next-door neighbor might, a particularly sympathetic and perceptive next-door neighbor.

National Book Award Winners

HERBERT KUBLY — JOHN O'HARA — W. H. AUDEN

The National Book Awards for the most distinguished books of 1955, made last Tuesday in New York by the book publishing industry, went to: John O'Hara, for his novel, "Ten North Frederick"—a portrayal of life in a small Pennsylvania town; Herbert Kubly, for his non-fiction book, "American in Italy"—described as "the story of the author's love affair with the Italian people"; and W. H. Auden, for his book of poetry, "The Shield of Achilles." The judges said of O'Hara's novel: "A masterpiece of construction, the work shows a remarkable control of material and a perfectly maintained distance from it." Kubly's "American in Italy" was declared to have "a fine balance of humor, pathos and understanding of the people of another nation." The poetry judges described Auden's work as "intelligent, agile, full and large; always original and to the point; never lacking in wit, both sacred and profane."

A VOLUME provocative and frequently stimulating, but one difficult to classify, is Madeleine Kent's novel of Jean Lafitte, the smuggler, privateer or pirate, who swept the Gulf of Mexico in the early 1800s, then turned around to start more legends by helping the Americans defeat the British at the Battle of New Orleans.

Clearly, few who have treated of the difficult, often slippery Lafitte have worked so thoroughly over the sources. The author has the further advantage of access to new data, a diary attributed to the man, which makes hash of most of the previous material on various phases of his life. A few years ago Stanley C. Arthur first presented facts from that diary in an interesting biography. Commendably Mrs. Kent draws still more heavily on this source.

In some closely packed pages the reader learns much about the "corsair's" early years, his highly colored business operations, his connections with piebald, raffish New Orleans of its first American days. He is told also that the man did not die in or near Southern waters as the old romances had it, but went to, of all places, Kansas City, to round out his days as a more or less quiet merchant.

Yet with all this background of research, Mrs. Kent has gone rather beyond the form of the biographical novel. As a writer of detective books, she has understandably used her "deductive powers" in choosing between conflicting dates and sequences. But, while perhaps three-fourths of her figures are actual individuals, bankers, soldiers and picaroons, she has added others (mistresses and friends) with a disclaimer that they are "the product of the author's imagination." And she has written her book in the first person, as if Lafitte himself had composed it.

Within these limitations, Mrs. Kent has labored earnestly and well. Into long passages she has pressed a great many hard facts, telling them without attempting a literary styling. Her descriptions of Lafitte's flamboyant doings in and around the islands below New Orleans have vigor. Through it all she has made her Jean an individual of higher motives than most would grant him; he emerges, in fact, as rather a high-minded fellow.

American Religion

PROTESTANT, CATHOLIC, JEW, by Will Herberg. (Doubleday & Co., 320 pgs., $4.)

RICHARD H. UHLIG

EVIDENCE is everywhere at hand that Americans are today attending and joining churches in increasing numbers. The questions which remain turn on an examination of the meaning of this trend, the sources from which it has developed, its qualities, and its implications for other aspects of American life, present and future. It is with these considerations in mind that this treatment of religion from a sociological viewpoint was undertaken.

It is the thesis of the author that the "common religion" of Americans is best defined by the system known as the American Way of Life, which is "individualistic, dynamic, pragmatic . . . humanitarian." It easily accommodates differences in values in political, business and other phases of life and often bears no relation to professed religious points of view. This "American" religion is described as largely non-theological and occupied increasingly with things of this world.

The author asserts that a new attitude toward religion and a new conception of the church have emerged. This is described as an increasing emphasis on faith in faith, a "cult of faith," exemplified in the various "peace of mind" movements on the one hand, and "positive thinking" movements on the other, each of which affirm a passionate belief in religion but stop at the point of describing what are the components and implications of such beliefs. In total, this trend is deplored as having developed through "a devitalization of the historic faiths," Judaism and Christianity.

Mr. Herberg sees two main sources in the contemporary scene for the renewed interest and growth in religion and church membership. First, he suggests that this is a function of the coming of age of third generation Americans. The first generation of immigrants remained closely identified not only to their religions but even more to their own ethnic churches. The second generation went through painful cultural conflicts with themselves and their families, rejecting everything that differentiated them in any way from what they considered to be thoroughly assimilated Americans. In the course of their revolt, the religion of their families wavered, oftentimes disappearing in entirety and frequently anti-religion took its place.

It is the third generation, however, that the author finds giving impetus to the current religious enthusiasm. Secure in American society, this generation now wants to identify itself within that society. Identification in terms of religion does not challenge the assimilation into the larger culture. "And so it is religion that . . . has become the differentiating element and the context of self-identification and social location."

THE second important factor is a more commonly acknowledged one, the need to conform to what seems to be acceptable behavior. Going to church and being able to call oneself a Catholic, Protestant or Jew are virtually expected today if one is to be considered a good American. This is noted as particularly dominant in new suburbs where much of the church growth is occurring.

Unfortunately, the author never makes explicit his own assumptions, making evaluation difficult. We know he does not like the gradual retreat from a "God-centered" conception of religion in favor of more humanistic concerns; however, he also thinks religion must put more emphasis on "searching for the realities of existence."

It is a matter of speculation whether continued growth in churches would occur if the needs of the people to "belong," to feel a part of the larger community, were not a concern of churches. The impact of suburbanization, high mobility, and an analysis of what the churches really are offering their people are underplayed in this study. A more penetrating question is whether the author has faced the facts of social change which are reflected in all institutions, including the church.

Perhaps it is the whole picture of change which is really deplored and regretted.

PENTAGON WANTED TO FIRE M'ARTHUR BEFORE TRUMAN

farther north in Manchuria.

It was the unanimous opinion of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, including the late Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, that the U.N. forces gained more by the unofficial restriction of bombing than the Reds. For obvious reasons, this testimony was deleted from the published version of the MacArthur hearings.

Another item still in dispute was the use of Nationalist Chinese forces in Korea. Chiang Kai-shek offered 33,000 men. Our allies were against it, but, more importantly, the President of the Korean republic, Syngman Rhee, was violently opposed. Why bring the Chinese civil war into Korea, he said. Why not arm more South Koreans?

In all these controversies MacArthur has suffered from his devoted admirers who have tried to rewrite history to prove him always infallible. When the controversie are over and the histories are written without prejudice, it will be found that these admirers have harmed his great reputation much more than they have helped it.

BRAZIL NEW TEST OF RED STRENGTH AND FREE WORLD

given this writer by the leading spokesman of the Communist point of view and by Brazil's Foreign Minister, President and Vice President.

To summarize the Communist position, as given by Maria da Gracas Dutra who makes her headquarters at Imprensa Popular and is a powerful trade union figure:

The Kubitschek government, in order to continue to receive Communist support, must "defend the constitution and preserve democratic liberties, establish diplomatic and commercial relations with all friendly countries, defend Brazil's oil and mineral deposits, and improve the welfare of the people."

This can be interpreted as meaning that the Communists insist that Brazil exchange ambassadors with Soviet Russia, trade with Communist countries, legalize the Communist party, refuse to let United States oil companies into the unexploited oil fields of Brazil and raise wages of workers.

Macedo Soares Won't Go Along.

Foreign Minister Jose Carlos de Macedo Soares does not lend himself to the Communist program. Macedo Soares, 72 years old, is an elder statesman who firmly believes in closer relations with one nation, the United States. The writer asked if it could be understood that so long as he was in office there would be no movement toward Russia, diplomatic or trade.

"You certainly may," he replied. "My policy is to maintain a close partnership with the United States, a partnership in which neither party is subordinate."

But when the writer asked President Kubitschek, the President replied:

"Trade relations are a possibility, but diplomatic relations will be up to the Congress, and I do not intend to take the initiative."

Finally, when the question was asked Vice President Goulart, he dodged the issue altogether.

"One must wait until the issue arises," he said.

Goulart then added the implied threat that he has made many times before:

"I can only say that if the workers are betrayed by this government, I will no longer be a part of the government."

Pre-election Deal with Reds?

For some observers, these expressions create a strong suspicion that the Kubitschek government agreed to the four-point Communist program as the price of Communist support in the election. This Kubitschek denies, and so does Maria da Gracas Dutra. A further suspicion is that Goulart may use his threat to resign to enforce the alleged agreement because he intends to keep the support of labor on which his political career depends. Maria de Gracas Dutra told the writer quite frankly that pressures would be organized to force the government to fulfill the Communist program, but she spoke only of mass movements such as committees of union leaders and other groups.

Even now there are hints of more serious Communist pressure. A strike at the Volta Redonda steel plant last week strangely coincided with a visit there of Vice President Nixon. The strike was economic in origin but it seems that the final nudge and the timing involved some Communist labor leaders.

If Communist pressure forces the Kubitschek government to the left, Foreign Minister Macedo Soares can be expected to resign—he may resign anyway as it is said he prefers retirement and took his post only temporarily to dress up the new government.

What Kubitschek and Goulart will do can only be surmised. A good deal of speculation is going on now both in the United States embassy in Rio and in Washington behind a facade of easy confidence and good will.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

PACE SLACKENS

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (AP).

THE nation's greatest business boom slackened its pace a bit this week, although most lines still showed thumping gains over year-ago levels. It was apparent that the wheels of industry were spinning at a slightly less furious speed. Automobile manufacturers announced new cutbacks; rail freight loadings and coal production eased off. The stock market went into a mild decline. Some Congressmen demanded easier mortgage terms to reverse what they called a sharp downturn in home construction.

Some Offsetting.

Partially offsetting these declines was a burst of activity in the petroleum, chemical, paper and furniture industries. Oil companies smashed all prior records for production and refining of crude oil. Retail trade was still on the upbeat: department store sales for the nation as a whole were 5 per cent greater than a year ago although here, too, the trend was up in some spots and down in others. Five of the nation's Federal Reserve districts—Atlanta, Dallas, Richmond, Kansas City and St. Louis—reported a decline in department store business from the corresponding week of last year.

Adding it all up, you got this picture: the economy, pushed to the limit in 1955, was taking time out to consolidate its gains before attempting another forward surge.

The auto industry, striving to curb the hottest production pace in its history, applied the brakes a little more firmly this week.

Chrysler, the nation's third largest automaker, announced it would lay off 5400 production workers Monday, swelling the number idled since mid-December to 26,400, or nearly one-fifth of the company's total labor force. Ford laid off 950 more in Cleveland.

WHEAT MOVES AHEAD, FEED GRAINS LOWER

CHICAGO, Feb. 11 (AP)—Wheat futures prices moved ahead a bit on the Board of Trade this week amidst some conflicting forces and confusion.

Feed grains and soybeans practically all were lower, with movement to market picking up at times and feed grain supplies abundant.

Wheat closed the week unchanged to 1⅞ cent higher, with the March contract reaching a new seasonal high at $2.16½ Friday.

Compared with last Friday, corn was ¼ to 1½c lower, oats down ½ to 1½c, rye 1⅝ to 2¾c lower, soybeans 1⅞c lower to ⅜c higher, and lard 5 to 10 cents a hundred pounds down.

During the week traders got some news they had been eagerly awaiting — price support levels for 1956 crops—but after they got it they weren't sure what to do with it.

Actually, the price support level is very much up in the air on the two main crops—wheat and corn.

The Agriculture Department has set the wheat price support this year at $1.81 a bushel, or 76 per cent of parity, and the corn price support at $1.40 a bushel, or 81 per cent of parity.

LONG-TERMS WEAK SPOT IN U.S. BONDS

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (AP)—The corporate bond market backed and filled this week in inconclusive fashion. United States Treasury obligations swung over to the downside with long range bonds weakest.

High quality investment corporates improved for the week. So did utilities. But Industrials were unchanged, rails eased and foreign bonds were lower.

Weakness in the Government bond market was centered in long range issues. The 30-year 3¼s dropped 12-32 for the week, closing Friday at 105 22-32 bid. The 40-year 3s were off 11-32 at 100 16-32 bid. Contrasted with these, the Victory 2½s of December, 1972-67, declined 5-32 to 95 26-32 while the 2½s of 1963 advanced 1-32 at 98 3-32 bid. Volume for the week was thin.

POLITICAL JITTERS SEND STOCK PRICES DOWNWARD

Efforts to Extend Recovery Ends When Traders Become More Apprehensive About President's Intentions on Second Term.

By JOHN G. FORREST
Financial Editor, The New York Times.
Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.

ONCE again the stock market this week suffered from an attack of domestic political jitters. Efforts to extend the recovery movement ended when traders became more apprehensive about President Eisenhower's intentions of seeking a second term. Stocks weakened in midweek after new observations on the question that has puzzled Wall Street for months.

But there was no indication from what the President said at his latest news conference to warrant the conclusion that Mr. Eisenhower would or would not seek a second term. His decision on seeking the office again remained as vague as ever. But he did indicate that his decision would soon be made, possibly before the month ended. Perhaps his frank remarks on other potential candidates for the office were responsible for some of the hasty interpretations this week.

Some Market Tactics.

There is a growing belief that the repeated selling in the stock market after each of the President's statements on the second term question is taking on the appearance of shrewd market tactics. While it would seem to indicate disappointment on a possible negative answer to the question, it also could be designed to put the price level in a position where any eventuality would be discounted and a rally could develop when the decision is made. Only time will tell whether this hypothesis is correct.

A more tangible depressing influence on the market in the week was the news on the automobile industry. Passenger car production so far this year is running 100,000 units below the 7,90,920 cars produced in the 1955 period. And the decline in output in February is expected to fall 1.8 per cent below January's asemblies and 11 per cent below February, 1955. Truck output this year is holding above a year ago, however.

Construction Record.

New construction expenditures set a new record in January, although falling 10 per cent below December's level. The $2,850,000,000 expended was 1 per cent more than in January, 1955. However, on a seasonally adjusted annual rate the total of forty-one and a half billion dollars for the year's estimated construction would compare with $42,300,000,000 in 1955. A more than seasonal drop in residential building contributed to a decline of 12 per cent from December in private construction, the departments of Commerce and Labor reported.

Resistance to the forward movement in the stock market became evident on Monday when prices closed mixed after early firmness. The list sagged further on Tuesday as a spurt in natural gas stocks played out following passage of a bill in Congress to exempt interstate transportation of gas from federal regulation. Wednesday brought a wave of selling in the last half hour of trading that toppled prices in leading issues from 1 to 3 points in the widest decline in several weeks. Stocks eased again on Thursday in slightly lower trading, but turned firmer on Friday.

Hint of Anti-Trust Suit.

Something more than heavy inventory in dealers' hands and the curtailment in production annoyed automobile manufacturers this week. The latest aggravation, coming, we should say, at a rather inopportune time, was the hint of an anti-trust suit. Such a suit was implied in the remarks of Stanley N. Barnes, assistant attorney general, who asserted that there is an undue concentration of economic power developing in the automobile industry.

The nation's monetary policy came in for review before the congressional joint committee on the economic report. William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, reported that the board was "feeling its way" as it watched to see which way the business wind was blowing. He said the "tone" of the money market was about the same as in mid-December, but refused to define it as one of "restraint," "ease" or "neutralism." He backed President Eisenhower's suggestion that a "study" be made of the need for stand-by credit controls.

One of the encouraging signs on the economic horizon was that employment in January set a new high mark for the month despite larger-than-normal layoffs in the automobile and soft-goods industries. Government figures showed that there were 62,891,000 persons employed, a gain of 2,741,000 more than in January 1955. The "seasonal" decline from December was 1,300,000 workers.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks lost 9.78 points on the week closing the period at 467.66. The 20 rails dropped 3.84 points to 155.38 and the 15 utilities slipped .41 of a point to 65.09. The total 65-stock index was off 2.89 points at 166.66.)

(Associated Press average of 30 industrial stocks was 6.4 points lower on the week at 246.2 and the rail index was 2.7 lower at 132.2. The 15-stock utility average was down .3 of a point at 72.7. Sixty stocks lost 3.6 points at 174.0.)

talks business to everybody...and is heard

If it's a salesman you want, you'll look far before you'll find a better one than a want ad.

Small as it is, it packs a mighty wallop, and gets in places where a two-legged salesman can't get the tip of his shoe. There are no barriers a want ad can't hurdle; it encounters no sales resistance because it's paid for by the advertiser and sought by the reader who buys the Post-Dispatch to know what's for sale and who has it for sale. It's wanted.

The want ad is a tireless worker for anyone willing to hire its services.

It is a guide to business opportunities, often a promoter of an enterprise. It sells real estate, unused commodities and has a voice in thousands of transactions like no other medium of advertising.

It talks business to everybody, and is heard.

For the price you pay, a Post-Dispatch want ad is a force in selling you can't afford to ignore. Better than a million individual ads have been published during the last twelve months in the Post-Dispatch, and a million-plus of anything is worth consideration.

So, for things you want to buy, sell or rent, read and use Post-Dispatch want ads.

For as little as a day you can run a WANT AD ON the local 7-day rate.

All you do is to pick up the receiver and dial...

talk to an ad-taker and charge it.

CHRISTMAS PICTURES AT ARTISTS' GUILD

Third Annual Show Distinctly Higher in Quality Than Others.

The third annual Christmas card design exhibition sponsored by First National Bank in St. Louis and the Artists' Guild opened yesterday at the guild, 812 Union boulevard.

Prize money totaling $450 attracted 123 entries, from which a three-man jury assembled a 44-picture show distinctly higher in quality than earlier displays in the series.

Representational styles predominate, but effects achieved within a limited range are noteworthy and varied. Among outstanding pictures are Roscoe Misselhorn's "Eads Bridge in Winter," winner of the bank's $250 purchase award, and Edward E. Menge's "Skating in Forest Park," which won a $100 prize.

Misselhorn's painting, impressionistic in style, represents its familiar subject in a fresh guise, just as a flurry of large, soft, clinging snowflakes begins to descend. Menges's painting is schematic and semi-abstract in passages.

Dorothy Bartholemy's "Fresh Snow on the Riverfront," which won a $50 award, is an unusual view of the Old Cathedral and adjacent buildings from the air.

Edward J. Thias's "Downtown Shopping Scene," a $25 winner, is a bright, animated composition. Marguerite Mitchell's oil painting of a church is interestingly textured, with rich pigment modulated subtly in places and modeled in ridges in others.

Other outstanding pictures represent Vivian Chevillon, Tom Cowdery, Dorothy Pflager, Robert S. Robison, Eugenia Hart, Eloise Warren, Alexandra Korsakoff-Galston, Fran Taussig, Elyse Baker, Mary Hallett Gronemeyer, Mabel Meeker Edsall, David Hares, Florence Boefer Brenner, Lillian Thoele, Helen Koch, Belle Cramer, Laura Queal, Esther S. Reed, Victor Joseph Kunz, Virginia Moberly Schlueter, Leona Chappell, Jim Elliott, Laura Skorat Poepsel, Patricia Kamp Turmo and Constance B. Finkenauer.

The show will close Feb. 21.—H. D.

MUSIC OF SHAKESPEARE'S TIME TO BE PRESENTED

Suzanne Bloch, music teacher and specialist in medieval and Renaissance music and instruments, will present a program of music of Shakespeare's time at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in Graham Memorial Chapel on the Washington University campus. The concert is the fifth in a series of eight programs presented by the university's department of music.

Miss Block, daughter of composer Ernest Bloch, will perform on the lute, virginals and recorders. She will also present a program at a university assembly at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the chapel.

KARSTEN URGES NIKE UNIT FOR ST. LOUIS

He Says 90-Millimeter Gun Is Like Bow and Arrow.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11—Representative Frank M. Karsten of St. Louis, likening a 90-millimeter gun to a bow and arrow, urged the Defense Department today to give St. Louis at least one guided missile battalion instead.

In a letter to Secretary Charles E. Wilson, Karsten said he could not "conceive anything more wasteful" than the recently-announced plan to construct eight 90-millimeter anti-aircraft gun stations, with four guns each, around St. Louis.

"It would be just about as effective to supply these eight centers with archery equipment," he wrote. "A bow and arrow has one thing in common with a 90-millimeter gun. Neither weapon can bring down present-day aircraft operating at high altitudes."

Karsten said he understood it would cost $3,350,000 to build and equip one Nike guided missile battery, with a total of 12 launchers. The battalion that he suggested would have four batteries.

To go ahead with plans to install the 90-millimeter guns, he said, would mean "investing millions of dollars to build a defense system which became obsolete 10 years ago."

"I urge you to review this matter and see if a program can be worked out to provide St. Louis with the protection of at least one guided missile battalion," he concluded.

Zeip is 80 years old, his wife, 75. They have one daughter.

DATES CHOSEN BEHIND BLIND PLEASE USO GIRLS

Two USO junior hostesses went on an unusual kind of "blind date" last night—and said they were well satisfied with the arrangement, in observance of National USO Week.

The girls were Nancy Burnett, of 6174 Waterman boulevard, and Mary Hoormann, of 1430 Linton avenue. They were chosen by lot to represent the junior hostesses who arrange parties and dances at the Central Branch YWCA-USO, 1411 Locust street.

Their dates were Airman 3-C James L. Nickolson of South Bend, Ind., and Airman 3-C Raymond G. Butler, of Jacksonville, Fla., selected from a group of Scott Air Base candidates. The selection was done first by lot, and then by a question-and-answer session between the girls and six finalists, with the airmen hidden from the girls by a curtain.

As they ate free steak dinners at a downtown hotel last night before attending a USO formal dance at the Carondelet YWCA, they agreed their blind dates were fine. For Airman Nickolson, it was his first. "If they're all like this," he said, "I'm for it."

DUTCH-INDONESIAN TALKS WIND UP IN A DEADLOCK

GENEVA, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Dutch-Indonesian foreign ministers conference, after two months of negotiations, wound up in a deadlock tonight. The two sides were unable to agree on a formula for arbitrating future disputes.

Dutch Foreign Minister M. A. H. Luns said Indonesian proposals for arbitration machinery were "ambiguous and unbinding" although the Dutch had met Indonesian objections on two main points. The Indonesians objected the Dutch were too rigid in their proposals.

Failure means agreement reached at the round table conference in The Hauge in 1949 will continue to govern Dutch-Indonesian relations. It was the round table conference which granted Indonesia sovereignty after centuries of Dutch rule.

MADRID U. DEAN OF LAW FIRED OVER STUDENT RIOTING

MADRID, Feb. 11 (UP)—The Ministry of Education announced tonight that the dean of the law faculty at the University of Madrid, Manuel Torres Lopez, has been fired as a result of political riots among students last week.

Seven persons arrested last night as instigators of the riots are reported to face exile following the government's invoking of "rigorous" measures which include temporary suspension of civil rights.

The Ministry of Education said Lopez was dismissed because of his actions during the three days of violence between opposing student factions, which was climaxed Thursday by the shooting of a Falangist student. The ministry said also that there would be no classes at the university Monday because of the prevailing tension.

It takes a GIANT to move mountains

It takes a giant to move mountains of merchandise, too. In the world of selling there is a giant who lives in every town—the newspaper.

Nothing develops the rich ore of responsive customers like the newspaper because:

1. Over 56,000,000 newspapers are sold daily.
2. Over 88% of U. S. homes received a newspaper yesterday.*
3. 64% of men and 73% of women read the general news pages with advertising.†

In other words, people buy and read and SHOP the newspaper every day. Whether you want to move mountains of merchandise in one market or many you need a giant. You need the newspaper.

Will the new faces help the Cardinals?

STOCKTON

The hopeful rookies aren't the only new faces around the St. Louis Cardinal spring training camp opening today at St. Petersburg, Florida. Since the last game of the 1955 season, Cardinal owner August A. Busch, Jr. has hired on two new faces who are old hands at the game. What plans do new General Manager Frank Lane and Field Manager Fred Hutchinson have to revitalize the Red Birds? Will they swing some trades? There are a lot of questions to be answered. And on hand at the Florida camp to report every angle of spring training is a man who will try to give you the answers, Post-Dispatch Sports Editor J. Roy Stockton. A veteran baseball writer, Stockton has an intimate knowledge of the Cards. To be fully informed about Cardinal spring training, follow J. Roy Stockton's reports

December, 1950-time of crisis

In Tuesday's installment of THE TRUMAN MEMOIRS, former President Truman tells about his decision to proclaim a state of national emergency in December of 1950 as the Communist hordes were sweeping through North Korea. Mr. Eisenhower is first "Television President"

President Eisenhower and actor-producer Robert Montgomery, who serves as the President's adviser on television techniques, discuss a problem prior to a television speech.

Although Harry S. Truman used television sparingly, Dwight D. Eisenhower is the first full-fledged "Television President." Americans got their first really good look at Mr. Eisenhower early in 1951 when he gave a TV report on his NATO mission. In his campaign for the presidency and since he has been in office he has used TV often. There is some chance that he may even use it to announce his decision on whether to run again. TERMS OUR CHINA POLICY UNREALISTIC

Washington U. Professor Says U.N. Seat for Peiping Is Inevitable.

The United States has pursued a head-in-sand "ostrich" policy toward China under both Democratic and Republican administrations, Stanley Spector, assistant professor of Far Eastern affairs at Washington University, said yesterday.

Spector addressed the Midwest Residential Seminar on World Affairs at Pere Marquette Lodge in the state park at Grafton, Ill. The four-day seminar ends this afternoon.

The admission of Communist China to the United Nations "is inevitable in the fairly near future," Spector said. He said the United States until very recently had made no constructive effort to "meet the realities of today."

Spector, who recently spent two years in Malaya, under a Ford Foundation fellowship, could visualize no possibility that the American-backed Chinese Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek might reconquer the mainland.

"The Chinese Communists are in power," he said, "and will be in power for the foreseeable future. The only significant group in Asia that wants to see Chiang back on the mainland are the people of Formosa, who want their freedom."

Problem of Formosa.

Spector termed it a matter of urgency that the United States now consider what steps could be taken either to put Formosa under U.N. trusteeship and help resettle the island's surplus population, or else make provision for Formosa's return to mainland China.

The Chinese will never agree, Spector said, to giving up their claim to Formosa, a point on which the United States is insisting in negotiations at Geneva. He said Formosa's "liberation" was deeply imbedded in Chinese domestic and foreign policy, even written into China's constitution.

Spector said the success of American foreign policy would depend, to a great extent, on widespread education of Americans in "realities of foreign affairs," and the elimination of racial barriers at home.

"We cannot expect people to fight by our side if we refuse to let them sit, eat, study and worship at our side," he said.

The seminar's program for today includes group discussions at 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., and religious services at 10:30 a.m.

ARCHAEOLOGISTS TO HEAR YALE CLASSICS TEACHER

Emmett L. Bennett Jr., professor of classics at Yale University, will speak at an open meeting of the St. Louis society of the Archaeological Institute of America at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in Givens Hall library, Washington University. He will discuss "The Development of Mycenean Script."

Bennett, who received degrees from the University of Cincinnati, began work on Minoan and Mycenean inscriptions in 1939 after inscribed clay tablets were discovered by Carl W. Blegen at Nestor Palace at Pylos.

A former teacher at the University of Minnesota, he also is a visiting lecturer in Greek at Bryn Mawr College. He is a member of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N.J., and is a Yale Morse fellow in Greece and a Guggenheim fellow.

HOUSING REHABILITATION COUNSEL TO GIVE TALK

Robert E. Knittel, public relations counsel for the Municipal Housing Rehabilitation Project, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Carondelet Improvement Association at the Carondelet Library tomorrow at 8:15 p.m.

Knittel is expected to use films and slides in describing the city's progress in housing conservation and neighborhood renewal. He will share the program with Bernard B. Blades, chairman of the Cherokee Community Council, one of the agencies co-operating in the city program.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. J. L. Bernard, five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

LEGION AUXILIARY OFFERS FOUR $300 SCHOLARSHIPS

Scholarships of $300 each will be awarded two girl and two boy winners of the Department of Missouri American Legion Auxiliary's essay contest, open to deceased veterans' children who are seniors in high school, it was announced yesterday. Entries wil be accepted until March 1.

The girl who by decision of the judges submits the best essay will be eligible to compete for the National President's Essay Scholarship award of $600.

Scholarships are offered to assist children of deceased veterans who desire to get a college education, and funds must be used for that purpose. Additional information about contest rules and subject can be obtained from Mrs. Blanche M. Levy, education and scholarship chairman of the department, 6340 Northwood avenue, Clayton.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS AUTO

The body of Lloyd H. Parr was found yesterday in the rear seat of his automobile parked in the garage at his home, 4208 North Euclid avenue, with a piece of garden hose running from the exhaust to the window of the car and the ignition turned on.

A note found by his wife in the kitchen of their home indicated he was planning to end his life, because of illness. He was a toolmaker and was 37 years old. Mrs. Parr told police that, to her knoweldge, her husband had been in good health and spirits.

PRINTS IN SNOW TRIP UP TWO, HELD IN AUTO THEFT

A trail of footprints in the snow in the 11000 block of Baptist Church road, Sappington, led to the arrest of two men yesterday. County Police pieced together the difficulties of the men, who are held on automobile theft charges, by their tracks.

Jesse G. Fraley, 100 block of West Cartwright avenue, Lemay, and Kendall Huffman, 400 block of East Marceau street, who was arrested at his home, admitted stealing two cars, police reported. What they said merely confirmed the officers' theory, police said.

The men's tracks led from Huffman's automobile, which was out of gasoline, to a spot where another car had been parked. This machine was found in a ditch in the same block. From the ditched car, the tracks led to another parked car where an unsuccessful effort had been made to start it with an ignition jumper. From there, the footprints led to a place where still another automobile had been parkd. The stolen machine was found near Huffman's home.

JOHN J. NANGLE HEADS CITY-COUNTY MERGER UNIT

John J. Nangle, an attorney and Democratic politician, has been named chairman of the finance committee of the Citizen's Committee for City-County Co-Ordination, Inc., it was announced yesterday.

The organization, headed by Alderman A. J. Cervantes and H. Jackson Daniel, seeks to coordinate certain functions of the two areas. "I believe city-county co-ordination is the most important civic issue before our community today," Nangle said. "Our city is trapped by its boundaries and progress will be impeded until the arbitrary boundary is pushed back."

KEEN MEMORY OF BLIND MAN PUTS 2 IN PRISON

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 11—State prison terms were given yesterday to two Brooklyn (N.Y.) men who were apprehended in Danbury last August as a result of a blind man's keen memory. The two were charged with breaking and entering.

Leslie Wurtzburger got a two- to four-year sentence and Hugh Hommel was given a one- to four-year sentence. Both men have pleaded guilty.

The court was told that on the night of the break-in, a blind man and a sighted companion were walking along a Danbury street when the sighted man noticed two men acting suspiciously in an alleyway. He noted the registration number of the New York automobile and recited it to his blind companion. The following day, when the sighted man read newspaper accounts of the burglary he told police the blind man might remember the registration number. The blind man did give the registration number to the police and the Brooklyn men were apprehended.

Cardinals to Open Spring Training Today at St. Pete

47 PLAYERS LIKELY TO BE ON HAND FOR FIRST DRILL

By J. Roy Stockton
Post-Dispatch Sports Editor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 11—Nineteen winter-roster Cardinals and 28 Redbird minor leaguers are scheduled to pull on St. Louis National League uniforms Sunday in time for a short afternoon workout under Fred Hutchinson, the club's third manager within a year.

The earliest training camp in the Cardinals' history is a result of a desire by both Hutchinson and the new general manager, Frank Lane, to see as many as possible of the organization's apparently more promising players.

However, though as eager as his field foreman to begin seeing for himself quickly, Lane is not likely to be on hand for Sunday's short 12 o'clock workout (St. Louis time). After representing President August A. Busch Jr. at Connie Mack's funeral today in Philadelphia, the Cardinla general manager was understood to have had difficulty making plane connections for Florida.

Coaches All on Hand.

Hutchinson won't lack for help, however, in the opening session at Al Lang Field, where the remaining 23 winter-roster Redbirds are due March 1. On hand to assist the 36-year-old former Detroit pitcher and manager are Coaches Terry Moore, Johnny Hopp and Bill Posedel, Catcher Walker Cooper and Infield Instructor Bill Jurges. Scouts Mike Ryba and Al Hollingsworth are expected here in time for Sunday's workout.

The self-styled Sunshine City almost didn't live up to its warming label today. An overnight rain continued into the afternoon, but then stopped, the sun came out and Hutchinson smiled.

"We'll work tomorrow," he said. "It'll be a short workout—maybe only an hour—but it'll be a loosening up and a start. Then Monday we'll begin getting the boys out about 10 a.m., the earliest you can work without running into dew. There'll be two groups—one hitting, the other fielding.

"There have been a lot of good reports from scouts, front-office men and other clubs, but it's human nature for a manager to want to see for himself," Hutchinson said. "I've got a lot to learn about these fellas—and they've got to show me."

In addition to the 41-year-old Cooper, back with the Redbirds as a pinch-hitter, reserve catcher and assistant pitching coach, other Cardinals expected to be on hand Sunday are Catcher Hal Smith, Pitchers Tom Poholsky, Larry Jackson, Frank Smith, Ben Flowers, Lindy McDaniel, Harry Hoitsma, Barney Schultz, Billy Muffett and Bob Mabe; First Baseman Tom Alston and Joe Cunningham; Infielders Ken Boyer, Dick Schofield and Eddie Kasko and Outfielders Rip Repulski, Pete Whisenant and Russell Rac.

Although on the big league club's roster, Smith, Muffett, Hoitsma and Mabe have not played a game in the majors.

Brandt Promising Gardener.

Of the minor leaguers in the contemplated 47-player early group, the most promising is Jackie Brandt, 22-year-old righthanded-hitting outfielder, a fleet, strong-armed and reportedly sure-fielding kid who in three years has climbed from Class D to the big time, hitting .366 (Ardmore), .313 (Columbus, Ga.), and .305 (Rochester).

The other minor leaguers—most of whom will be returned to their farm club rosters before the rest of the Redbirds report March 1—are Catchers Charles Barnes, Dick Czekaj, Tom Patton, Bob Rand and Clair Troxell; Pitchers Billy Bowman, Tom Cheney, Ed Donnelly, Jack Faszholz, Rogers Fister, Gary Geiger, Tommy Hughes, Marion Kutyna, Will Lackey, Duke Markell, Herb Moford and Charles Purtle; Infielders Reuben Amaro, Bill Kunkle, Wally Shannon and Ben Valenzuela and Outfielders Allie Clark, Danny Schell, Gene Green, Don Lassetter, Mel Nelson and Bobby Smith.

Of the players off farm club lists, Faszholz and Moford have pitched briefly with the Cardinals and Markell with the Browns. Clark is an American League veteran and Schell played with the Phillies. Like Brandt and Rac, they're candidates to add possible right-handed outfield punch—if they take advantage of the chance.

Concerns or Problems, They Are Headaches.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 11

EDDIE STANKY always insisted that there were no problems in baseball—only concerns—but if what confronts Fred Hutchinson at Al Lang Field here are not problems, they'll suffice in that category until some real good ones come along.

It seems from this vantage point that Hutchinson, to get the Cardinals back into a contending status in the league, must get himself a pitching staff, a few .300 hitters, improved catching and an adequate first baseman.

The primary idea of baseball is the throwing of a baseball by a pitcher and the efforts of the other team to strike that baseball with bats. The Cardinals were in a bad way last season, whether it was their man who was throwing, or their men who were swinging the bats. Only one regularly starting Cardinal pitcher, through the season, won more games than he lost. That was Luis Arroyo and he had difficulty getting people out during the late months. Willard Schmidt came up from Omaha and won seven while losing six, and Paul La Palme, appearing in 56 games, scratched out a 4-3 record. All other Cardinal hurlers lost more than they won.

And when the other team's man was throwing the baseball, Stan Musial was the only Cardinal able to hit it safely as frequently as three times out of ten.

And even Stanky, in the face of that gloomy thumbnail sketch of the situation, ought to admit that if it's no problem, there's room for considerable concern.

There are by-product problems of the lack of batting power, too. In fact, the pitching might have been better on paper if the attack had been stouter. And if the batting attack were as good as in the days of pennants and near pennants, the nine-year stretch ending in 1949 during which the club finished no worse than second, the Cardinals would not consider it an unwarranted luxury to carry a .240-hitting shortstop like Alex Grammas.

Bright Spots in Picture, Such as Vinegar Bend.

THERE are bright spots in the picture, of course. In the first place the pitching scarcely could be as bad as it was last season. The return from Army service of Vinegar Bend Mizell will be the biggest shot in the arm—the club's pitching arm, that is. Then Schmidt will be with the club all year, supposedly. Harvey Haddix learned in mid-summer that he was tipping his pitches. Larry Jackson, with a year's experience, and with better coaching, should be a consistent winner. He has all the tools.

Then some new men could be important. Don Blasingame long has been considered a sure major league prospect. He could be the man this year to bolster the infield. His presence may enable the club to move Ken Boyer to shortstop. Ken was the club's best third baseman and the best shortstop on the roster last spring.

Hal Smith, young catcher up from Houston, could improve that department and to help the catcher's end to hit in the pinch occasionally, the veteran Walker Cooper will be on the roster.

Russell Rac, one of the new outfielders, hit .312 at Houston last year and showed home run power in winter league play. He apparently is a natural for the Gashouse Gang. He threw rocks back at fans in the winter league. And it's important that he's a right-handed hitter.

Jackie Brandt, another right-handed hitting outfielder, is not on the roster, but he'll be available if he qualifies for major league duty. He seems to be one of the best outfielding prospects the organization has developed in recent years. During three years in the minors he hit better than .300 each season. Last season, at Rochester he batted .305. He also is rated highly for speed, defensively and on the bases. He could be the surprise of the camp, the Wally Moon of 1956.

Recently there have been reports minimizing an outstanding worry of late 1955. Red Schoendienst was having trouble with his eyes during the late weeks of the 1955 pennant race. Some observers feared that the club might have to find a replacement for the redhead. Of course no ball player ever had any ailment during the winter. Batting eyes and pitching arms always are perfect during off-seasons. Even Frank Smith probably could throw a ball through a barn wall in January. But the reports seem to be reliable that Schoendienst's eyes are not a problem.

And if the Cardinals do have problems, they are not alone as the spring training period starts. Even the Yankees have problems. Casey Stengel, for instance, may have to worry for several months about how he's going to beat the Brooklyn Dodgers next October.

Bears Top Regis by 68 to 44

By Harold Tuthill

A great comeback splurge of 46 points in the second half helped Washington University turn a close basketball game into a rout last night as it downed a touring Regis College team, 68 to 44, in the Bears' Field House.

In the first half the Bears bore little resemblance to the December combination which gave Illinois a scare before losing, 75-74 (and look what the Illini did yesterday against Ohio State—111 points!) Regis in those first 20 minutes was an alert driving team which all but played the Bears off their feet to lead at the intermission, 24-22.

Twice the score was tied after Washington had pushed off to an early lead. A field goal by Tony Rendulick of Regis caught Blair Gullion's athletes at 13-13 the first time. Then, after Washington recaptured the lead on a field goal and free throw by Bill Gullion, Regis came back to forge ahead on Bill Bollwerk's set shot from 20 feet out. That gave the Denver school its first lead, 17-16.

Last Even at 28-28.

Washington bounced right back to go ahead again, but Mickey Shannon of Regis hit a hook shot to even the count at 22-22 and another hook shot put the Rangers ahead, 24-22.

The second half was close only for a short while. The teams virtually traded points until a free throw by Gullion made it a new game at 28-28. Art Borchers scored, Jim Barton added another fielder and then a free throw, after which Regis took time out.

The pause did not break the Bruin stride, however. When Jim Paul scored on a fast break, the Bears widened the gap to 43-28, a gain of 15 points while the visiting Rangers were scoreless. About 13 minutes remained to play. In that space of time, Regis made only 16 points to 25 for the Bears.

The game, played for the benefit of some 2000, among them 600 faculty members and their families, boosted Washington's record to 13-5 for the season. Regis was dumped to 11-11, as Ranger Coach Harvey Moore felt the sting of official criticism when a technical foul was called against him for his protests during the first half. Borchers, who took the throw, missed it.

HAWKS BEATEN BY KNICKS, 107-91

Third Straight Setback; Philadelphia Here Today

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—The St. Louis Hawks, visibly tired at the tail end of their Eastern trip, dropped a 107-91 decision to the fired-up New York Knickerbockers tonight as Vince Boryla made his debut as Knick coach.

Red Holzman's St. Louis team, which had won nine straight until stopped Thursday night by Philadelphia, will be back home against the Eastern Division leading Warriors Sunday afternoon in a 3 o'clock game at Kield Auditorium. High school students and youngsters under high school age will be admitted for a 50-cent service charge.

With Joe Lapchick, who announced his retirement two weeks ago and did his last coaching chore last night, sitting by his side, Boryla last night watched one of the most impressive Knick performances of the season.

The New Yorkers ran and rebounded fiercely right from the start, showed better passing and ball-handling* They got a 20-point performance from Dick McGuire, their chief playmaker, who had been in a slump, and an unusually good night from Sweetwater Clifton, who led his team with 13 rebounds.

But the Hawks put up a good battle. They wiped out a 19-point deficit in pulling up to a 55-55 tie early in the second half, but then weren't able to stand up to the Knick counter-charge. Outscored, 10-1, in the next two minutes, they never got closer than six points again, at 77-71 in the closing minutes of the third period.

The main trouble St. Louis had was shooting. The Hawks sank only 30 out of 101 shots for less than 30 per cent, and Bob Pettit, especially, was off, making only six baskets in 22 tries. He was high scorer, though, with 24 points, hitting 12 out of 13 from the foul line.

Jack Coleman's outside shooting and rebounding were the brightest features for the Hawks. He had nine baskets, 20 points and 12 rebounds.

It was the third straight loss for St. Louis after its nine-game winning streak, which was the National Basketball Association's longest of the season. It cost them a full game in the standings, too, since second-place Rochester won. The Royals now have a 25-30 mark with 17 games to play. St. Louis has 22-29 with 19 games left.

The Knicks, using the give-and-go beautifully, made over 40 out of 98, and outrebounded the Hawks, 82-63. It was their first victory at home over the Hawks and only their second in five meetings.

Concordia Is Defeated by Lincoln Again

Concordia Seminary's faltering Preachers suffered a fourth basketball loss in their last five starts last night, bowing to the swift Lincoln University quintet of Jefferson City, 66 to 57. A crowd of 2500 at the Concordia field house saw the Preachers fall to .500 for the season with a 9-9 record.

Eldon (Pete) Pederson's charges, who held an 18-11 lead with eight minutes to play in the first half, blew it within the next two minutes and were on the short end of a 32-30 halftime score. They never caught up in the last half.

Lamar Williams, Larvell Wells and Rudy Mims sparked the rally that wiped out Concordia's seven-point first half advantage, and in the end, it was Mims and Ted Savage, former East St. Louis Lincoln High ace, who topped the visitors' attack, garnering 13 points apiece.

Joe Hauser had 15 points and Hal Rast a dozen for the Preachers, who bowed for the fifth time in their last seven starts—twice to Lincoln U. The Jefferson City squad now shows a 12-7 mark for the season.

Vanderbilt Sets Scoring Record

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 11—Vanderbilt set an alltime scoring record here tonight in thumping Louisiana State University, 107 to 68.

The 107 total eclipsed a previous 104 made by Vanderbilt in its victory over Washington and Lee here in the Memorial Gymnasium during the 1954-55 season.

Bobby Thym of St. Louis was one of the three Commodores to score 20 or more points tonight. The junior forward accounted for 21, three fewer than teammate Al Rochelle and one more than Charlie Harrison. Joe Gibbs, junior forward, scored 19 points and Babe Taylor, the other Vanderbilt starter, contributed 12.

The victory was Vanderbilt's eighth in the Southeastern Conference against one defeat and extended its overall record to 16-2.

Bob Gregor, sophomore from Edwardsville, Ill., put the Commodores over the 100 mark with a basket with two minutes and 30 seconds remaining. The overflow crowd of 7000 kept crying for more, and Gibbs, Jimmy French, and Rochelle responded with baskets before time expired.

BOLDEBUCK IS HIGH WITH 28; 17TH WIN FOR THE COUGARS

By Robert Morrison

Trying to play "beat the clock" too often these days, the St. Louis University Billikens yielded their Missouri Valley Conference lead to Houston University last night at Kiel Auditorium.

The Cougars from deep in Texas stood off a Billiken rally to gain a 67-66 triumph over St. Louis and thus become top dog in the three-team dog fight that the Valley title race is likely to be.

This made Houston's record in the league 7 and 2. St. Louis now is second with 6 and 2 and there are still to be considered the Oklahoma Aggies at 3-2, the Aggies having stopped the Bills' "beat the clock" game here last Monday.

Don Boldebuck, Houston's seven-foot center who got pretty rough in the first half with his hook shots, sat out seven and a half minutes of the second half and still managed to score 28 points for the Cougars.

Helms a Star Reserve.

But when he was on the sidelines the Cougars' Art Helms, a rugged young man from Crocker, Mo., took over on the boards and on the floor and held the visitors together.

It was Houston's seventeenth triumph in 20 games and the team that doesn't get much attention in the National ranking polls was in the driver's seat in the Valley. Houston still must play the Aggies in a return game after having been easily beaten at Stillwater, but it has only one league game left on the road—at Wichita—and its other contest is at home with Bradley.

With 8952 homecoming fans screaming their lungs out in an attempt to help the Bills' finishing kick, Eddie Hickey's athletes came from 11 points down with 7:15 left to a position within one point of Houston at 60-59 with 3:25 to go.

But the Bills never did get even or ahead in the scrambling finish of the game in which they suffered their fourth defeat to go with their 14 victories this season.

After a pair of free throws were made, first by Houston's Jack Foster and then by the Bills' Jim McLaughlin, Houston went into a stall game that forced the Bills open on the inside and Helms drove in to score and give Houston a 64-61 edge.

Time—But No Charge.

Fifty-six seconds were left. Still plenty of time on a home court, where anything can happen for the better. But it didn't come out that way.

Jack Nimlitz scored on one of two free throw opportunities but Lupe Lopez did the same and Helms recovered the rebound with 39 seconds left. Houston was ahead by 65-62 then.

McLaughlin was fouled next. He missed the free throw but then he hit a field goal to narrow it to 65-64 with 18 seconds left. Ten seconds later Nimlitz fouled Lopez and the wiry native of Houston salmly sank two free throws amidst a din that was about to raise all the khosts for miles around.

That clinched it. When Grady Smith sank a jump shot with four seconds left, Houston had the ball out of bounds and didn't have to risk further operation.

The Billikens, who opened the wild-shooting game with a very ordinary display of hitting, were five points down at the half. Boldebuck, scoring 21 of his points in the first half, did considerable damage and Dan Dotson, the shoot-from-the-hip transfer from Leadwood, Mo., and Hannibal-LaGrange, showed what he could do with three quick baskets to start the Houston surge.

A Lead—For a While.

The Cougars of Alden Pasche, whose teams have defeated St. Louis in three of the last four visits here, finished the first half in good shape but early in the second half the Bills quickly squared things and were ahead briefly.

Boldebuck, who had drawn three fouls in the first half, went to the bench with 16:23 left in the second half. He didn't return until 8:56 showed on the clock. But while he was out, Houston surged back to a nine-point lead at 52-43.

Houston then had a 10-point lead with six minutes remaining, but St. Louis opened up with nine straight points on a tip-in by Mimlitz, Todd's free throw, Mimlitz's outside shot, and jump shots by Smith and Mimlitz in that order.

It seemed then the Bills could hardly miss. But they did. It wasn't like the earlier game at Houston, when St. Louis came from four points down to win by three in the last 35 seconds.

That clock just wouldn't be beaten. And neither would Houston.

McGillicuddy Lore.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.

THE wonder is that telegraph cables didn't melt and run down the gutters like spring rain. Connie Mack let go with a round, resounding "damn" the other day and the word went chattering over The Associated Press wires at, inexplicably, no irreparable cost to the equipment.

After a decade of intimate, absorbed and idolatrous research into McGillicuddy lore, this student is flooded with joy to see shattered the ancient myth that the coarsest expletive ever heard from those venerable lips was a gentle and murmurous, "my goodness gracious!". Moreover, the defendant in the dock pleads guilty to the offense of helping to perpetuate the taradiddle, knowing it to be as false as a pivot tooth.

Fact is, although no one would call Connie Mack a profane man, he's had eighty-five years to try out the rich and pungent verbiage which makes longshoremen such delightful conversationalists, and he always was a guy willing to try anything once. But he has the trick of pronouncing Anglo-Saxon with a broad New England accent that makes it sound like "goodness gracious." The marvel is that the A.P. man, hearing him say "damn," didn't mistake it for "fudge."

"Damn it all," Connie said, "we're out to win."

This made news. For one thing, the spectacle of the Philadelphia Athletics being out to win this late in the season, and being so bluntly indelicate about it, is a clear case of the man biting the dog. For another, the discovery that Connie had a temper and sometimes lost it must have struck the A.P. man as the greatest thing since penicillin.

Chased Rube to Minors.

Connie was explaining why he fired two eldering pitchers, Nelson Potter and Bill Dietrich, in a burst of vexation. He canned Potter because, in his heated judgment, Nelson took too cool an attitude toward some singles struck by the St. Louis Browns. He chased Dietrich for complaining about the rotation of pitching assignments on the club.

Actually, however contrary this display of temper may seem to the popular conception of C. Mack, it is completely in character. There is an old story about one day when Rube Walberg blew a lead in the late innings, was yanked and started for the bench but never got there.

"Don't come in here," Connie is reputed to have shouted. "Keep going. Keep right on going out of my sight!"

He gave the same treatment on another occasion to a pitcher named Joe Cascarella. But those were incidents he preferred to forget later. One of Connie's most highly developed gifts is the inability to understand a question which he'd rather not answer. One time, years after the Cascarella affair, he happened to mention the pitcher's name during a chat.

"Wasn't that the guy you ran off the bench? he was asked.

His expression grew suddenly vague. "Yes sir," he said dreamily, "that Cascarella sure could sing. Best singing voice I ever heard in baseball."

He Always Burns.

CHANCES are there never has been a year since he started managing that Connie didn't develop a third-degree burn at some one or more of his ball players. But more often than not his club was so deep in last place and he had abandoned hope so long since that he didn't bother firing 'em out of hand. Just dawdled along and dumped them quietly after the season ended.

Maybe that, the tendency to give up hope, was what prompted him to say on one occasion. "You know, I never was a good manager of a bad ball club. Probably the worst."

Sweet guy that he is, his temper has led him into some quarrels which he has regretted.

Two Strikes on Potter.

QUITE possibly he was wrong, for the second time, when he kicked Potter out. Funny thing about Potter, he worked for Connie for three years, never made any trouble around the place that you could notice, yet never won his boss's esteem. He had a demountable knee in those days which handicapped him when he pitched, but he wasn't notoriously unsuccessful. At length, though Connie sloughed him off on Boston with the remark, "I never did think he could pitch."

Well, Potter wound up with the Browns, led them to their only pennant in 1944, by winning nineteen games, and saved several big ones for the Athletics after Connie got him back from St. Louis this year. He's always been a quiet guy, not particularly combative, but it's difficult to believe Connie could have been correct when he accused Potter of not giving his best the other day against the Browns.

Jim Dyck Agrees To Terms

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (UP)—Jerry Coleman, twice a war hero and the Yankees' No. 1 hard luck guy, came to terms today for the 1956 season.

Coleman, who played in only 43 games last season and batted .229 was injured most of the year. On April 22 he suffered a fractured left shoulder when he fell heavily in a rundown play near home plate in a game with the Red Sox. He was out 83 days and on his first reappearance in the line-up at Chicago he was hit on the head by Pitcher Harry Byrd and the beaning forced him out five more days.

Coleman, who flew 57 missions as a Marine Air Corps veteran in World War II, went back into service in the Korean conflict and flew 63 more missions. He became a major in the Marine Air Corps Reserves last year.

Salary Believed Cut.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 11 (UP)—Jack Dittmer, Milwaukee Braves' second string second baseman, still hasn't signed his 1956 contract, it was disclosed today.

John Quinn, Braves general manager, said the Elkader (Ia.) athlete was here for contract talks Wednesday but returned home Thursday without signing.

He was reported dissatisfied with the salary offer, believed to be a cut from his 1955 pay.

Still Versatile.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 12 (UP)—Jim Dyck, a third baseman-outfielder, signed with the Baltimore Orioles today, bringing 36 of the club's 41 players under contract.

Dyck appeared in 61 games at third base or left field for Baltimore and hit .279. He hit one of two grand slam home runs smashed by Baltimore players in 1955, Dave Philley hitting the other.

Iowa State 88, Missouri 85 In Overtime

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 11—John Crawford, 6-5 Negro sophomore from New York, plunked in seven points in an overtime period to enable Iowa State College to defeat the Missouri University basketball team, 88-85, in a thrilling game played before 5700 here tonight.

The teams had ended regulation play at 79-all, the seventh time in the game and the fifth in the last half that the score had been tied.

But Crawford hit a jump turn shot that nullified a couple of free-throws by Missouri's Lionel Smith and connected with seven of eight free-throw attempts that made the last two charity tosses by Jerry Sandbulte only frosting for the cake. Eddie Ronsick and Redford Reichert connected from the field for Missouri in a futile effort to keep up.

The game ended with top stars of both teams on the sidelines as close calling sent Don Medsker, Cyclone center, and Gary Thompson, scoring ace, to the sidelines with more than five minutes of play remaining, while Chuck Denny, Missouri center, made an earlier departure and Norman Stewart and Lionel Smith, leading Tiger scorers, went out in the overtime.

Missouri led most of the time in the first half, although the score was tied at 16 and again at 30, but the Tiger margin at times ranged up to seven points before the intermission ended with Mizzou ahead, 47-42.

But Iowa State quickly closed in to take a 53-48 lead after four minutes of play in the second half and generally held a slight margin, never more than five points and, in fact, trailing at 60-57, 64-63 and 76-76.

The visitors, who now have a 4-3 record and trail only Kansas State in the Big Seven race, actually if not mathematically eliminated the Tigers as a championship contender. It was Missouri's fourth loss to Big Seven teams in seven starts. Kansas State (6-1) was the leader before playing Colorado, (3-2) tonight.

The Cyclones hit 28 of 70 field goal shots for a 40 per cent average and Missouri 27 of 67 for 42.9. In free-throws, Iowa State canned 32 of 42 attempts, while Missouri was slightly lower in average with 31 in 45 attempts.

Crawford and Stewart tied for individual scoring honors with 26 points each, while Smith contributed 25 for Missouri.

The Cyclones gambled in an effort to win the game in regulation time, stalling after taking the ball at the 59-second mark following Smith's game-tying free-throw following a miss on his first effort. A quick feed to Arnie Gaarde under the basket failed to produce the needed points for Iowa State, however, as his shot missed, sending the game into the extra period.

Two New Indoor Records Set In N.Y. Meet

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (UP)—Ireland's Ron Delany waltzed through a shower of boos and brickbats to win the featured mile in a dreary 4:14 in the New York A.C. games tonight as shotputter Parry O'Brien and 600-yard ace, Charley Jenkins set world indoor records.

A disappointed crowd of 10,000 jeered the slow mile pace and when the slow three-quarter time of 3:16.8 was announced it showered paper onto the track from the balcony. At that point, the undefeated Delany, whose best time is 4:06.3 this season, took over, won an elbow decision over N.Y.U.'s George King and finished 20 yards on top. Len Truex was third.

The spectators cheered, however, as O'Brien won the 16-pound shot in the Madison Square Garden event with a 59 foot, 9 inch toss which bettered his own indoor record by three and one half inches.

Richards Over 15 Feet.

They had more reason to cheer as Jenkins, the Villanova's unbeaten middle distance champion, took the 500 in a 56.4 clocking for another world indoor mark.

Two other undefeated stars, hurdler Lee Calhoun of North Carolina college and Bob Richards, the vaulting vicar from California, roared on unchecked. Calhoun equalled the 7.1 indoor mark in the 60-yard high hurdles and Richards cleared 15 feet for the 89th time in his career. George Sydnor of Villanova scored an upset in the 60-yard dash when he beat Duke's previously unbeaten Dave Sime with a 6.2 clocking, which equalled the meet record.

And there were cheers, too, for Pitt's Arnie Sowell, one of Uncle Sam's chief Olympic hopefuls, as he took the half-mile in a fast 1 minute, 51.8 seconds.

No Cheers for Delany.

But there were no cheers for Delany in the featured Baxter mile. He was content to lay second behind Joe Deady of Washington through a 66.8 quarter and a 2:11.6 half. They stayed that way until the 3:16.8 time through the storm of boos at the three-quarter mile mark. Delany then took over and, still loafing, drew a desperate challenge from King with two laps to go.

Delany fought King off in an elbowing duel and went on to win handily. The officials conferred heatedly and there were more boos when they decided Delany had not fouled King.

Horace Ashenfelter, the durable FBI man who won the last Olympic steeplechase, drew applause as he won the two-mile run for the sixth straight year in 9:06.6.

duced by 23 points his goal of making 1000 points during four years of varsity competition. The University City product now has 976 and, with four more contests, should achieve his ambition.

Barton added 16 points to his total, now 376, and he needs 76 points to better the season high of 451 set by Bob Kriegshauser during the 1953-54 season.

Paul, who played one of his better games as sub for Les Medley, had eight points, as did young Gullion and Borchers. In the last few minutes Coach Gullion sent in replacements who haven't had too much opportunity to play—Jim Drese, Stan Smith, Frank Kickham and John Lewis.

Shannon, a product of Cape Girardeau Catholic High, paced the visitors with 13 points. The St. Louis representatives, Rich Eckhard of De Andreis and Bollwerk of St. Louis U. High, got six points apiece for Regis.

Washington will play Missouri Mines Tuesday at Rolla, and Indiana State next Saturday, leaving only Drake, Feb. 24, and Beloit, there Feb. 29, as the remaining games on the Bruin schedule.

Boxing Decisions And Razzberries.

PASCUAL PEREZ, the Argentine who is the flyweight boxing champion of the world, said recently that he would not sign to box in London, England. His remark followed the decision which gave victory to Peter Waterman, English fighter, over Kid Gavilan, Cuba, former welterweight champion of the world.

Perez apparently feared that he might be stripped of his crown through a "home town" verdict.

That's an old bugaboo in the fight game, boxers fearing that they will be victimized by officials who want to see their own favorite win.

Television has brought the trouble out sharply as millions of fans have become self-appointed judges and referees and severely criticize the decisions of officials at ringside.

Unfortunately, there is no hard and fast way of scoring a boxing bout. One person sees it one way, another a different way. And if they are interested enough, no amount of argument will overcome their ideas.

Then, too, there is considerable betting on fights, even though only on a man-to-man basis and for relatively small amounts. And there's no boxing fan who can view a fight in an unprejudiced manner if he has a buck or two riding on the outcome.

Referees and judges have their own ideas about what they emphasize in handing down a decision. Some might put emphasis on offense—as most of them seem to do—others may give considerable credit to a boxer who has a good defense.

From all reports that's particularly true in England where they are sticklers for the "straight stand up fight" school. Officials there look with a jaundiced eye on the bobber and weaver, a style which is popular among American pugilists.

Complaint by Arcel.

RAY ARCEL, one of the mildest of American trainers, came back from England more than once frothing at the mouth over what he considered poor decisions given against a man he was handling in that country.

"If you hit a man below the shoulders, you're liable to be disqualified for fouling," Arcel said, fuming.

Even in this country there are certain cities which are looked on as traps for visiting fighters. Boston used to be one of the worst and frequently the cry "Boston decision" came from a losing fighter.

There are, no doubt, some officials who permit themselves to be swayed by prejudice in favor of a boy from their locality, or for some other reason. But generally speaking, it is believed that today most officials are very fair in their rulings almost every place.

Ray Flores, who refereed the Sandy Saddler-Flash Elorde featherweight title bout in San Francisco recently in which Sandy, apparently, got away with murder in fracturing rules, was roundly criticized all over the country by fans and writers alike for his seeming complacence with Saddler's actions.

And now with fights being viewed by so many it is safe to assume that officials are being very careful in their handling of their score cards.

Akins on Ainad Card.

VIRGIN AKINS, St. Louis welterweight who stopped Mel Barker in the eighth round of a bout in Ainad Temple, East St. Louis, on Jan. 26, has been signed for a show to be held at the same place March 8, Promoter Herman Spritz has announced.

Getting an opponent for Akins is proving rather difficult as the Illinois Commission already has refused to approve three men.

Part of the proceeds of the show will go to the Polio Fund on the East Side.

Akins has scored three knockouts since his rather disappointing loss to Isaac Logart of Cuba in Madison Square Garden.

Logart, incidentally, was a participant in a sluggish bout at Madison Square Garden the other night when he won a decision over Ramon Fuentes of California. The Cuban is a first-class fighting man but he didn't show much against Fuentes, who was guilty of considerable holding.

When Akins lost to Logart, it appeared that if Akins had gone after his foe with determination he might have beaten him. But Virgil was away off that night, or at least lacked the fire necessary.

There are two good middleweight bouts in prospect for TV viewers this week. Wednesday night Eduardo Lausse of Argentina tackles Bobby Boyd, in a Chicago Stadium fight which will be telecast here over KTVI, Channel 36. On Friday Gene Fullmer, Salt Lake City, opposes Gil Turner, Philadelphia, in Madison Square Garden, with KSD-TV, Channel 5, carrying this bout.

These four men are among the best of the 160-pounders. Lausse was held to a draw in his last bout and Boyd is good enough to make Lausse go all out to win.

Eliot Head Speaker.

STORRS, Conn., Feb. 11 (UP)—Ray Eliot, head football coach at Illinois, will be the head speaker on the sport during the University of Connecticut's annual coaches' clinic Aug. 14-16.

Record Score on Buckeyes

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Feb. 11 (UP)—Illinois came within two points of setting a Big Ten scoring record today by romping over Robin Freeman and Ohio State, 111-64, before a national television audience.

Illinois, with its sharpest defense of the year, held Freeman, the nation's leading scorer, to 12 points on three field goals and six free throws. It was the lowest scoring game in Freeman's collegiate career.

The Ohio State ace had been averaging 34.3 in seven Big Ten games and 33.9 over the season in 15 games.

Illinois stopped Freeman with one basket and four free throws in the first half. He didn't sink a bucket until 12:45 had elapsed in the game.

It was Illinois's thirteenth straight victory and seventh against no losses in the Big Ten.

The Illini came within two points of setting the conference record of 113 points which Indiana hit against Purdue Feb. 23, 1953.

The 111 points set an Illini scoring record. The previous high was 107 against Butler earlier this year. Illinois's previous best Big Ten mark was 104 against Northwestern last year.

It also was the highest number of points ever scored against the Buckeyes, who lost their fourth game against four wins. Wisconsin had the previous high against Ohio with 98 in an overtime loss earlier this season.

Paul Judson and Bill Ridley alternated in guarding Freeman. Ridley stopped him on the outside while Judson picked him up when he moved in. Despite this chore, Judson and Ridley ran one-two in scoring for the Illini with 23 and 22 points, respectively.

Illinois, third-ranked team in the nation, never was behind and the score was tied only once at 2-2. Ohio State crept within two points at 9-7 and 11-9 before the Illini pecked away to a 21-11 lead. Thereafter Ohio State never came closer than six points and was behind by 14 at 47-33 at the half.

Freeman went without a score for the last nine minutes. He connected on only three of 17 shots from the field and 6 of 10 free throws.

Illinois hit 41 of 96 baskets from the field for a .427 shooting percentage while the Buckeyes had 23 of 76 for a .303 mark.

Ritenour Retains State Prep Wrestling Crown

For the ninth consecutive year, Ritenour High School won the state wrestling championship as the meet wound up last night at Maplewood-Richmond Heights High School. Coach John Moore's Huskies finished with a surprisingly wide margin of 16 points over second-place Ferguson, after going into the finals with only a two-point edge.

Ritenour had a total of 87 points and Ferguson 71. Webster Groves was third with 70, followed by Maplewood 60, Missouri School for the Blind 52, and Kirkwood 50.

Three Ritenour wrestlers won state championships. They were: Pat Holmes, 95-pounder, who defeated Doug Barnes of Normandy in the final; Rich Irvin, 103 pounds, whose final victim was Curt Fridley of Maplewood; and 175-pound Charles Hartzell, who defeated Ben Bohara of Ferguson.

Manford Crawford of Ritenour lost a decision to Bob Knibbs of Ferguson in the 133 division.

In the team totals, a first place was worth 10 points, second place seven, third place four, and fourth place two.

Third and fourth places were determined by having all boys who had been defeated by a championship finalist wrestling each other in a consolation round Saturday morning.

Two championships were won by boys from the Missouri School for the Blind. They were Deke Edwards in the 112-pound division and Wayne Anderson in the 145.

Sumner Keeps League Record Perfect With Eighth Victory

League-leading Sumner High gained its eighth straight Public High League basketball victory last night, handing Washington Tech its seventh loss in eight outings, 74 to 57, in the weekly Saturday double-header at the Hadley Field House.

Sumner is the only undefeated squad in the circuit.

Tom Stanton's Beaumont Blue Jackets retained the runner-up spot in the standings by downing a spunky Soldan squad, 58 to 42, in the second game. Beaumont has a 7-1 record.

The Blue Jackets' only league loss was at the hands of Sumner.

Although the tall Beaumont quintet jumped off to a 13-2 lead in the first five and one-half minutes of play, they seemed unable to enlarge upon it as they crowded into a tight Soldan zone defense only to miss lay-ups under the backboards. Early in the fourth quarter, however, they started to catch fire, and ran up a 16-point lead by the end of the game.

Big 6-foot-7 Don Sullivan led the Blue Jacket scoring with 13 points, closely followed by hustling little Richard Autry, who had 12. Jim Kirk was high for Soldan with 12.

Jim Price's Sumner Bulldogs smasheed off to a 27-13 first quarter, and coasted in the rest of the way. Tom Weathersby dropped in 11 field goals and 2 free throws for 24 points to pace the Bulldogs. Washington's Sherill McKinney had 14 and Sam O'Neal 13.

Edwardsville Wins, Near Title As Kahoks Lose

Joe Lucco and his Edwardsville Tigers made an important stride toward the 1955-1956 Southwestern Illinois Conference prep basketball championship last night, parlaying a 72-54 victory over Belleville's Maroons with a 73-71 upset of the Collinsville Kahoks by Alton.

Edwardsville and Belleville were knotted, 44-44, after three quarters, when aMnnie Jackson and Govonor (cq) Vaughn put on an offensive show to spark the Tigers to a 28-point final quarter. The Tiger defense held Belleville scorless from the field during th first five minutes of the final quarter.

Jackson scored 27 points and Vaughn 17 in Edwardsville's ninth SW triumph. The Tigers have bowed just once in conference play.

A basket by Larry Holmes with 13 seconds left gave Alton the points it needed to clip Collinsville. The loss was the third for the Kahoks in 10 loop games, permitting Alton to vault into second place with a 712 record.

Holmes and Bill McAfoos each flipped in 22 markers for Alton, and Tom Nally added 14. Ailing Terry Bethel had 21 and Tom Jackson 22 for the Kahoks.

Mister Gus Captures San Antonio Handicap in a Blanket Finish

Honeys Alibi Is Second

ARCADIA, Calif., Feb. 11 (UP)—Mister Gus raced to the second stakes win of his career today as he scored a neck victory in the $59,300 San Antonio handicap, big stepping stone to the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

Running back to his big triump of last fall, when he captured the William Kyne handicap at Bay Meadows, Mister Gus stayed with the speedy Bobby Brocato among the leaders in the field of 13 and then came on in the stretch to score his photo-finish victory.

Honeys Alibi had less than a head margin over Boby Brocati. Hillary was fourth and the stretch-running Rejected was far to the rear.

Mister Gus ran the mile and an eighth in the excellent time of 1.49 flat, less than a full second off Your Host's track record of 1.48 1-5. The win stamped Mister Gus a major contender for the Santa Anita handicap two weeks hence.

The winner ran as an entry with his stablemate, Porterhouse, and they paid $11.50, $6.20 and $4.20 across the board. Honeys Alibi returned $17.60 and $7.50 and Bobby Brocato, teamed as an entry with Alidon, returned $3.10 for show.

Mister Gus clung to third position for most of the early stages. When Jockey Bill Boland called on him for a little more speed in the stretch, he responded.

Bobby Brocato never was able to get more than a length lead with Honeys Alibi clinging to his heels and just behind him came Colonel Mack, with Mister Gus fourth for the first quarter when he moved up to third.

It was going around the final turn that Bobby Brocato relinquished his lead. Honeys Alibi moved even with him but Mister Gus moved around them both. In the battle down to the wire it was a case of which horse had the most heart.

A blanket could have covered all three horses in the money at the finish. There was a delay of several minutes until the photographs settled definitely the order of finish.

Nail Third After Foul Claim in Race Won by Liberty Sun

MIAMI, Feb. 11 (UP)—Calumet Farm's Liberty Sun, ridden by wily Willie Hartack, the 1955 national jockey champion, uncorked a strong stretch run in the mud at Hialeah today to win the $34,350 Everglades Stakes before 25,326 fans.

Liberty Sun's strong finish down the middle of the track earned him a neck victory over the 22-1 shot, Pete's Folly, which had raced favored Nail into defeat.

Alsay, a 40-1 shot, made the stretch run with Liberty Sun and finished third, a nose in front of Nail.

Jockey Hedley Woodhouse, riding Nail, claimed a foul against Jockey Bobby Martin, aboard Pete's Folly, for interference in the run down the home lane. The stewards examined movies of the race and disqualified Pete's Folly from second position and placed him fourth. That moved Nail up to third money.

Nail led through the mile and one eighth race until the final 50 yards when Pete's Folly collared him. But Liberty Sun was coming fastest of all to win the top money of $25,050 and put Calumet Farm and Trainer H. A. (Ben) Jones well in front for honors at Hialeah meeting.

Liberty Sun ran the nine furlongs through the mud in the slow time of 1:54. As the second choice of the crowd he paid $7.70, $4.10 and $3.50 across the board.

Alsay returned $18.60 and $7, while Nail, as the 2-1 favorite, paid $3.30 to show.

Walker Not Interested.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 11 (UP)—Doak Walker, who retired as a halfback for the Detroit Lions after the 1955 season, has turned down an offer to help coach football at his alma mater, Southern Methodist.

C.Y.C. Battery Together Again

St. Pius Parish Ex-Teammates In Yankees' Training Camp

By Neal Russo

From St. Pius to St. Petersburg—it's a small world after all, a young battery at the Yankees' pre-camp school in Florida is finding out.

Not many years ago, Lefty Jim O'Reilly was firing them to Catcher Bob Hantak for the St. Pius team in the C.Y.C. juvenile baseball division. They lived only a few blocks apart.

O'Reilly, an allround athlete at St. Mary's High, was signed by Scout Lou Maguolo in 1952 and started out at Joplin. Hantak, a baseball and basketball standout at Roosevelt High, wasn't able to sign with the Yanks until the next year. Scout George Hasser, then Roosevelt coach, talked Hantak into becoming a Yankee.

It wasn't until the tailend of the 1954 season that the pair was reunited at Quincy in the Three-I League. O'Reilly, a speedball pitcher who is 6-feet-4 and 196 pounds, tossed to old pal Hantak in only one game.

O'Reilly's One-Hitter.

While Hantak, 6-2 and 190 pounds toiled at Quincy and Monroe (Cotton States League) last year, O'Reilly had an 8-8 mark at Birmingham, making a quick jump from Class B to AA. In the playoffs, he hit his peak, earning promotion to the parent roster for the first time. He came up with a one-hitter (facing only 30 and fanning 13) and a two-hitter.

Both O'Reilly and Hantak started out at different positions, Big Jim, a good hitter, played first base in his early years and Hantak held down third base.

Hantak, who has his work cut out for him with two other St. Louisans catching for the parent club (Berra and Howard), played goal for the St. Pius senior soccer team this year. Fred Koenig, Cards' farmhand, also was in goal, for Sacred Heart.

Both Hantak and Koenig also played C.Y.C. basketball this season, along with Bob Wiesler (St. Philip Neri), now with the Senators, and Bill Hain (St. Edward), who is assigned to the Orioles' San Antonio club. Hain, who played baseball in South America this winter, also referees C.Y.C. soccer.

The way Scouts Maguolo and Hasser have been signing them for the New York American Leaguers, it may not be long before the St. Louis-area contingent on the A.L. champions has a voting majority on the squad.

Six From This Area.

who used to pitch, too, at Norearea were invited to the Yanks' school. Besides O'Reilly and Hantak, they are: Norm Siebern, a great prospect in the outfield who is just out of service, having teamed up with Vinegar Bend Mizell; Jim Johnston, a slugging first baseman who used to pitch, too, at Normandy High; Bob Maness, infielder from Roosevelt High, and Lloyd Merritt, former Beaumont High and Stockham Legion pitcher who will be out of service soon.

In addition to Berra and Howard, St. Louis-area Yankee varsity men include Hank Bauer and Bob Turley of East St. Louis. Last spring the roster showed six from here — the above-named four in addition to Wiesler and Pitcher Lou Sleater.

No. 2 Ranked Dayton Swamps St. Francis

DAYTON, O., Feb. 11 (UP)—The University of Dayton Flyers tonight swamped St. Francis College of Pennsylvania, 76-41, for their 18th victory of the season.

The nation's second ranked Flyers led all the way except for the first three minutes when the game was tied at 6-all. Dayton held a 35-19 halftime lead.

St. Francis went into a stall with 10 full minutes remaining in the second half but was unable to hold off Dayton's pressing attack.

Big Billy Uhl dropped in 19 points for the Flyers while his teammates Arlen Bochorn and Al Sicking scored 18 and 14 respectively.

For St. Francis, who now has a season record of five wins and 12 defeats, Frank Puschauver was the team's high scorer with 18.

McKendree Wins Its 8th Conference Game

Front-running McKendree College of Lebanon gained its eighth Prairie College Conference basketball triumph in nine starts last night at New Baden, swampng Springfield (Ill.) Concordia, 119-85. The Bearcats, powered by Rich Herrin's 19 points and 18 by Sonny Hubbs, brought their overall mark to 18-6 for the campaign.

Marvin Reinhardt had 23 points for Concordia, which is 2-8 in the conference race, and 3-13 for the season.

Junior Medley Record In Valley Swim Meet

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Feb. 11 (AP)—The Tulsa Y.M.C.A. swim team clipped 1.3 seconds off the record for the 200-yard junior national medley relay in the annual Missouri Valley A.A.U. swim meet at the Hutchinson Naval Air station pool today.

The Tulsa team posted a time of 1:56.6. The Wichita Swim Club won the meet championship with 176 points.

Tax Men to Look Into Fund at Coast School

SEATTLE, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Internal Revenue Bureau today expressed interest in money received by athletes from the University of Washington grant-in-aid program or a much-discussed "downtown fund."

Roscoe C. (Torchy) Torrance, administrator of the "downtown fund," was preparing to tell his side of the story in a television and radio talk at 4:30 p.m. (St. Louis time) Sunday. The Times said Friday that athletes were given money from the fund in addition to the grant-in-aid "salaries" permitted by the conference.

And the University was hunting a coach to succeed Johnny (Cowboy) Cherberg, deposed, and an athletic director to replace Harvey Cassill, resigned.

Pacific Coast Conference Commissioner Victor O. Schmidt happened by just after the Cassill resignation this week. Schmidt said the visit was routine, but added it was his job to look into all matters of interest to the Conference. He held a meeting with Cherberg's assistant coaches but no word leaked out as to what took place.

Schmidt indicated there would be no conference action until the regular meeting in late may—if any is taken.

William E. Frank, the district director of the Internal Revenue Bureau, warned the football players that money from the grant-in-aid program or the "downtown fund" must be reported as income in tax returns.

The fund, operated by Washington alumni, is legal under conference rules up to a point. Alumni are permitted to pay transportation costs, including food and lodging of prospective athletes on visits to the campus. Payment of salaries or bonuses from such a fund is barred. Torrance has said the fund was tapped for "transportation, entertainment and expenses" of the prospects.

Perez, Knocked Down, Rallies to Win Bout

MAR DEL PLATA, Argendna, Feb. 11 (AP)—World flyweight champion, Pascual Perez of Argentina came back from a second-round knockdown to outpoint his countryman Antonio Gomez in a 10-round nontitle bout last night. Perez weighed 106 and Gomez 112½ pounds.

Gomez floored Perez in the second round for a count of three with a right cross to the chin. From there on, Perez had the best part of the fight and easily outpointed Gomez.

Aubrey Stars In Irish Win Over Middies

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 11 (AP) — Lloyd Aubrey singlehandedly carried Notre Dame during the first 10 minutes of the second half today in shooting the Irish to a 70-63 basketball victory over Navy before 3000.

Aubrey scored Notre Dame's first 10 points after the second half started, with the Irish ahead, 38-26. He scored 14 of their first 16 points to keep them ahead, 54-45, and of Notre Dame's 24 points halfway through the session he had 18.

Notre Dame achieved its biggest lead, 15 points, at 64-49, with six minutes to play, and Aubrey scored no more.

The six-foot-five center from St. Louis ran up a total of 25 points, although playing the entire second half threatened by eviction with four personal fouls he incurred in the first 20 minutes.

Miss Crocker, Patty Berg Tie For Golf Lead

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP)—Defending Champion Faye Crocker of Montevideo, Uruguay, and Patty Berg of St. Andrews, Ill., fired one-under-par 71s today and tied for the first round lead in the 36-hole Miami Beach women's open golf tournament.

Miss Berg watched a 15-foot putt hang on the lip at No. 18 and rob her of clear title to first place.

But she had no complaints.

"I'm pleased I played as well as I did and got a tie for the lead," she commented to spectators who groaned in unison when the ball refused to fall.

The leaders had identical 37-34—71 scores over the 6756-yard par 36-36—72 Normandy Shores Golf Club course.

Cathy Cornelius of Lake Worth, Fla., was in third place with a one-over-par 35-38—73. Mary Lena Faulk of Thomasville, Ga., and Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., deadlocked at 74.

Four others had 75s—Mickey Wright of San Diego, Calif., Joyce liske of Waterford, Wis., Louise Suggs of Sea Island, Ga., and Diane Garrett of Houston, Tex. Ruth Jessen of Seattle, Wash., paced the amateurs with a 77.

Yesterday's rain made the course play longer and the greens were slow, giving several of the girls putter trouble.

Scotts Need Victory To Remain in Race

The Scotts (4-2) need a victory over the Collegians (2-5) today to stay alive in the Muny Open basketball league at Sherman Park. Venice (5-1) is idle today and closes the season next week against Granite City Salvation Army (1-5).

In this afternoon's 1:30 opener, Fix Mix (3-3) opposes Granite City (1-5).

Mullanphy Has Three Boxers in Gloves Finals

Mullanphy Center and Jackson, Tenn., have three boxers each in the Golden Gloves open finals Thursday night at Kiel Auditorium.

Vashon Center, which went into Friday's semifinals with seven Open division battlers, came out with only two survivors—Lightweight Joe Shaw and Welterweight Leon Brooks, who is the defending champion. Only other teams with two Open finalists are Tandy and East St. Louis Youth Organization.

At Mullanphy, Coach Nelson Minter, bantam champion in the Argus tournament back in 1935, the year before the Golden Gloves started, has the Eddington twins as well as Milton Tate, 175-pounder, in the finals of the Globe-Democrat event.

Don Eddington meets Gerald Moore of Jackson in the 112-pound title bout and twin brother Dan Eddington faces a toughie in Tomy Reynolds, 112-pound champion last year who has moved up to the 118-pound division. Milton Tate's opponent will be William Clemons of East St. Louis.

Coach Rye Ridblatt of the Jackson team also has Brown McGhee, a busy mixer, who will oppose Jimmy Carter of Carr for the 126-pound crown, and Wiley Johnson, who will try to stop Brooks.

Shaping up as the best fight of the night (first bout will be at 8 o'clock) is the match between Shaw and Cornelius Fowler, the Buder Center southpaw who took the 118-pound crown in 1954, then was belted out in the first round of last year's meet.

William Anderson, the Tandy favorite who hasn't been as sharp as expected in this year's tourney, will box Vern Sanders, a rugged competitor from Centralia, Ill., V.F.W.

In the heavyweight final, Ben Bankhead, a former champion, from Tandy, will meet Lucius Tate of East St. Louis.

Muny Man at Meeting Of American Baseball Congress Delegates

Erwin Knueppe, member of the Muny baseball executive committee, will attend a meeting of Missouri regional representatives of the American Amateur Baseball Congress today at Jefferson City.

Knueppe is expected to give a report on the committee to Muny Baseball Association team representatives sometime this week.

If there is enough interest, two or three leagues from the Muny may enter the A.A.B.C., formerly the A.B.C. Regional champions are determined with the winners going to the national meet at Battle Creek, Mich., headquarters for the far-flung organization.

Wins With 199.
Harry Smith of Cleveland averaged 199 for 24 games to win the Michigan tenpin match game title. His total was 4777.

Russian Skaters Win Two World Title Races

Olympic Champion Defeated

OSLO, Norway, Feb. 11 (AP)—Russia's phenomenal speed skaters, who dominated the Winter Olympic Games, took a commanding lead after the first two of four events today in the world championships at Bislett Stadium.

Soviet skaters swept to victories in both the 500 meter and 5000 meter events and at day's end had the top five places in the over-all individual standings. The world championship is based on performances in four races. The 1500 and 10,000 meter tests are scheduled tomorrow.

America's three entries from Minneapolis, Eugene Sandvig, Pat McNamara and John Merket, all finished out of the running although Sandvig came in tenth in the 500 meter sprint in the best time of his life.

Yury Michailov won the 500 meter sprint, a distance of 546 yards and 2 feet, in 41.9 seconds, cracking the course record. He beat out the Olympic champion and world record holder, fellow Russian Eugeniy Grishin, who was second in 42.2.

The 5000 meter race, covering 3 miles, 188 yards, went to Oleg Goncharenko, Russia's former world champion, who outsped an old rival, Sigge Ericsson of Sweden, in 8 minutes, 7.7 seconds.

However, it was a third Russian, Robert Merkulov, who held the individual lead on the basis of his performances in both races. Merkulov was fifth in the 500 in :42.9 and also fifth in the 5000 in 8:12.3.

Merkulov had 92.130 points in the individual overall standings, followed by Michailov, 92.470; Grishin, 92.740; Goncharenko, 93.270; and Boris Shilkov, Olympic 5000 meter champion, 93.330. In the involved scoring points are awarded on a time basis, with the fewest points determining the winner.

The races were staged before a crowd of 30,000 in the sunbathed stadium where the skating events of the 1952 Olympics took place.

Herb Schwarz of St. Paul, manager of the United States skating team, said he was not disappointed with the Americans' showing.

"They'll do better tomorrow," said Schwarz. "The ice and weather conditions were excellent but it was too cold."

Sandvig, a 25-year-old pipe layer, said he felt he reached the best 500 of his career. His time of :43.4 placed him in tenth position.

Jim Hearn Leads In Ball Player Golf Tourney

SARASOTA, Fla., Feb. 11 (UP)—Pitcher Jim Hearn of the New York Giants shot a 36-38—74 over a rain-logged course today for a 146 and a two-stroke lead over the pack of baseball players in the annual Early Wynn invitational golf tournament.

John Gray of the Kansas City Athletics shot a 37-37—74 to match his first day's round and hold second place with a 148. A rain storm throughout the morning delayed play until after noon.

Tied for third place at 153 were Al Lopez, manager of the Cleveland Indians, Billy Goodman of the Boston Red Sox and Billy Sullivan of Sarasota, a former major leaguer.

Goodman, the only southpaw golfer among the leaders, shot a 74 today for what he said was the best round of golf he has ever played. Lopez also had a 74 in today's round.

Sullivan shot a second-round 73.

Other leaders included Paul Waner, 78-77—155; Wes Ferrell, former Cleveland pitcher, 79-77—156; Rudy Laskowski, manager of the Oklahoma City team, 78-82—160; Johnny Dell of St. Petersburg, 80-82—162, and Wynn, 82-84—166.

Defending champion, Heinie Manush, who has been ill recently, dropped out of the tournament because of the rain. Manager Freddie Hutchinson of the Cardinals, who shot a 73 yesterday, also failed to show up today.

Kroll Putts Way to Lead In Tucson Open With 199

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 11 (AP)—Sharp putting today earned Ted Kroll of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the lead in the $10,000 Tucson Open golf tournament at the end of the third round with a 54-hole total of 199.

Don January, a youngster from Abilene, Tex., who is playing better than he dreamed would happen, and Dow Finsterwald of Bedford Heights, Ohio, were one stroke behind with 10-under-par 200's.

Tommy Bolt of Chattanooga, Tenn., played what he called "the worst golf of my life" to finish in a tie with Stan Leonard of La Chute, Que., at 201.

Bolt had predicted he would shoot a 65 today but came in with 69.

The pros said the 6434-yard, par-70 El Rio course was tougher to play today. The tees were set back and the holes on the greens were put on the far side to make the course play about 6700 yards.

The veteral Kroll has had rounds of 65-65-66, but said he played better today than any time this week.

Kroll was five below par going off the 12th tee and then missed a 14-inch putt on the 14th to take a one-over-par five.

Dicksinson at 204.

Gardner Dickinson of Panama City Beach, Fla., who had shared the lead with Leonard at the start of the day's play, went three above par for a total of 204.

Perhaps the mose surprising player on the course is young January, who has played very little golf since leaving the air force last November. This is only his second tournament as a pro and he said he finds the pressure greater than anticipated.

He has rounds of 64-68-68.

Finsterwald, another of golf's youngsters, earned his 68 today by chipping a 60-foot eagle on the 550-yard ninth hole and then getting a birdie on the 18th to make up for an earlier bogey.

Leonard, five-time Canadian P.G.A. champion, ran into trouble on the seventh and eighth holes, going over par on both to take an even par for the day.

Move Begun to Bring English Soccer Team Here Late in May

Opponent For C.Y.C. All-Stars

By Dent McSkimming

An added incentive has been placed before the four teams playing in the C.Y.C. soccer championship games at Fairground Park. In addition to the league pennant, which is prize enough, the players will be seeking recognition for selection on a C.Y.C. all-star team which would compete in a prospective postseason game against a European touring team.

League Secretary Bob Guelker announced last night that the C.Y.C. has opened negotiations leading to the appearance here of the Everton club of the English League. Such a visit would be one stop on the English team's tour of the United States late in May.

It will be recalled that such a C.Y.C. all-star team faced the attractive Souchaux club of France here last spring. Although outclassed, the C.Y.C. players came through in better shape than some anticipated and league officials think they would do better on a second try.

Looking for a second straight victory in the senior title playoff series, St. Ambrose today opposes Sacred Heart in the 2:30 game of a triple-header at Fairground, Grounds 2. Led by Fr. Bernie Kuhn, Sacred Heart two weeks ago upset St. Pius in the opening round. St. Ambrose won from St. Agatha on that program. As a result, the loser of today's St. Agatha-St. Pius game will be eliminated as a title contender. (There were no games last Sunday, all schedules being suspended because of the snow.)

Fourteen junior class teams play the first round of seven games in the local portion of the national junior championship tournament.

Khoury League teams will play doubleheaders at Fairground, Grounds 3, and at Carondelet. Municipal League clubs resume play with single games at Fairground, Grounds 4 and at Cherokee. The Fairground game, at 2 p.m., will be sandwiched in between two C.Y.C. games in which the stake is fifth place in the final regular league standing.

Kutis Works Out Today.

Kutis keeps in trim for its Amateur Cup match of next Sunday by playing a practice game with the Carondelet club at 11 a.m. today. The action will be at Carondelet Park with Russ Murphy working out with his team for the first time in almost two years. He has just returned from Army service.

Spanish Can Clinch Flag.

By winning, or even gaining a tie score with Tabacchis today at Cherokee Park, the Spanish Society team would clinch the Municipal League championship. . . . Former Spanish team manager, Benito (Chick) Fernandez, is recuperating from a knee injury which hospitalized him for 11 days.

Train Late for Football Game, Court Orders Road to Pay

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 11 (AP)

A MINNEAPOLIS attorney today was awarded a $61.57 verdict against the Chicago & Northwestern Railway because a late train made him and two client guests miss most of last fall's Minnesota - Northwestern football game at Evanston, Ill.

Robert Greenberg said the road had advertised that its "football special" would reach Evanston at noon of Saturday, Oct. 8. Instead, he said, the train pulled in at 1:37 p.m. and he and his guests saw only the last half of the game.

Judge Betty Washburn in Municipal Court said the railroad failed to produce sufficient evidence that breakdown of two engines, attributed as cause of the late train, was not due to its own fault or neglect.

The railroad indicated it would appeal the finding to district court. The verdict represented refund for the price of the three tickets.

Trout Opener Prospects Best in 3 Years

PROSPECTS of good fishing conditions for the opening of Missouri's trout season March 1 are better than in the previous two years, Dr. G. B. Herndon, chief of the Conservation Commission's fisheries section, told Outdoors yesterday.

"We have been getting some rains, which have helped the trout streams considerably," he said. "They were very low because of the prolonged drouth.

"If we get more moisture between now and the season's opening, as expected, trout fishermen should have a good start."

Recent precipitation enabled the commission to stop pumping water to its trout hatcheries at Montauk and Roaring River state parks.

In preparation for the trout season, the commission has been working on stream improvements at Montauk, Roaring River and Bennett Spring, the third state park stocked with rainbows.

Dr. Herndon said all trout placed in the streams will be at least 10 inches long and average one-half pound each.

As rainbows are not native to Missouri, only a small percentage of the fish live the year around in the state's streams. The commission is required to stock heavily to keep the sport going.

Reservations are reported filled for opening day in the lodges and cabins at the three state parks. Fishermen desiring reservations for later dates should write to the park superintendent at the following locations: For Montauk, Darien, Mo.; for Roaring River, Cassville, and for Bennett Spring.

Accommodations Improved.

The Park Board spent about $30,000 improving overnight accommodations at the three parks for the new trout season. Rates have been $3.50 for a room in the lodge; $4 to $5 per person for a cabin.

In the three state parks, fishermen must obtain a $1 daily permit in addition to having the regular state license.

Only a fishing license is required for taking trout in special management areas also stocked by the commission. These include: Indian creek, Capps creek, Roubidoux creek, Eleven Point river, Dry creek and Meramec Spring branch.

The best trout fishing is in the upper part of Indian creek, in Newton and McDonald counties; practically all of Roubidoux and Capps creeks; a seven-mile stretch on the Eleven Point downstream from Greer Spring, and one and one-half miles on upper Dry creek, below the Westover Hatchery.

Most rainbow fishermen from St. Louis go to Montauk State Park, although many visit Bennett Spring.

Routes to the state parks from St. Louis are as follows:

Montauk—U.S. 66 to Cuba, Mo., south on State Highway 19 to Salem, west on State Highway 32 to State Highway 119 and follow this road into the park.

Roaring River—U.S. 66 to Springfield, then U.S. 60 to Monett, State Highway 37 to Cassville and State Highway 112 into the park.

Bennett Spring—U.S. 66 to Lebanon, then on State Highway 64 to the park.

Limits for trout are six daily and 10 in possession. The season will last until Oct. 31.

'Just Keep Bait in Water.'

Police Capt. Lester Martin of St. Louis believes the best fishing advice he ever received came from the late William G. Panzer, then the city's fire chief.

Panzer told Martin: "Forget about the sun, the moon and the rain. Just keep that bait in the water."

The police captain said he and his wife, also an avid fisherman, have followed that advice successfully.

"I certainly do not claim to be an expert fisherman, but we do catch fish because we work hard at it," Martin explained. "Our bait is always in the water."

He and Mrs. Martin took 12 bass, one a six-pounder; on a quick trip they made to Norfork lake in Arkansas last month. The weather, mild when they started, suddenly became very cold.

Capt. Martin has a suggestion for night fishing that anglers might keep in mind for this summer. Instead of the usual method of fishing by lantern light with minnows as bait, he fishes in darkness, using a Shannon spinner as a lure.

"I put a green pork chunk—not a pork rind—on a trailer hook attached to the spinner," he said. "I also bob tail the lure.

"Get in deep water and cast toward the bank. By listening carefully, you can determine if your casts are hitting well."

Quail-Shooting Film.

The Missouri Quail Hunters will meet Tuesday night at the American Legion Post 154 Hall, Kienlen and Idadale avenues, St. Louis county, to discuss plans for the shoot-to-kill pheasant stake in the coming field trial. A sound film entitled "Exhibition shooting" will be shown. Any interested sportsman is invited to attend.

Miss Carpenter Married at Home

AN assortment of spring flowers—iris, stock and snapdragon — decorated the living room mantel at Mr. and Mrs. James M. Carpenter's home, 9 Lindworth lane, Ladue, yesterday afternoon for the wedding of the Carpenters' daughter, Miss Isobel Sutherland Carpenter, and James Vance Howerton. The candlelighted ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. W. Davidson McDowell of Ladue Chapel after which the guests, members of the immediate families, remained for a reception.

A sheath dress of natural imported silk shantung, designed with cap sleeves and a scooped neckline, was worn by the bride with a melon-shaded cartwheel hat of shantung straw. Her flowers were white orchids arranged in a corsage.

Miss Caroline Carpenter, only attendant for her sister, was in midnight blue silk, its bouffant skirt complemented by a short straight jacket which had bracelet sleeves and a mandarin neckline set off by a large bow in back. She carried a small bouquet of pink roses.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. David B. Karraker, 411 West Adams avenue, Kirkwood, and the late Vance Howerton, was attended by Paul Jaenicke as best man.

Mrs. Carpenter's ensemble was navy chiffon with which she wore violets. The bridegroom's mother wore wedgwood blue taffeta and a white sequin-adorned hat, with a corsage of white flowers. Coming from out-of-town for the wedding was Mrs. Frank Rollins of Columbia, Mo., cousin of the bride.

Both the bride and her husband attended Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau. After a honeymoon in New Orleans they will live in Rolla, Mo.

Miss Lurie Married To M. C. Finkelman By Candlelight

MISS VIVIAN GLORIA LURIE became the bride last Sunday of Marshall Chester Finkelman of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Jacob R. Mazur in the Gourmet Room of the Park Plaza Hotel. Pink carnations, snapdragons and lighted tapers provided a setting for the wedding and subsequent breakfast.

The former Miss Lurie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Lurie, 7461 Stanford avenue, University City; the bridegroom is the son of Max Yale Finkelman of Chicago and the late Mrs. Lucille Finkelman.

The bride, who carried white orchids and lilies of the valley, wore a white barathea gown trimmed with lace and seed pearls. A chantilly lace gown secured her tulle veil.

Mrs. Raymond Pultman, aunt of the bride, was matron of honor and Miss Patricia Kaufmann, St. Joseph, Mo., was bridesmaid. A cousin of the bride, Nina Kagan, served as junior bridesmaid. They wore white embroidered starched organza gowns over pink faille and matching headpieces. Their flowers, pink camellias, were arranged with pink tulle.

The bridegroom had his father as best man. Ushers were a brother, Pvt. Neal Finkelman; a cousin, Martin Rosenfeld, Chicago; the bride's brother, Jerome Louis Lurie, and her uncle, Henry Wellen.

Sharon Friedman, cousin of the bride, was flower girl in ruffled white tulle over pink. She held a basket of pink roses and camellias.

Mr. Finkelman and his bride, after a month's honeymoon in Acapulco, Mexico, will live in Chicago.

Kogler-Mangelsdorf Engagement Told

Kay Spriggs Bride Of D. E. Glasscock

IN a candlelight ceremony at Home Heights Presbyterian Church Feb. 4, Miss Kay Maurine Spriggs became the bride of Duane Eldon Glasscock. The Rev Eugent Conover performed the ceremony after which the bride's mother, Mrs. John Marion Miller, and Mr. Miller gave a reception at their home, 3906 Geraldine avenue, St. Ann.

The bride chose a satin and tulle gown, with folds of tulle outlining the portrait neckline and a hooped skirt, edged in chantilly lace, sweeping into a train. Her fingertip veil was held to a lace and seed pearl cap.

Miss Carole Jean Spriggs was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Frances Jolene Scott, Miss Sondra Lee Peterson and Miss Donna Jeanne Chapman. All were attired in aqua faille frocks with satin-framed scooped necklines and bows at the back. They carried pink feathered carnations. Linda Soenkson, flower girl, wore white bouffant satin and taffeta and carried a small bouquet of the carnations.

Loren Terry Glasscock served as best man for his brother whose other brothers, Albert Richard and Kenneth Lynn Glasscock, were ushers. They are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Edward Glasscock of Springfield, Ill.

The bride attended Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau, where she became a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. In the past two summers she made extensive tours of Europe and the Scandinavian countries. Her husband was graduated from Springfield (Ill.) Junior College and attended the University of Illinois. They will fly to San Francisco on their honeymoon and afterward reside at 7340 Burrwood avenue, Normandy.

Too Much to Do

Lonesome? No Time For It on the Farm

By Leonard Hall

WHEN we first came to live at Possum Trot Farm, some 10 years ago, our friends were prone to ask, "Don't you get lonesome, away off there in the country? And how on earth do you manage to fill your time, especially in winter?" The truth of the matter is that these years have flown on swift wings. Season follows season in unbelievably swift succession, each new one arriving before we're ready. Summer chases spring and autumn is here and gone before we know it. The problem is never one of filling time, but of finding it. It is true that, at least on these cold mornings, we no longer spring from bed with the alacrity of former years. Yet we're up before daylight and dusk seldom finds us with everything completed which we'd planned for this particular day. So now, although not all our friends agree that this is the best or the only life, they no longer question our enjoyment of it.

As for being lonesome, it seems to me this sensation is known most keenly when one is in the heart of some great city surrounded by strangers. How could you be lonesome when you live with feet planted firmly on your own soil and with the myriad marvels of nature all around you? The swinging constellations on a clear winter night may give you a sense of man's comparative insignificance in a vast universe; yet these same stars come down overhead in the still air until they seem close and friendly. The cattle waiting at the barns for their evening ration of hay, the familiar songbirds of midsummer, young calves in spring pastures, autumn's harvest and the marvelous mantle of color flung carelessly across the October hills, all these bring a conviction of "belonging" which is the very opposite of aloneness.

I think there can be few modes of existence so demanding as life on the farm. This is a matter of living with weather and animals and growing crops. Yet if there is ever a time when one can close his eyes to the demands which all these make and thus escape for a few weeks—it is during February. This month is almost the low ebb of the year. Work in the fields is at a standstill and the problems of winter are under control. The routine of feeding is well in hand. Yet in spite of all this, a February trip away from the farm is no mere matter of putting a note in the milk bottle, discontinuing the daily paper, speaking to the janitor and the policeman on the beat and taking off. Far from it.

● THE CHIEF THING is that when we leave, there are still 100 mouths left behind which must be fed each day until our return. This will be Matt's greatest concern; but even before we go, we must estimate the pile of baled hay in the barn, plan special rations for the calves and young bulls, make careful lists of calving dates, decide when to turn old Rufus out in the pasture. We've already taken Mike to his temporary home at Oakville Kennels and, although the parting was sad as always, we're sure the Hoechsts will send him home several pounds heavier and with his red coat long and shiny.

Sad to say, there's no problem this year about Veronica. The little old gray lady passed to her reward not long ago, after a useful life which considerably exceeded the normal span for felines. There is, of course, a big black and white cat at the barn and a new gray and white tabby which took up residence in the granary just last week. Matt will give them milk now and again, but mostly we'll count on them to keep the mice under control.

● IT ISN'T EASY to plan farm work during our absence with any degree of exactitude because of the constant uncertainty of weather. So we set down the tasks we want to try to get done in the order of their importance; and these will be undertaken as time and weather permit. First and always, of course, comes care of the livestock; an endless round which takes a couple of hours each morning and evening. Nor is it difficult to fill the rest of the day with something worthwhile. One thing which makes our long trips possible is that, without ever asking, we know that now and then our neighbors will drop by to see how Matt is getting along. There'll be Ern Stricklin and Lovell Hatridge and Harry Russell and any of a dozen others to call upon if any emergency should arise. In town I'm quite sure we could come home after two months' absence to find that nobody had even known we were away.

Even the packing for a long trip which covers 8000 miles by car and another 3000 by air; with lectures on most evenings, occasional dinner parties, and side trips into the Everglades and the Smokey mountains, is no small chore. We're heading east for the Alleghenies and the Blue Ridge in real winter weather and will eventually end up in the tropics. But this is Ginnie's department and in it she has become expert through long experience. My task is to pack the business part of the equipment; sound projector, speaker and film; maps and travel guides; movie and still cameras and binoculars; typewriter and its accompanying paraphernalia.

When this column runs, we'll be well along on the eastward leg of our trek and spending the weekend in Williamsburg; having stopped at Henderson, Louisville, Charleston, West Virginia and historic Charlottesville on the way. It promises to be an interesting trip and we'll hope to bring you its highlights as we travel.

TEN YEARS OF TELEVISION

In One Short Decade, It Has Become the Spellbinder of the 20th Century, With Impact on Practically Every Phase of Life

By William Ewald

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (UP).

TWO machines have changed the face of America in our time. One is the automobile. The other the television set.

The car took us out of our homes. The TV set has put us back.

We've had 10 years of television now. It was 1946, with the end of the war, that the great assembly lines could begin to turn to mass output of sets priced for the average pocketbook. We have come a long way in those ten years. To a point where 63,000,000 of us clustered together one night to watch a single program. There has never been such a means of reaching people in the world's history.

Typical of America, this acceptance of the new is approached nowhere else. In 1946 there were 6400 sets in the United States. Now there are some 40,000,000. Britain has 4,500,000; Russia about 700,000.

We have spent 15 billion dollars in their purchase and repair. In those 10 years the number of outlets has gone from six to 459. There were 476 miles of TV cable in 1946. Now it is a 70,000-mile web.

TV has had an impact on our politics, our movie going, our play patterns, our sports events. It has given many the first look at a Senate committee in action, the birth of a baby. It's made a national hero of a shoe cobbler, a has-been of some stars.

The advertising world has undergone a revolution. There are more than 3300 firms using TV as a pitchman. They shelled out one billion dollars in advertising fees to TV last year.

TV has become the spellbinder of the 20th century. There has never been anything like it. It is the wild west show, the circus, the vaudeville hall, the political stump, the ballpark, the classroom, the escape narcotic of our age. It has stretched out more Americans on couches than Sigmund Freud.

Russell Lynes, author of "The Tastemakers" and a self-described culture-snoop, puts it this way:

"The Model-T created the suburbs and the suburban pattern of living—dormitory towns where people work in one place and live in another. TV's change has been in the field of taste. It is reducing regional differences.

"Take a simple thing like the Sears-Roebuck catalogue. They tell me that once they put out six catalogues for six different regions. Now, they put out one. We're wearing the same clothes and buying the same sofas in New England and California."

Margaret Mead, a student of primitive and civilized cultures, explains the watching-virus this way: "The investment in a TV set is a very large one for some families and so naturally, they stay at home to look at it. One important thing about TV is that it has changed our methods of taking care of children—parents can now shut them up in a room, using the TV set as a baby-sitter. And it has provided something to do on a date, especially for those young people who have little to say to each other."

BUT TV's impact goes much beyond this. It has changed our living habits and transformed our cities. It has dotted our roofs with aerials, filled our sinks with dirty dishes, converted us into watch-and-eaters, and sent us scurrying to oculists. It has provided conversation fodder while destroying conversation.

It has created a new set of culture-heroes: Lucille Ball, Jack Webb, Hal March, Betty Furness, Ed Sullivan, Jackie Gleason and Gino Prato. It has resurrected Charlie Chan and Hopalong Cassidy, converted Davey Crockett and a chimpanzee named J. Fred Muggs into celebrities of some note, and drained and cast aside such performers as Red Buttons, Wally Cox and Dagmar.

According to CBS research based on Nielsen reports, the average family now watches TV more than five hours a day. Or, to put it more graphically, more than half the time the ordinary individual spends sleeping. And curiously enough, there is no evidence that our interest in the new medium is slackening. We are watching more each year. Children have been bitten badly by the bug. One survey of youngsters made in Palo Alto, Calif., noted that 59 per cent of the kids stayed at home more after getting TV, 53 per cent read less, 13 per cent played less in groups.

And parents, the survey shows, are watching more than the kids. Where all this is taking us, no one knows for sure. But one thing is certain: In the short space of 10 years, the come-hither eye of TV has fixed this nation in an almost hypnotic trance. We are becoming victims of what the psychiatrists are beginning to call "narcotic disfunction." And there is no sign that we are ready to break away.

Television was conceived in the laboratory but it spent its infancy in the corner bar. It was nursed by bartenders, and beer paid the early doctor bills.

In 1946 most of the nation's 6400 sets were in the New York area and the majority were perched at one end of saloons where Milton Berle pulled in more customers than a free lunch.

One of its parents was Vladamir Zworykin of RCA who invented the original iconoscopic electron tube—the first electronic "eye" for the TV camera. It happened in 1923. It made TV possible.

Another parent was Dr. Allen B. du Mont, the Brooklyn-born inventor who now heads the giant Du Mont Laboratories. Du Mont, working with $500 capital, turned a New Jersey basement garage into a lab and invented a long-life cathode-ray tube. It happened in 1931. It made TV probable.

TELEVISION had a long gestation period. There were transmissions before World War I, but only a handful of viewers. There were some milestones. NBC televised scenes from "Susan and God" with Gertrude Lawrence in 1938. A ball game between the Dodgers and Cincinnati was telecast in 1939. And on April 30, 1939, NBC opened the New York World's Fair by televising President Franklin Roosevelt's appearance there.

The war held TV back. Then came 1946. Sets were expensive. They were owned by the wealthy, by network officials, by advertising agency men. The fare was pretty thin—wrestling, some baseball, shoddy variety shows and Hoot Gibson movies.

Radio was king-pin. Its billings amounted to $390,000,000 annually and it was penetrating 98 per cent of all American homes. But let's let Du Mont tell about then and now:

"The bar business got TV started, at least it did in New York. I would say that about 50 per cent of the sets were in bars, restaurants and so forth.

"In '46, most sets used a seven or 10-inch screen. Most people don't realize it, but there has been a lot of improvement in sets since then. Not just in the size of screens, but in the quality of the picture. For example, you don't have to darken your room any more to get contrast."

There have been other changes, too, points out Du Mont. "In '46, the range of TV stations was 30 or 40 miles," he said. "Today, good sets get a station 75 to 100 miles away. In the early days, if $500 was spent on a program it was about par. Now, no one thinks anything of spending $100,000 or more for a network show.

"The biggest change has been in the expansion of the co-axial cable. In 1946, about all we had were New York and Washington. Now, we not only blanket the country, but the possibility of a real international TV isn't far off."

THAT is the view of the inventor-business man. But what about the viewpoint of one of the men who puts shows together? Fred Coe, pioneer producer in TV, probably is best qualified to speak on behind-the-scenes changes. His "Philco" dramas and spectaculars like "Peter Pan" are high-water marks in the history of TV. Coe tells it this way:

"Ten years ago, there was no budget to speak of. TV drama was in its experimental stages. The top fee for acting was $250. For smaller parts, a performer was paid $5 to $15 including rehearsals. Everything was done in small studios — "Twelfth Night" was done with one camera.

"There was no one way of doing things. Every new innovation was a precedent. I drew from French motion pictures where the camera acted as a person and put on a half-hour dramatic show called "First Person."

"Later on, stars appeared on TV for as much as $2000 with about $1000 of it going to the Equity Actor's Fund. Now, someone like, say, Mary Martin, gets $40,000 to $50,000 for a single shot." Her "Peter Pan" drew 63,000,000 viewers.

That's the way Coe sees it. What about the performer? Well, Dennis James, emcee and sports announcer, has been in the performing end as long as anyone. He started in TV back in 1938.

"Back before the war," says James, "I was doing two shows on TV for $50 a week. I was working as a disk jockey on radio and I used to get guests on my TV show by telling them I'd play their records on my radio show. "I came back from the war to find TV in a kind of state of suspended animation. In '46 and '47, TV stations were offering sponsors as much as a half-hour free commercial time just to get them on it.

"It was a period in which we were trying to get the agencies and the sponsors interested. We were working for peanuts. Just for the experience. And you know, a funny thing—I remember that if one guy had a TV set, all his neighbors would drop in and drink up all his beer. It used to be pretty hard on the guy that owned the set.

"In fact, I heard so many complaints that it got to the point where I would announce over the air—'If you're watching this from somebody else's home, why don't you bring over the beer?'"

Today TV is a bounteous horn of plenty or a bottomless stomach. It depends upon your vantage point. It is a study in contrasts. It is a wooer of new talent, a creator of a new race of giants, a bestower of wealth and stardom. But it is also a fickle and sometimes ruthless glutton.

It has dropped multi-million dollar contracts in the laps of such performers as Milton Berle, Jackie Gleason, Martin and Lewis and Ed Sullivan. But it has tried to chew up others like Imogene Coca, Wally Cox and Red Buttons.

THE first giant of television was Berle. He engineered the "breakthrough." He picked TV up on his shoulders and carried it over the hump. He did it in 1948. There were about 175,000 receivers in the nation that year. TV was a sometimes thing.

"Back in 1947," recalls Berle, "I did an all-night telethon for a heart benefit on Dumont. I stayed on for eight hours without stopping. I got to like it. A little after that, the Texas Co. decided to go into TV and I was approached by their ad agency and asked if I had any ideas. I said—'how about doing something I've been doing for 25 years—a "variety-vaudeville show?" We put it on June 8, 1948. During the summer we started to gain momentum and that was it."

That first season, Berle did 39 shows on TV plus 39 more on radio.

"That first show cost $12,000," remembers Berle. "Now, my show costs $232,000—that's what it costs. During that first year, you could get a top performer for a few hundred dollars. I got Bill Robinson for $450 and Pearl Bailey for $350. Now, a guest gets $7500 to $15,000."

Berle is on only 13 times a season now, but he plans to cut it down to four appearances next season.

"This business is constant hard work," he says. "And there's just as much pressure on me now as there was when I was on every week."

Berle, however, is one of the lucky ones. He can see the goal in sight. He has an exclusive 30-year contract with N.B.C. which he signed in 1951. But he won't have to work that long to retire.

"Under the terms of the contract," explains Berle, "I have to do only 25 more shows within the next four years.

"I'm not a kid anymore. I'm going on 48 and I'd like a normal life. I've got a wonderful wife and home life and I'd like to give more to it. Right now, I'm really beat."

Beat is a word you hear all over television. It is an exhausting medium. Martha Raye, for example, sometimes goes to a hospital for two days after her show—to rest and get some quiet.

"I don't move a muscle," says Martha.

Nothing, says Martha, approaches TV for impact. "It's the most important medium today. TV is the hardest to do, but I prefer it to any of the others, not only because I'm grateful but also because I enjoy doing it. It appeals to the ham in me—where else can you get 42,000,000 people looking at you at once?"

But Martha, like all comedians, faces a problem — the danger of over-exposure.

"Once a month is the answer," says Martha, "then they don't tire of seeing you."

OVER-EXPOSURE is the constant worry of the TV artist. It caught up with Cox who starred as "Mr. Peepers" from July, 1952 to June, 1955. Cox takes it rather philosophically. He lives in an East Side Manhattan apartment and busies himself making furniture, jewelry and lamps. He took a turn in a Las Vegas nightclub last year and flopped.

"I've never liked nightclubs and they have never liked me," he says. Cox thinks the performers who have the best chance to survive on TV are those who build up the least dramatic relationship with their audience — "I don't mean anything bad by that, I mean the kind of show that is very casual and friendly. Situation comedy is usually not ideal for exploiting this 'least dramatic' feature.

"What do I think about the draining powers of TV? Well, I'm not supposed to tell you, I think. You see, I've still got five and a half years to go on an NBC contract. But it gives one pause, doesn't it?"

"Embarrassing Moment"

Lincoln's Abortive Duel Near Alton

By Edward S. Kifch

CHICAGO, Feb. 11 (AP).

IN the most embarrassing incident of his life, Abraham Lincoln once was carried to the verge of a duel with a rival politician. This time, the sword was almost mightier than the pen, but persuasive lawyer friends finally proved stronger than either.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN... FOUR YEARS AFTER DUEL INCIDENT.

The dueling incident was the result of anonymous poison pen letters Lincoln sent to Simeon Francis, his friend and editor of the Sangamo Journal of Springfield, Ill., in 1842. It sobered him to the point where he never denied it but, at the same time, he never desired to discuss it.

It involved James Shields, a bachelor of 32, who had been a lawyer for 10 years and a member of the Legislature, and Lincoln, then a struggling lawyer of 33.

Lincoln's skill with a pen made Shields the prime target in a series of letters to the editor signed "Rebecca." His was the second of four "Rebecca" letters published. The fourth, and fatal one, he admitted writing but actually it was concocted by his fiance Mary Todd and her friend Julie Jane.

The political atmosphere of the day placed Shields, a Democrat, and Lincoln, a Whig, at odds. Both had served together in the State Legislature. Shields at this time was State Auditor.

The first "Rebecca" letter was largely a lament for the sad predicament in which the people of Illinois found themselves. It concerned a visit by Rebecca to Jeff in "Lost Township" and was published Aug. 10.

Lincoln's second "Rebecca" letter was printed in the Journal Sept. 2. It relates that Rebecca stepped over to the house of her neighbor "to see if his wife, Peggy, was as well as mought be expected, and hear what they called the baby," writes Ruth Painter Randall in "Biography of a Marriage."

● JEFF WAS MAD about the current situation in regard to the state bank paper and taxes in which Lincoln's views were opposed to those of Shields's. Finally Jeff burst out:

"Shields is a fool as well as a liar. With him truth is out of the question, and as for getting a good bright passable lie out of him you might as well try and strike a fire from a cake of tallow."

Continued Jeff: "I seed him (Shields) when I was down in Springfield last winter. They had a sort of gatherin' there one night among the grandees they called a fair. Shields was floating from one lady to another and on his very features could be read his thoughts:

"Dear girls, it is distressing, but I cannot marry you all. Too well I know how much you suffer, but do remember it is not my fault that I am so handsome and so interesting."

This letter must have galled Shields, a native son of Ireland, but he said nothing. The third letter was like the first. It dealt with politics and not so much with Shields.

The fourth "Rebecca" letter was dated Sept. 8 and used the same backwoods characters to ridicule Shields.

It coyly admitted that Shields was "rather good looking than otherwise" and with blushes and hesitating "widowed modesty" Rebecca suggests as compromise a matrimonial alliance with Shields. "And I don't think, upon the whole, that I'd be sich a bad match neither—not over 60 and am just four feet three in my bare feet, and not much more around the girth . . . and isn't marrying better than fightin', though it does sometimes run into it?" the letter teased.

● SHIELDS was the subject of a saucy jingle printed in the Journal on Sept. 16. Signed "Cathleen," it celebrated the marriage: "Rebecca, the widow, has gained Erin's son."

Shields could take no more. He called upon the editor and demanded the name of the author. Editor Francis requested a day to reflect upon it. He called on Lincoln, who with the editor knew Mary Todd was the writer of the last letter. He told Francis to say to Shields that "I am responsible."

Lincoln thought no more of it until about two weeks later when Shields demanded satisfaction.

As the challenged party, Lincoln had the choice of weapons and he shrewdly selected long, cavalry broadswords. Since Shields was the shorter man, it was obvious who had the advantage.

Lincoln methodically set down the conditions of the duel: Weapons ("cavalry broadswords of the largest size"); time (Thursday evening at 5); place ("within three miles of Alton, Ill."). But the most detail was reserved for what Lincoln called position.

"To be on each side of a plank 10 feet long and nine to 12 inches wide firmly fixed on edge of the ground, as the line between us which neither is to pass his foot over upon forfeit of his life," the future President wrote.

● ON SEPT. 22 the two parties traveled by horse and buggy and by an old horse ferry and met on a sand bar called "Bloody Island" in the middle of the river, beyond the Illinois laws against dueling.

Lincoln sat on a log and practiced swings and swishes in the air with his cavalry broadsword, recalls Carl Sandburg in his book "Abraham Lincoln," while friends, lawyers, seconds on both sides held long conferences.

Then a statement was drawn up declaring that "although Mr. Lincoln was the writer of the article signed 'Rebecca' in the Sangamo Journal on Sept. 2 he had no intention of injuring the personal or private character or standing of Mr. Shields as a gentleman or a man, that he did not think that said article could produce such an effect; and had he anticipated such an effect he would have forebore to write it; said article was written solely for political effect, and not to gratify any personal pique against Mr. Shields for he had none and knew of no cause for any."

Thus ended the famous Lincoln-Shields duel as the opponents shook hands and departed. But Lincoln always considered the affair his most embarrassing moment.

Top Ways to Annoy People

Creator of 'They'll Do It Every Time' Spotlights Pests' Habits

(Editors Note: During the 30 years Jimmy Hatlo has been drawing "They'll Do It Every Time," he has been deluged by readers with examples of man's inhumanity to man, which makes him, whether he likes it or not, an authority on the subject. With a tip of the Hatlo hat to his contributors, the artist and author has drawn on this rich background to prepare two articles, of which this is the first, spotlighting the pests who annoy the most people from coast to coast.)

By Jimmy Hatlo

IF I were a philosopher, the one thing that would keep me in a state of perpetual wonderment is the constant cussedness we human beings exhibit toward one another in our everyday life.

Recently, leafing through a batch of cartoons I've drawn during the last few years, I thought what a peculiar thing it is that my living, in part, depends on the fact that many people are inconsiderate of others.

Out of the 700 letters a week containing suggestions for "They'll Do It Every Time," more than 90 per cent deal with this aspect of human personality. So I'm beginning to feel like an authority on the subject and have prepared a list of the six easiest ways to get yourself disliked. Of course there are many more ways than just six, but for the sake of classification we'll lump them into six groups. Each group is represented by a type.

High on the list is the slob type. In my cartoons he's called Jerkley, Winesap, Carbolick or such other unflattering names that occur.

Now the slob doesn't make things tough on his family, friends, neighbors and business associates out of malice. He makes life hard for them chiefly because he is too dumb or too lazy to give a thought to anyone but himself.

The slob is the guy who backs the family sedan down the driveway until it straddles the sidewalk, and then proceeds to wash it with the hose. His neighbors have to walk out in the street to get around it and, at that, probably wind up with wet feet.

He's the guy who bowls over little children and old ladies in his charge to get through a revolving door and then, once outside, stands blocking the entrance while he lights a cigar.

Not all slobs are men. There are she-slobs, too. Sometimes they even come in bunches. Like the women's club that takes a block of 12 seats at the most popular play in town and then sets up such chatter that other playgoers for eight rows around can't hear the lines. One woman wants to use up what's left of the club treasury to eat at El Clippo after the theater. Another is set on the Blue Oyster. And so right there they have a club meeting. No wonder actors have ulcers.

And of course there's the slob who stands for five minutes buzzing for the elevator. It comes. It's crowded. So what does he do? Right. He decides that then is the time to put on his raincoat. Result: two pairs of broken spectacles, one shiner and assorted contusions.

SECOND on my list is the cheapskate.

I'm convinced that there is no walk in life, any place in the world, where the cheapskate doesn't abound.

For instance, do you happen to own a deep freeze? You do? Now let me make a guess about something. I'll guess that during two periods of the year you have a hard time finding room in that freezer to put the stuff you buy.

Those two periods are the spring and the fall. And the reason there's no room for your stuff is that some of your free-loading friends have it stuffed with their fish during the fishing season, and their game during the hunting season. And how much of this provender ever turns up on your family platter? Haw! I'm being silly again.

THE SLOB BOWLS OVER CHILDREN AND OLD LADIES IN HIS CHARGE TO GET THROUGH THE REVOLVING DOOR.

The poor guy with the corner stationery store is plagued by the cheapies who come in, buy an El Nickelo cigar, and then act as if they've bought library privileges at the magazine racks. A few visits from these leeches who, for some reason, always seem to have gummy fingers, and the guy's magazine stock looks as if it had been used for bedding at a dog show. But you should hear 'em on the rare occasions when they come in to buy a ten-cent book. It's gotta be spotless, or else!

YOU'D think a farmer, away out there in the country, might be safe from this type of creep. But just ask one. You'll find that they drive 40 miles out in the country just to get to him. Happens like this:

Car door opens. Crustwell J. Bashin steps out, followed by a sheepish-looking hound. "Hi, Zeke," the fellow says. "Just got me a new dog. Would you mind if I gave him a little workout on your place?"

"Nope," says good-hearted and unsuspecting Zeke. "Go right ahead."

A week later a cavalcade of cars stops by Zeke's place. About 20 hunters pile out, and tear into the field Zeke has just finished sowing with winter wheat.

"It's okay, fellers," bawls Bashin. "Good ol' Zeke said it was okay last week."

Next thing Zeke knows, it sounds as if the battle of Bunker Hill is being fought all over again. Such cows as are lucky enough to escape the slaughter are terrified into complete milklessness. The poultry flock decides that Chicken Little was right about the sky falling down, and takes off for the tall timber, and the newly planted wheat field looks as if a herd of buffalo had used it for the annual spring meeting. The only thing Zeke can hope for is that Bashin will be one of the casualties.

Then there is the "borrowing" chiseler. He is indigenous to offices as well as homes. In a way you are lucky if he decides to "forget" to return whatever it was he took. That, at least, keeps him from coming back. But most of the "borrowers" keep things just long enough for them to wear out. These are the people who borrow everything from your punchbowl to your silver and then don't ask you to the party. They are always "just out of change" at the hat check stand and over a year's time probably just-out-of-change you out of $10 or $15.

Third on the list is the blowhard. There's one and sometimes, Lord help us, more, in every office. Ol' Bullister J. Bragwell himself. Listen to him tell how his house has appreciated to three times its original value. Hear him speak of writing a check in five figures. Dig that routine about the wad he blew in El Clippo last night and how the blonde on the end of the chorus line kept kicking her shoe in his lap. You bet.

Now take a gander at the seat of Bragwell's pants. Careful! Don't let the flash blind you. It's the only part of him that gets as much use as his mouth. It's a pity his shoes aren't that shiny, even if they do have brand-new insoles — cut that morning from cardboard the laundry puts in his shirts.

BRAGWELL'S female counterpart is as common at bridge clubs as ants at a picnic. To hear her tell it, General Motors doesn't dare make a move without consulting her husband, Cheddar. They wanted him to be chairman of the board, she says, but Cheddar didn't want to be tied down. He likes to freelance.

Now let's listen to the girls at the next table who've been taking it all in. "Freelance—that's a big-deal way of saying stay in bed till noon," mutters one of the players. "I wish Cheddar would stay afloat long enough for her to pay me the five bucks she borrowed last May," sniffs another. "Doesn't she know anybody with an ordinary job?" asks a third. "I never heard her talk about anybody lower than a vice president."

When one of these characters shows up after a siege in the hospital, it's time to head for the hills. The first thing Droolberry does, after explaining that his operation was the greatest excavation since the Panama Canal, is to brag about how he wowed the nursing staff. The truth is Droolberry, who looks like a bag of prison laundry and has the personality of an untipped waiter, was lucky to get out of the ward alive. At least two nurses wanted to take his pulse at the throat—with both hands.

And so they go—tormented by their own inadequacies, they have to bend our ears. Wurra wurra wurra.

Marriage

Divorce Situation

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

MARRIAGE is supposed to be for life, but a large number of the marriage in North America fall far short of this. Mrs. V. thinks the situation can't be as bad as it is represented to be, however.

"My sister-in-law heard a lecture by Dr. A. C. Kinsey, who said that 60 per cent of the marriages in the United States end in divorce or permanent separation," she reports. "Surely that isn't true, Dr. Popenoe."

Strictly speaking, no one knows. Your sister-in-law probably did not get the statement quite accurately, Mrs. V., Dr. Kinsey has often said that there are as many unregistered separations as there are registered divorces. He thinks there are a great many matings or pairings that are not solemnized as marriages, and in connection with the above figures he probably used some such word rather than marriages. In what is sometimes described as the "lower part" of the population, men and women do live together without a marriage license in many cases, and these arrangements are being broken up and remade all the time—they separate and start over again with different partners. Dr. Kinsey thinks we should take account of these as well as of the registered marriages, if we want to get an accurate picture of what is going on.

From one point of view, he is certainly correct. Of course, no one really knows how many of these unrecorded pairings there are in the course of a year. Many of them last only a few years or months or weeks, so the same person may be in half a dozen such episodes.

MORE THAN 25 PER CENT of all the registered marriages in the United States will end in divorce or legal separation — which is recorded in the vital statistics. It is conceivable that an equal number of separations such as I have described, is also taking place. This does not mean that 60 per cent of all persons will fail in marriage, because the same person may figure five or ten times in such a calculation.

Dr. Kinsey's estimate may be too high. As I said, no one really knows. But on any basis, the situation is so bad as to be intolerable. Don't you think it is about time for home, church, school, and community organizations to make a concerted, systematic, determined effort to make people take marriage more seriously—and more successfully?

Answers to Questions.

Q. PEOPLE TELL ME I have a great deal of sex appeal. That's no handicap to marriage, is it?

A. Far from it. But you should take extra pains to make sure some man is not marrying you merely because of physical attraction—one of the least satisfactory foundations for marriage, unless a great deal is added to it. Any girl with S.A. should be sure that she and her prospective husband have similar tastes, ideals, and backgrounds.

Q. I wish my wife would talk a little more about "us" and "ours" instead of so much about "me" and "mine."

A. Women are generally accused of this fault, due to their greater feeling of personal interest and possessiveness. They are too subjective. Write (with stamped, self-addressed envelope) for free instructions on how to become more objective. It would help almost any woman.

Q. In case of a broken engagement, does a woman have to return the man's gifts—for instance, an electric range?

A. Presumably he thought he was merely investing in his own future. Better offer to give it back.

Q. Is there any ground for the assertion recently made by our (female) superintendent of schools that married women teachers are less efficient than single ones?

A. No. Most surveys show just the opposite. The Canadian Youth Commission voted "especially to emphasize the lack of wisdom shown in dismissing women teachers on marriage." In most parts of the United States of America, the married teacher is no longer penalized in this way—partly because of the scarcity of teachers, partly because the courts will not sustain dismissal on that ground.

Q. Are younger people more tolerant than older people?

A. Probably yes. In many instances older people become less tolerant, more easily irritated, as they advance in age. There are exceptions, of course.

Secrets of Charm

Beautify Your Arms

AFTER winter months of inactivity, arm measurements sometimes come as quite a shock. Take out your trusty tape measure right now—loop it around the heaviest part of your upper arm—and see what's happening to you.

Does the tape measure come together at more than nine inches? It shouldn't if you are five-feet-four to five-feet-six inches tall. Subtract one-half inch if you are under that, or add one-half inch if you are five-feet-seven or eight, a full inch for five-nine or taller. This assumes that your frame structure is average.

Even a half-inch extra represents a considerable gain for the whole upper arm, and there's nothing to do but to get at the right exercises at once to stop straining the tape measure more. Here they are:

1. Lie flat on your back. Extend your arms over your head and clasp your hands. Turning at your waistline, roll over onto first one arm and back, then onto the other arm and back. Repeat 10 times.

2. Again on your back, bend your arms so your elbows are perpendicular to the floor, and your fingers rest on your shoulders. Quickly slap the back of your upper arms against the floor. Raise and repeat 10 to 20 times, but don't make this exercise so vigorous it causes bruises.

3. In the same position, reach for the ceiling. Without bending your elbows or wrists, crisscross your arms in short, fast strokes 20 times.

4. Stand tall with two medium-sized books grasped in both hands and resting on your shoulders. Stretch your arms forward at shoulder level and return, then to sides and return and lastly overhead and return. Really stretch 10 times.

Facts a Columnist Learns From His Mail

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (AP)

THINGS a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

That it costs a family with an annual income of $6500 about $800 to bring a baby into the world, including the cigars the proud papa passes around.

That the number of girl "office boys" has tripled since 1940.

That while industry prefers women office workers, men still held 354,000 of the 390,000 Federal government's clerical posts as recently as 1950.

That Britain has lost its beef-eating tradition to America, where the average citizen ate 160 pounds during 1955.

THAT IT TOOK an industrial worker 49 minutes to earn the price of a pound of round steak here in 1929. Today he does it in half an hour. (But don't let your butcher know this — you have enough trouble with him already.)

That A. H. Berwald, a 73-year-old pencil manufactirer, tests his pencil leads by leaning out his 10th floor office window and dropping them to the sidewalk (Incidentally, pencils will not only write under water — they work equally well when submerged in molasses. Try it and see.)

DID YOU KNOW JANE FROMAN IS ALLERGIC TO OSTRICH FEATHERS?

That despite all the new labor-saving business machines that have been invented, there is still a shortage of 600,000 office workers in the United States.

That many modern roads in France follow the old routes of Napoleon's military campaigns.

That there is no tide in the Mediterranean. (I have this on the authority of the French government tourist office, which didn't bother to explain why.)

That Jane Froman, the singer, is allergic to ostrich feathers.

That opera star Blanche Thebom believes more American wives learn about culture from their husbands than vice versa. (Now if a mere man said a thing like that he'd be denounced as an unbearable prig.)

THAT HILDEGARDE, veteran performer though she is, still recites the prayer of St. Francis of Assisi just before going out to face a new audience.

That while more men than women suffer from heart attacks, fewer men are hospitalized for mental disorders.

That few people can name offhand the only one of New York City's five boroughs that is actually on the mainland of the United States. (It's the Bronx.)

That the "coffee break," so popular with office workers today, originated in Turkey, where the first coffee house opened in 1554.

Choosing New Furniture

By Elizabeth Hillyer

SO-CALLED summer furniture may be chosen for this coming summer, but most of it will carry on through next winter and many more. It would be pretty hard to hide away chairs and a table as attractive as these if there were anywhere in the house house to keep them in plain sight. Even if it meant nudging along something else.

Now's a good time to choose the cream of the crop in wrought iron, while it's coming into the stores in its newest designs, whether it's to be for the outdoors or for indoors or both. And it's likely to be for the indoors in the long run whether or not it's planned that way, especially because so much of the new has the look of mixing well with wood furniture. These chairs have a top barrel outline in wood and show the wood as arm rests. The rest of the wood is bound in wicker, and there's a removable wicker tray as second level for the glass-topped table. Their designer is Maurizio Tempestini, the distinguished architect who has taken many strides ahead for strong individuality in wrought iron. (Furniture by Salterini.)

Elizabeth Hillyer's booklet FURNITURE REFINISHING—HOW TO DO IT YOURSELF—starts you off to success on the first refinishing job you ever tried—gives advice on finish repair, too. Send 15 cents in coin with your request for the booklet and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Hillyer at the Post-Dispatch.

Faces Out Front, Midnighter's Memos

By Walter Winchell

FACES OUT FRONT: Otto Harbach, the lyricist-librettist of 50 Broadway shows, who has written a new musical play titled: "Bugles in April." He's 83. . . . Helen Keller, the famed blind-mute, relishing "Chalk Garden" from a front-row seat. . . . Hollywood Chatter

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 11.

CELLULOID heroes differ widely in their preparations for love scenes. Some rehearse prodigiously. Others play "mood music" in their portable dressing rooms on the set. But not Jack Palance, who courts Shelley Winters in "I Died a Thousand Times." Jack sprints up and down one side of the sound stage and does push-ups.

JACK PALANCE . . . BELIEVES IN PUSH-UPS.

He insists that physical exertion is basic in reaching the proper emotional pitch for a love scene. Watching him get ready for tender romance is like watching a heavyweight fighter limber up for a title match.

It must stem partly from his background, and partly from a need to work off pre-scene tension. Jack played football, basketball and baseball in high school and college, and later boxed professionally for two years.

His scripts are the most beaten-up in the business. On every page are scribbled notes to himself about the way his role should be enacted, and in addition he keeps large sheets of paper with graphs and diagrams to indicate just where his emotions should rise and fall.

● DEAN MARTIN and Jerry Lewis have founded a town. Located 35 miles from Phoenix, Ariz., it is to be called Marlew, and at present consists of only six buildings. They were erected for Paramount's "Pardners," but when the shooting was over the two comedians made a deal with state officials.

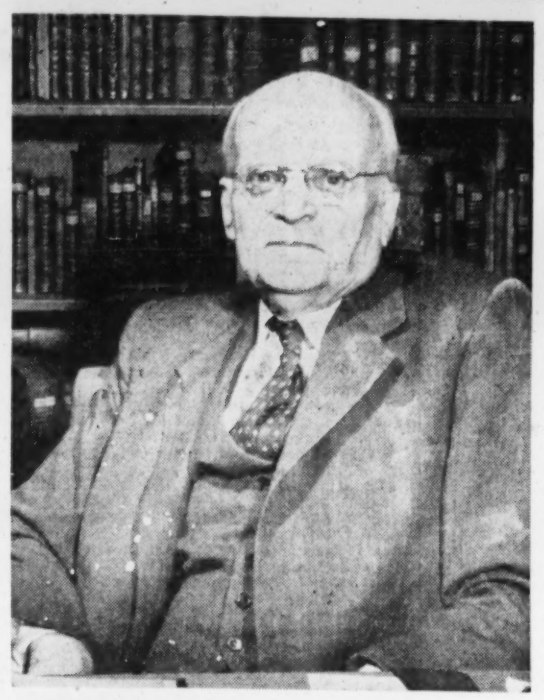

Under this arrangement, the buildings will be left standing for use by other producers who, in turn, will add other movie buildings and let them remain. Since Phoenix is becoming a popular location site for film companies, Marlew may become a boom town.

● THEY SAY that baseball players are the most superstitious group of men in the world, but there's a piano player here who is as superstitious as they come. Liberace is the man's name, and he (1) never gives a performance unless a member of his family is in the audience (2 never plays unless he is wearing a "good luck" ring of gold with a piano outlined in diamonds. Moreover, his mother is rarely absent from his performances. When Liberace was making "Sincerely Yours" at Warner Brothers not long ago, Director Gordon Douglas employed a character actress to sit in the audience in a concert auditorium scene because she closely resembled Liberace's Mom. When his real Mom couldn't be there, it helped the pianist feel right at home anyway.

● Noise of Renovation Job on Building Housing 110-Year-Old Mercantile Library Will Soon Stop, Bringing Peace to Today's Readers and Ghosts of Yesterday

By John Keasler

LIBRARIES, of course, are haunted; some fortunate ones more than others. Stand in a library and listen sometime. Listen carefully but don't strain. Feel it as all the ghosts come up and eye you, thinking to themselves, doubtless, now just what have we here?

That is why libraries have the "Quiet" signs, so the people won't annoy the ghosts. (Although you would be amazed at the silly ideas some folks have about this.) Ghosts are a grossly maligned majority group, but the fact is they are rather cordial, as a general rule, at least in libraries.

Cordial, and certainly quite democratic as they mingle there, all together, the ghosts of praised hackery, unrecognized genius, dogmatic questioners, agnostic answerers, the whole blooming bunch.

Along with all the learned authors of all the volumes row on row are, also, the shades of departed seekers after knowledge who, just as you and I, dropped in to the library on their lunch hour to pick up the latest answer to the riddle of the universe and, finding it already checked out, settled for the popular novel with the piquant heroine.

Quite obviously they are there, all around you, else why is the feeling only in libraries? If you don't feel it, perhaps you are in the wrong library. If you stand in the Mercantile Library here, itself an aged but lively page of history still being written on every day, and still receive only silence, well, that's a shame.

THE St. Louis Mercantile Library is a delightful and bemusing paradox located atop the First National Bank building at Broadway and Locust; on a clear day you can see the last century.

And, right now, it is the last stages of a face lifting job—to the entire building—which is putting a new look on a very old institution; painting, refurbishing, general renovation.

It is a paradox for several reasons: In a city which takes a somewhat inordinate interest in the past this 110-year-old institution is largely unknown. In a crisp world of commerce it personifies that rarest of beings, a practical dreamer, inasmuch as the library owns the bank building; it is presided over by a gentle scholar named Clarence Miller, for whom the word paradox was obviously coined, and it has been backed into a corner by a progress it rather detests but can't condemn.

"That the Mercantile Library, which has been a haven of serenity for some generations of St. Louisans, should find itself involved in nearly five years of noise, discomfort and confusion, incident to one of the city's largest building operations, is one of those improbable things constantly happening in this paradoxical world," says Miller.

But — and annoyed ghosts please note—the bustle, inconvenience and annoyance of remodeling is, praise be, drawing to a close, and this venerable institution will be able to brush the dust off its derby and settle down with a new lease on life; a nice, fat 60-year lease, in fact.

Mercantile Library is the oldest subscription library west of the Mississippi. (You can see the Mississippi from its window, a tiny slit of the river visible between the Boatman's Bank Building and the Federal Reserve.)

It has the most fascinating history, the biggest quota of anonymity, the largest portion of public misconception and, certainly, the most unfortunate name of any library we ever saw. And the most interesting librarian, a man who lives with his tongue in his cheek and soaks up books through his pores.

ACTUALLY, it is simply a library which has any and all sorts of books and which anybody can join by paying $5 a year; for an extra $5 per year you may have books delivered to you. It has some 2500 members. It has some 200,000 volumes. Its name has backfired on it over the decades. "Mercantile" sounds faintly forbidding and somehow specialized, and not a little dull, to most folks. Originally, the name was used to get away from precisely those factors.

Early in the last century when "Mercantile" libraries were being formed—the first in Boston—there were no public libraries as we know them now; the very word "library" implied a specialized field, such as a legal or medical or architectural library.

So some bright lads in Boston formed a subscription library and called it "Mercantile" meaning non-professional, or, in other words, a library of general interest.

Across the country everybody decided that was a dandy name, Mercantile, and followed suit. Once there were more than 50 such libraries. Now there are only seven or eight. Librarian Miller has hated to see them go; hates, in fact, to see small colleges and small businesses go. But that has been the trend. The only reason the local Mercantile has survived is because its building is tax-free.

"We've always had the reputation of being rich and we've always been exactly two jumps ahead of the sheriff," says Miller, a 75-year-old gentleman of enduring youth and vast amusement at and compassion for the peculiar world he peers at through his glasses. He first went to work at the library in 1898. Some of his best friends are ghosts.

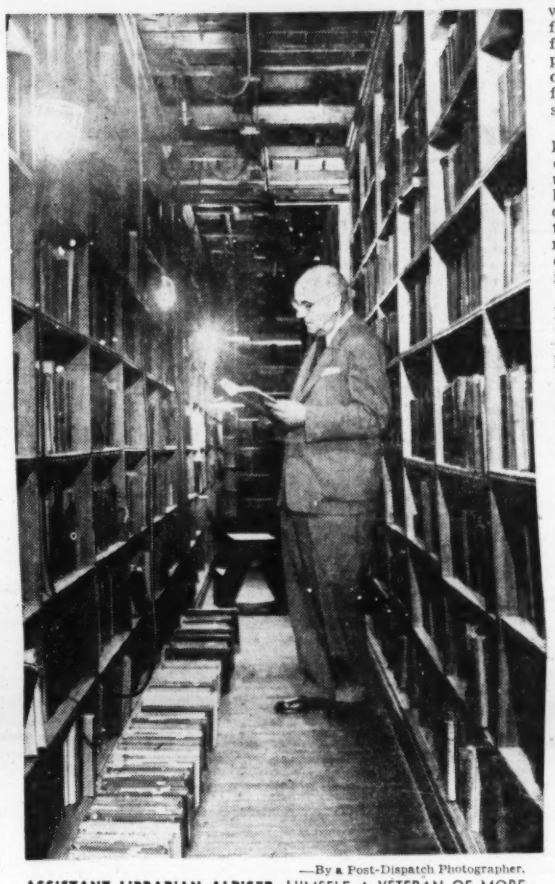

The library was formed in 1846 by a group of literary-minded St. Louisans who chipped in, rented a room in the old Exchange Building at Main and Pine streets. A leading citizen named James E. Yeatman was the motivating force: Miller quoted Emerson's remark that an institution is but the lengthened shadow of one man. Well, Yeatman was the man.

THE library later moved to Fourth street and then, in 1853, to the present site in a three-story building erected through sale of stock.

This building for many years was the cultural center of St. Louis; a St. Louis of paddle-wheelers, riverfront atmosphere, adventure and adventurers, giants whose like, evidently, we shall not see again. There was entertainment in the 2000-capacity hall; musicals, drama, speakers. (Who spoke at the old library? Ralph Waldo Emerson, William Makepeace Thackeray, Oscar Wilde, Mark Twain, Artemus Ward, many others. How they crowd around.)

In 1880 the old building was deemed obsolescent. The present, six-story building went up in 1889, after a fund-raising drive. (In case any newcomers are interested, the department store of Scruggs, Vandervoort, Barney was located in the library building for about 20 years.)

ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN ALPISER, HIMSELF A VETERAN OF MORE THAN 50 YEARS' SERVICE, CHECKING A BOOK CLASSIFICATION IN ONE OF THE STORAGE ROOMS WHICH HOUSE MORE THAN 200,000 VOLUMES. ORIGINAL SHELVING DATES FROM THE LAST CENTURY.

THE OLD MERCANTILE LIBRARY, ST. LOUIS CULTURAL CENTER, WHICH STOOD FROM 1853 TO 1887 BEFORE IT WAS TORN DOWN TO MAKE WAY FOR THE PRESENT BUILDING ON THE SAME SITE AT BROADWAY AND LOCUST STREET.

The library's sole income is from membership fees and rent from the First National Bank which pays about $55,000 per year to the Mercantile Library Association for occupancy of the first four floors of the building. The bank is a nice tenant—signed a 60-year lease fairly recently, but insisted on remodeling the building for an expansion program.

And now the library is a study in contrasts, as the remodeling work nears completion. A six-foot marble statue of Daniel Webster scowls across the currently disordered reading room. Dan has been shoved over by the huge and beautiful fireplace and some irreverent soul has placed a feather duster in his hand. Obviously he does not approve of all these goings-on.

Personally, I don't think Miller approves either but all he would say is, "In the end we should have better lighted and more comfortable and attractive quarters."

Why pay $5 to belong to a library when the public library is free? What are the advantages?

Intangible, mostly. Tangible in some ways, like the delivery service and the rich wealth of Americana lore.

"That book of Bingham sketches you're thumbing through is valued at $50,000, although of course you couldn't buy it for that," Miller told us. Disappointed, we put it back and later regained our color.

The intangibles, however, seem to be what the members most value. There is sort of a clublike atmosphere, or will be again when the confusion is over. People who enjoy reading enough to pay for it find their own kind there. And that helps.

Also, you are sitting slap in the lap of history. Statuary and iron scrollwork and huge old tables and oak paneled walls and open book shelves. The past surrounds you like a soothing perfume, reminding you that worries are only temporary.

ONE of the chief advantages in dropping in on the Mercantile Library is you might get to meet the librarian. Miller is a complex and understanding man, vastly interesting in his quotation-laden talk and skillful and entertaining in his writing.

There's a good chance of meeting him because by his own admission he has a way, like the ancient Mariner, of buttonholing people into conversation; the basic reason being, we strongly suspect, to see what makes them tick.

He is a soft-spoken, slender, white-haired man, descended from a line of newspapermen forbears, was in his youth a reporter, has an all-consuming curiosity about everything and finds life a great spectator sport, among other things.

He sits in the accumulated knowledge of mankind, his chair backed up against volumes on alchemy and cold hard bookkeeping statistics on his desk. That his autobiography, tucked away out of sight, remains unpublished is to the undying discredit of the publishing industry. It's wonderful.

He can converse on any philosophy as far as you're able to wade out, and remain objective about it: He, himself, as he puts it, has packed many a valise of philosophy but each time had to unlock it because he found he had forgotten to put in the toothbrush—namely some stubborn fact of existence.

ONE gets the impression that Miller, surrounded by the learning of mankind, is still highly open to suggestion.

From quoting classics he can switch without a gear clash to wonderful anecdotes, like the one about the village braggart back in the small Ohio town Miller was born in. This worthy could top any story, had, or said he had, been everywhere; done everything, seen everything.

"Did you ever see a thousand-dollar bill?" another loafer asked the braggart one day, hoping to stump him.

"Why, hell yes!" was the reply. "And it was bigger'n a newspaper!"

He has been a librarian this long: here are some of the authors he "discovered" while they were still freshmen striving for recognition: Galsworthy, O. Henry, Sinclair Lewis, Aldous Huxley, Hugh Walpole, Cabell, Benet, John Masefield, Gorki, Chekhov—many, many others.

He didn't want to be a librarian. He wanted to be a newspaper man, like his father, who moved from Cincinnati to St. Louis when Miller was 14. Several years later, young Miller got a job on a newspaper, but quit when his health failed. He went to work for the library, left, came back and has been there 55 years. He has three children and is a grandfather.

He is saddened at some aspects of the change in St. Louis, which he terms "The city that moved away from itself." With such a potential for riverfront atmosphere, there is none; he thinks that's a shame. "Where else," he inquires, "would you find a city which would build the third longest commercial street in the world—Broadway—and then proceed to abandon it?"

HE has memories of generations of change; of well-known men and leading St. Louisans of his personal acquaintance, and stories passed down to him by his predecessor librarians. One of them recalled Joseph Pulitzer, founder of the Post-Dispatch, who always said he received his education at the Mercantile Library, as "a noisy and unruly young man who ignored the sign commanding silence."

Miller liked the old days. Everything is getting so ruly. One could scream.

Yet, picture him not as a nostalgic oldster peering longingly back at a rosy picture of things which never were. Incisively, he cuts through to the faults of those days, and the present time also. He thinks we're about to science ourselves out of business if we don't watch out; that modern man is learning the application of everything and the implication of practically nothing.

He sits at his old desk in the Mercantile Library, the scholarly institution among the ruly bank buildings; the cornerstone of St. Louis history which so many folks know of only vaguely, if at all.

It's a nice place to visit. That's why the past is so thick in there; memories know where they're welcome. O. Henry, for instance, broke all his life, must get a kick out of walking around over the First National Bank. Miller, certainly, likes the place.

And from the big, new windows you can see the old river. Not very well, but you can see it.

Buying Serape in Mexico

By Stan Delaplane

OAXACA, Mexico.

AFTER three days I bought a serape from Hector Anzures, the weeping serape salesman of Oaxaca. I did not know I was buying it. But Hector did.

He engaged me early each morning while I had whipped chocolate under the arches that line the Mexican plaza.

"Buy, Senor. Look, pure wool. Mitla design."

"I do not need a blanket. I am warm."

"Ah, but you return to Mexico City. The airs, the pneumonia, the grip! Make me an offer."

"In that case, 50 pesos."

Hector fell back as though I had struck him. He began to weep. He wiped his eyes and looked pitiful.

"Senor, 50 pesitos!" He rolled up the serape and started away. He came back and thrust one end in my hand and walked away unrolling it expertly. "For you, 200 pesitos. Pure wool!"

Mexico is a shopper's paradise. The peso 12.50 to the United States dollar has a real purchase meaning. Not like the wild French franc or astronomical Italian lira which mean nothing in exchange value.

The minimum wage is 10 pesos a day in Mexico. You can live in smaller towns for $200 a month and have three servants. Embroidered skirts and blouses, handbags, luggage are bargain priced.

"FOR YOU, SENOR, 180 pesos," said Hector wiping his eyes. "Last price."

"I am warm. I need no serape. Anyway, why don't you make one price and stay with it."

"Ah Senor, everyone knows you Americans like to bargain."

Well, this is a new idea. All the guide books advise you that it is the Mexicans who insist on bargaining.

"The first price is the asking price," says my guide book. Offer half. The seller will come down a little. Finally you seek the middle price. The seller is disappointed if you take the first price."

Hector did not look like he would be disappointed if I took the first price. He looked like he would be delighted.

If you ask me, this bargaining is an idea of the people who write guide books. The Mexicans simply accept that Americans are bargainers and have raised the prices to meet the odd buying taste of the tourist.

"Senor," said Hector, "this afternoon I go to another village. I must sell the serape. Take it for nothing! Take it for 160 pesos."

In the late afternoon, however, he was still there. He was weeping at an American lady. He assured her his family would starve if he let the serape go under 300 pesos.

HE PRACTICED ON ME each morning. He got me up to 75 pesos. I don't know why. I certainly didn't need a serape. I didn't even know anybody who needed a serape. At each offer, he wept. He folded the blanket and walked two steps away, two steps back, put one end in my hand and unrolled it all over again.

I got pretty used to that serape. It was heavy and bed-size. Gray and black and white. The blankets of the Oaxaca region are the best in the country. If they were made to wear, like a poncho, you see the middle slit has been sewed up.

This one had been made for the tourist trade. With no head slit.

I was having frothed chocolate early on the day I was leaving. The weeping serape salesman took an expert look at the packed car and went to work.

"The last price, Senor. Because of our friendship, make me an offer."

"Then, 80 pesos because of our friendship."

"Just a little 120."

"Done," said Hector. He seized the 100-peso note and thrust the serape under by arm. "A determined buyer," he said. "You did well."

Half an hour later while I was walking through the market I was offered a duplicate serape. The seller said he would let it go for 90 pesos. And I am pretty sure we could have done business quickly at 50.

Cleo the Basset $60,000 Asset

Frank Inn, Trainer of 'People's Choice' Hound, Has Way With Animals

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 11.

THE way Frank Inn looks at it, "this would be a far better world if people were as dependable as animals."

He knows animals. He has spent 20 years with them and now is one of Hollywood's top trainers of animals for television and movies. He is the trainer of Cleo, the doleful basset hound featured on Jackie Cooper's television program, "The People's Choice" (KSD-TV 8 p.m. Thursdays).

Inn has other animals—dogs of all types, squirrels, rabbbits, coyotes, cats, bobcats and even a wolf. But his favorite is Cleo, and not because she is a good source of income. Inn and his partner in training, Neil Gazeley, figure that Cleo will net them about $60,000 this year.

When "The People's Choice" was being prepared for television last summer, the program's producer, Irving Brecher, asked Inn to find a basset hound. "It was quite an assignment," Inn says. "I had to find one, buy it and train it within three weeks."

HE and Gazeley "auditioned" dozens of bassets from all over California before finding Cleo one day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gorden, basset breeders, in Woodland Hills.

"We were getting discouraged," he said, "but the moment we saw Cleo we knew we had found our star. She wagged her tail and jumped all over me, just as if she was asking to learn something. She was just over a year old and was marked photogenically."

The Gordens were reluctant to part with Cleo, because she had won their hearts, too. But Inn convinced him that making a star of the dog would help promote the popularity of the breed. As things turned out, Inn's hunch was correct. The Basset Hound Club of America reports that basset sales now are at an all-time high.

FRANK INN WITH CLEO . . . "WORLD NEEDS PEOPLE AS DEPENDABLE AS ANIMALS."

Inn was earning $3 a week as a stable hand 20 years ago when a friend suggested that he do something with his "way with animals." He had been teaching tricks to transient dogs that hung around the stable. Inn took his friend's advice and quit tending horses to take a job at a movie studio where he could watch animal trainers in action. One day he noticed a trainer having difficulty getting a dog to do a series of maneuvers for an intricate shot and said to himself, "I can get a dog to do that."

He coached one of his mutts that night and the next day amazed the trainer by putting the dog through the required paces with ease. The trainer took him on as an assistant.

"I was getting $5 a day—then $10," Inn said. "I didn't think there was that much money in the world. "Then he started training Lassie, one of TV's top animal attractions. For that his pay rose to $25 a day. Inn has also helped train other animal stars, such as the dog Daisy, the cat Rhubarb, and Davy Crockett, a raccoon that gets frequent calls for TV shows.

INN was born in Camby, Ind., but spent most of his boyhood in nearby Mooresville. His high school education at Decatur, Ind., was interrupted by frequent wanderings during which he worked in restaurants, as a circus roustabout, rodeo rider and lumberjack. He eventually found time to complete his high school work in Santa Barbara, Calif.

His wife Juanita, whom he met in Hollywood, also had a deep interest in animals and has helped him in training them. The Inns have two children, Kathleen, 7, and Ernest, 6. They live at Sun Valley, where their home is virtually a small zoo. But among all their animals, doleful Cleo, their $60,000-a-year asset, rates at the top.

Television Letter Box

THANKS to NBC-TV for the recent telecast of "The Good Fairy." The precious Julie Harris has a magic all her own, and the selection of the others in the cast, including Cyril Ritchard, Walter Slezak and Roddy McDowall, was inspired. Miss Harris, however, was the glittering star in the Molnar comedy which was exceptionally well adapted for television. "Festival of Music" and "The Good Fairy," all in one week, were high fare indeed.

John Crosby's recent blast at Liberace, concerning Liberace's popularity in England (or rather the lack of it, according to Crosby), disgusts me no end. I have friends in London who wrote me just after commercial TV went into effect over there. The Liberace program was the first one then named as being grand entertainment. They commented on his ability to shift from the classical to "rock and roll" and his personable contrast to the "stuffed shirt" performers they are used to seeing.

Thanks to KSD-TV for the series explaining thoroughly the "Communist society" on The Catholic Hour. Knowing what we are up against certainly is the first step in combating this threat to all races and creeds. We also love the Christophers program which covers so much in so little time. It's interestingly done.

As Crosby Sees It

Reviewer Criticizes 'Meet the Press'

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.

AN ARTICLE in "The New Republic" written by David R. Ebbitt about the increasing savagery of the panel shows, specifically "Meet the Press," has stirred up quite a storm, both of assent and dissent. This is something that has been brewing for quite a spell. "Meet the Press" has come a long way since it was a rather obscure sustaining radio show on the Mutual Broadcasting System and that long way has not necessarily been in the right direction.

It is the contention of the author that "Meet the Press" has degenerated into a bear-baiting contest, that the aim of the show seems to be less to extract information and opinion from the guest than to inflict head wounds on him. Specifically, the article named the ordeal of Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the Fund for the Republic. I didn't see that particular show but I understand Hutchins got quite a going over, mostly about a single line from his recent statement to the effect that the Fund might, under certain conditions, hire a Communist.

FUNCTIONING WITH venom and brutality, said the article, is a panel led by "Lawrence Spivak, God's angry little man, and the alternate prosecuting attorney, May Craig." Reaction on the article was sharply split up the middle. There are many of us who have been similarly annoyed in the past by the unnecessary roughness on the playing field who heartily agreed. According to "Variety," a number of advertising men have leaped to the defense of "Meet the Press" on rather interesting grounds. They point out that practically all the guests are old pros at press conferences and that they not only accept the invitation to appear but openly solicit an invitation.

Well, there's no contest there. "Meet the Press" is wonderful publicity for both office-seekers and office-holders, provided they emerge with some remnant of their reputations, and they certainly go into the fray with their eyes open. But that to me is hardly the main point. My own complaint against "Meet the Press" is not that the politicians get rumpled, though I must admit the low blows occasionally make me wince, but that the main purpose of journalism seems to have been completely lost sight of.

I'VE BEEN IN ON a good many fairly rough press conferences in which tempers have flared and feelings have been wounded. But underneath all the smoke and flame was a clear intent to get at the truth, to enlarge the sphere of public understanding on some issue. This aim, it seems to me, has long since been lost on "Meet the Press." The purpose of embarrassing questions in that bearpit seems more for the pure sake of embarrassment than to get at the truth.

The Fund for the Republic was founded, after all, for the protection and advancement of civil liberties. That's a large and, in these times, enormously important subject. To confine the questioning almost exclusively to a single inflammatory and controversial sentence once uttered by Hutchins is hardly journalism at all; it's a sort of verbal circus, the idea being to get the guests to jump through hoops.

It is not my intention to defend Hutchins, a very literate man who can defend himself. The real sufferers are ourselves who tuned in the program to acquire a little information and understanding and didn't get it. And this is true not only of the Hutchins show but of all of them.

If, for example, the guest is a farm expert and you settle down to hear something about farm problems the questioning will go something like this: "Undersecretary Schnook, isn't it true that in 1915 at the age of 12 you wrote an editorial for your grammar school paper advocating the abolition of all taxation? Then how can you possibly be in favor of flexible farm supports?" That wrangle can continue for half an hour and none of us will be the wiser about farm problems.

It's no wonder that guests of the caliber of Adlai Stevenson look depressed after the interview. They come prepared with carefully thought-out and even courageous stands on public issues—and then find that no one is interested in any words except fighting words. The guests who suffer the worst are the responsible and thoughtful public men. On the other hand, it's a great forum for the irresponsible. Senator McCarthy had a wonderful time on "Meet the Press" he simply evaded practically every question that was asked and made little speeches on whatever subject he chose. It amounted to a half hour of free electioneering on a national network.

Music And Music Makers Understanding Music

By Thomas B. Sherman

WHEN someone says of contemporary music "I don't understand it" he implies quite plainly that there is another kind of music that he does understand. Yet if he were required to explain the meaning of the simplest popular song he would immediately be reduced to a few generalized terms that could describe, with equal accuracy, a thousand other compositions. "It's gay, it's light" he might say, and in an attempt to be more specific he might add: "It's youthful, it's all about a young girl who thinks she's in love but has not yet discovered that love can be painful."

What he is describing, of course, is a subjective condition—his own feelings—rather than the verifiable qualities of the song itself. Others who heard it might agree that it was light and gay but in all likelihood would differ widely in particularizing the kind of gaiety that they detected.

With this in mind it may be assumed that even the simplest music is not simple. In other words it represents a complex of emotions. It is never just gay, for instance; it is a compound of gaiety, youth, innocence, hope and many other ingredients and in proportions that not even the composer can specify.

If this is a valid assumption then any verbal description can do no more than offer a clue to the content of any given work. An elaboration of this clue merely exposes the nature of the one who does it.

ISN'T IT MEANINGLESS, then, to speak of "understanding" music except in terms of its anatomy?

In the ordinary, literal sense "understanding" is certainly not an accurate word to use in defining a reaction to music. Nevertheless there is an important difference between the vague and disconnected sensations that are produced by one kind of musical experience and the intense, closely integrated response that one feels at another time. It is a difference that everybody has recognized in his own responses; and it may have a number of causes. It goes without saying that a fatigued or an inattentive mind will not be receptive to all the values of a musical performance. It is also true that a maximum concentration will not bring the best results to the listener who is wholly unfamiliar with the idiom being used in the music he hears.

But how to qualify one's self for the best musical experience is another story and aside from the point. I merely suggest that there is a best and a worst and that the best may be regarded in a figurative sense at least—as equivalent to a state of understanding.

WHAT MUST BE CLEAR, however, is that music is a language of emotional communication. It describes emotions, and not facts, even when it tries to specify some factual event such as the passage of a locomotive or two girls playing tennis. So it can be comprehended only through one's emotional apparatus and not through mental pictures or symbols. Yet emotions are not necessarily vague; and certainly they are not limited in their intensity or their variety.

Mendelssohn once said that music was more specific than words. What he apparently meant was that it was capable of finer distinctions. The spoken and written language has one word for love, and its several classifications can be identified only by associating it with other words or phrases. Even then its multiple nuances are never expressed in words because the language is not flexible enough.

BY CONTRAST the musical language makes an endless number of discriminations. What is more the shades of meaning can be felt. Each promotes its own, special response. The difference between Wagner's love music and Gounod's, for instance, can be felt by anybody. A verbal statement of the difference is more difficult to make or to grasp.

In any case when this difference—or a finer difference—is registered in the listener's mind he has reached some measure of understanding.

And if he has a profound conviction that something has been communicated to him — something vital, cogent and unified —then he understands the music in the only way it can be understood as an esthetic phenomenon. To this extent the word "understanding" as applied to the spirit, rather than the body, of music is a convenience.

New Cinerama Production to Begin Here on April 26

"Seven Wonders of the World," the third Cinerama presentation, will begin its St. Louis run at the Ambassador Theater on Thursday evening, April 26.

The new production will follow Louis de Rochemont's "Cinerama Holiday," which has been seen by more than 455,000 patrons in its current one-year run at the Ambassador.

"Seven Wonders" was produced by Lowell Thomas, who with Merian C. Cooper also launched "This Is Cinerama" in 1952.

'Bad Seed' to Begin Week's Run Tomorrow

AFTER one week of darkness, the lights will go on again tomorrow evening at the American Theater as the Playwrights' Company presents Maxwell Anderson's biggest box-office attraction, "Bad Seed," starring Nancy Kelly in the role she originated on Broadway.

The melodramatic hit, adapted from the late William March's best-selling novel by the same name, ran for 334 performances on Broadway. It describes the terror of an unsuspecting mother who gradually realizes her young daughter is a three-time murderess.

For her portrayal of the mother, Miss Kelly received the 1955 Perry Award. Playing the role of the 8-year-old homicidal daughter is Kimetha Laurie. Also featured in leading roles are Ann Shoemaker, Arthur Jarrett and Roy Poole.

A Pulitzer Prize winner, Anderson has 32 plays to his credit, including "What Price Glory," "Saturday's Children," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Mary of Scotland" and "Both Your Houses."

"Bad Seed," staged by Reginald Denham, is the first touring attraction of the eighteenth season of the Playwrights' Company. The play, here for one week, is being presented in the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription series. Matinees will be held Wednesday and Saturday.

Pianist Lukas Foss To Be Soloist With Symphony

IN its last pair of concerts before departing on a three-and-a-half week tour, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will present pianist Lukas Foss as guest soloist in Kiel Auditorium Opera House at 2 p.m. Friday and 8:40 p.m. Saturday.

Although Foss was a guest conductor with the orchestra last season, he will be making his first appearance as piano soloist. Among selections he will play is his own composition, Piano Concerto No. 2. Other selections on the program will be Gretry's Ballet Suite from "Cephale et Procris" and Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade." Vladimir Golschmann will conduct.

Foss, who was born in Berlin in 1922, is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. He was pianist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appearing often as soloist with the Boston and other major symphony orchestras in the United States and Europe.

Because of the tour, the orchestra will not be heard in St. Louis until Saturday, March 17. The group's itinerary calls for 25 concerts in 22 cities and towns in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota, Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan.

Webster Concert

Pianist Steven Barwick, who will make a concert appearance in London later this month, will present the same program he has planned for his European debut at 2 p.m. tomorrow in the Webster College Auditorium, 470 East Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves. The program is open to the public.

At the Movies

By Edward Kosmal

LOVER BOY—French film star Gerard Philipe sets a new high—or low—with amour on a massive scale. Told with even more candor than is usually found in Gallic productions, the plot revolves around Philipe's indiscretions with a covey of London's weaker sex. Not much to the story, outside the sex, but there is some fine talent in cast, including Margaret Johnston, Joan Greenwood and Valerie Hobson. In English. SHADY OAK.

WICHITA—Joel McCrea takes over as Marshal Wyatt Earp. Vera Miles supplies the heart interest. A CinemaScope western that should satisfy horse opera addicts. FOX.

THE BENNY GOODMAN STORY—Just another This Is Somebody's Life Story that is saved when the band begins to play. TV's Steve Allen as B.G.; Donna Reed as his wife-to-be. Appearing in person are some top names in jazz, Harry James, Gene Krupa, Lionel Hampton, etc. More than a score of swing numbers are included. ST. LOUIS.

THE LITTLEST OUTLAW—A generally disappointing Walt Disney production of a juvenile story about a boy's love for a horse. ORPHEUM.

THE MAN WITH THE GOLDEN ARM—A powerful and vital drama about the struggles of a narcotic addict to break the habit. Frank Sinatra does wonderful work as the pitiful addict, and there are other strong performances, headed by Darren McGavin, Eleanor Parker and Kim Novak. The ending, changed from the novel, is too slick and pat in an otherwise extremely realistic picture. LOEW'S STATE.

THE TROUBLE WITH HARRY—A gently screwball satire on the suspense melodrama from its foremost master—Director Alfred Hitchcock. With John Forsythe, Edmund Gwenn, Shirley MacLaine. PAGEANT.

GUYS AND DOLLS—Samuel Goldwyn's sparkling CinemaScope picturization of the richly comic stage musical. With Marlon Brando, Jean Simmons, Frank Sinatra, Vivian Blaine. Eighth week. ESQUIRE.

DIABOLIQUE—A gruesome Gallic shocker from Director Henri Georges Clouzot about a wife who joins her husband's mistress in drowning him in the bathtub. Spine-chilling. English subtitles. RICHMOND.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—The travelogue in the sensational depth process. AMBASSADOR.

Demonstration

New 55 Mm. CinemaScope Is Brilliant

By Myles Standish

A BRILLIANT improvement in cinema photography technique, the new 55 millimeter CinemaScope process, was demonstrated here at the St. Louis Theater Friday morning for an audience of motion picture exhibitors and other interested persons. The demonstration film included an introduction and explanation by Darryl F. Zanuck, production head of the studio, and scenes from Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel," and "The King and I," the first two pictures to be photographed in the larger film.

The results were breathtaking. From the first shot of Gordon MacRae hanging stars in the celestial scene from "Carousel," there was evident a tremendously sharp and consistent focus, a clarity and luminosity that provided realistic depth and gave the characters a startlingly life-like appearance. The sense of identification, the feeling of being present at the actual scene, is quite persuasive.

As Zanuck pointed out, the new process has eliminated the falling off in focus at the sides and top and bottom of the screen. There is a fine, cameo-like focus in depth, something which the first CinemaScope, introduced 15 months ago, hoped to achieve but never did. Some of the best examples of this are in the charming scenes from "The King and I." All the Siamese king's children and wives, in the background and spread over the camera range, usually remain in as perfect focus as Deborah Kerr and Yul Brynner in the foreground. Once there seemed to be a slight falling off of focus on the right side, and in a medium close shot of Miss Kerr, Terry Saunders, in the background, wasn't as sharply filmed as in other shots, but these instances were only noticeable by contrast.

This quality of deep focus was further illustrated in an outdoor scene in "Carousel," where sailboats on a bay in the background remained razor-sharp, instead of having the usual fuzziness, as Robert Rounseville and Barbara Ruick, in a boat sailing in the foreground, sang "When the Children Are Asleep;" and in the exuberant ballet from the same picture to "June Is Bustin' Out All Over," actually filmed on the wharf at Boothbay, Me., (the first time any musical dance number has been done away from the sound stages). As Zanuck pointed out, the clarity made closeups of the old type unnecessary.

THE 55 MM. "FRAME," that is, individual picture in the reel, is about four times as large as the standard 35 mm. frame. Although a few houses will be equipped for showing of the film as it is, for all the others the 55 mm. film will be reduced to 35 mm. to fit the present projectors. Zanuck explained that this process, reversing the well-known effect that enlarging a picture from the negative increases the grain, reduces grain and increases lucidity.

All the approximately 25,000 movie theaters throughout the world equipped with CinemaScope screens and anamorphic projection lenses will be able to show the new process. The only additional projection cost will be, for those who do not have magnetic sound equipment, $850 for equipment to use the six-track magnetic sound that comes with the new process. There was a strong resistance among exhibitors to using the stereophonic magnetic sound of the 35 mm. CinemaScope when it came out, and Twentieth had to compromise by supplying optional one-sound track prints, but the company feels this resistance will be lessened now in view of the advantages of the improved photography.

Zanuck said his company had spent several millions of dollars in developing the process, including the purchase of 55 mm. cameras for $50,000 each, and the added cost for each film will be $200,000 over regular CinemaScope.

Art and Artists

In the Cause of Craftsmanship

By Howard Derrickson

MRS. VANDERBILT WEBB, who helped judge City Art Museum's Missouri show opening tomorrow night, is looking forward to achievement early next fall of a goal she shares with all who labor in the cause of craftsmanship.

Culmination of their efforts, and the start of an expanded national program, will be the opening of the Museum of Contemporary Crafts, first museum of its kind in the country. Mrs. Webb is president of the American Craftsmen's Council, which will have headquarters at the museum.

It will be at 29 West Fifty-third street, New York, near the Museum of Modern Art, where its director, Herwin Schaefer, was for two years assistant curator in the Modern Museum's architecture and design department.

David R. Campbell, architect who designed the new museum building, is director of the craftmen's council, the museum's founding group. Questions the council is now exploring are what it can do for the American craftsmen and his public and what interested persons can and will do for the council, through financial aid, moral support and co-operation in educational projects.

With Mrs. Webb, Campbell and Schaefer were en route last week to a Los Angeles craftsmen's meeting. While Mrs. Webb worked at the museum, the men studied St. Louis art collections.

In conversations with individuals and in a meeting with St. Louis craftsmen, the visitors discussed the new museum's purpose, stated thus in a new leaflet: "To place the council's work on a permanent footing and to integrate increasingly the handcrafts in the American scene."

FIRST EXHIBITION at the new museum will be a panorama of the opportunities for the craftsman today, Mrs. Webb said.

"Craftsmanship touches many more facets of our lives than we have any idea of," she continued. "Behind almost everything we use there lies, or should lie, the craftsman's creative hand. Industrial designers who do their work solely on paper, leaving it for the machine to translate their ideas into wood, metal or glass, usually cannot design so well as can the handcraftsman, for he knows intimately his material and its limitations.

"A few American industries already follow the European system of giving factory quarters to craftsmen. While the European designer - craftsman goes on producing and selling his own work, the factory has first call on his services when needed. Here the designer-craftsman is likely to become fully absorbed by industry.

"Thus, only now in the machine age, are we getting back to an idea that was basic in the Renaissance, when a Leonardo or a Cellini found it an important enough activity for him to lend his hand to anything created, be it a painting or a salt cellar."

SCHAEFER, who holds a Harvard doctor of philosophy degree, declared the integration of the artist with industry had been delayed in part by William Morris, nineteenth century English poet, craftsman and socialist.

"Morris was not altogether a favorable influence," Schaefer said. "He confused us by putting the creative person on a pedestal and setting the machine and the artist far apart.

"In America we have a great tradition to continue. It was American craftsmanship that went into the much-admired American clocks, clipper ships, balloon-frame houses, typewriters, sewing machines and Yale locks."

Schaefer, 40 years old, served most recently as director of United States exhibitions in Germany, assembling some shows and circulating others, such as an abbreviated version of City Art Museum's "Mississippi Panorama." He earned his bachelor's degree in fine arts at Chicago's Art Institute, studied a year at New York University and worked for two-year periods as assistant curator of decorative arts at Boston's Institute of Contemporary Art and the Rhode Island School of Design, Providence.

THOUGH MRS. WEBB has studied art formally, she regards her creative work as an avocation. She paints, produces ceramics and has done murals in homes in New York and New Orleans.

The craftsmen's council, to which she gives her major energies, is seeking 2000 new members, with annual fees beginning at $5. Dues for group memberships start at $3.

The council was chartered as an educational association by the Regents of the State of New York in 1943 and carries on its program through traveling shows, research, an information service and a bi-monthly magazine, Craft Horizons.

Four of its exhibits prepared at the request of the State Department are traveling in Europe, the Far East and South America. Its "Designer-Craftsmen U.S.A." opened at the Brooklyn Museum when Charles Nagel was director there.

A regional preliminary to this show, first representative collection of its kind, was held at City Art Museum. Among the council's trustees is Meyric R. Rogers, curator of decorative arts at Chicago's Art Institute, former director of the museum here.

W.U. Concert

Suzanne Bloch, lutist, singer to the lute and player of virginals and recorders, will present a program of music of Shakespeare's time at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in Graham Memorial Chapel. The concert will be the fifth in a series presented by the Washington University department of music.

Chamber Music

The Hungarian String Quartet will give the last concert in the current chamber music series presented by the Ethical Society of St. Louis at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in Sheldon Auditorium, 3648 Washington boulevard.

Daytime Fabric

Taffeta is used as a daytime fabric for spring by Mollie Parnis. One dress of a tiny gingham checked taffeta has a full skirt with small unpressed pleats all around the natural waistline. The bodice has a high neckline and just-below-the-elbow sleeves that are accented with bands of velvet ribbon. Navy silk twill is another popular fabric. It is attractive for a princess dress that has a removable silk dickey to fill in a deep scoop neckline. The dickey has its own soft collar and bow set high.

Novelty Heels

Novelty heels appear on many of the spring shoes. Jet accents, a profusion of nail heads, inlays of vinylite blossoms, hand-painted designs and carved bamboo decorations are some of the most elaborate for the new spring pumps. Strap designs in sandals feature the tiny straps rather than the wide ones liked a year ago. Bare backs give featured prominence to the novelty heels.

Beach Pants

Beach pants are in all of the sportswear collections. Many of the new cotton beach pants appear in crazy-quilt colors, knock-out stripes, or have fancy ruffles at the knees. Jamaica shorts are popular for winter resort wear, too, and are featured most in sunlight colors such as orange, gold, flame red and pink. Sturdy cottons such as denim, gabardine and faille are used.

Just Sits There

Husband Addicted To TV, Wife Objects

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

MY husband sits in the living room all day Saturday and Sunday listening to TV, and also in the evening until late at night. My son and daughter-in-law also sit with him. He has no time for me at all, and if I say something he acts as though he doesn't hear me. He just doesn't listen to what I say to him. He says my place is in the kitchen, cooking from the time I get up until all the meals are over and the work is all done. He also smokes quite a lot. I do not smoke, and do not like it. If I should drop in for a few minutes, he starts smoking just to be rid of me. He acts just like a child. After all these years of married life, I don't want to break up my home. My husband never takes me to a show or goes with me to buy the few clothes I need.

READER.

A wife is supposed to cook the meals and keep house if she's at home all the time and her husband is working. But that doesn't mean she has to make a slave of herself and she's wrong if she does. Come out of the kitchen after you've finished your work and sit down to enjoy a television program yourself. If his smoking bothers you, try to choose a place in the room where it will be least offensive rather than criticize him or walk out in anger. Don't break up your home. Maybe he is so tired from a day's work that he doesn't feel much like visiting—although that doesn't mean he shouldn't be civil and courteous to those around him. Perhaps, with professional counseling, you can find the answer to the trouble.

Dear Martha:

● I AM AN ONLY DAUGHTER and have been married three years. My parents wanted us to live with them when we married but my husband said he wanted to keep house. So we moved just 10 blocks from my mother. We both work and could be happy if my mother would let us. She expects us to be with her every night. If we want to spend some time in our own house or go out with friends she pouts and cries and thinks we are neglecting her. Last week was the blow-up. My husband took his clothes and the car and moved out. He said when I come to my senses he will come back. My mother made me come and stay there as I am afraid to stay alone at night. She seems perfectly contented but I am miserable. I would like your opinion and that of anyone else who could help me.

MISERABLE.

Here's my opinion: You're making the biggest mistake of your life to let your mother break up your marriage. Perhaps your husband took more drastic steps than many would advise, but I don't blame him if he felt you and he could have no life of your own without your mother's interference. Believe me, I don't say to neglect her. That's as bad as catering to her every whim. But there's a middle road and couples must find it to be really happy. Arrange to be with your mother one evening a week. Make it a special evening. Take her out for dinner or a movie. Ask your husband to give your mother his attention and time for that weekly occasion. Then, decide that you are not being cruel or thoughtless when you spend the rest of your time together or with friends. Your mother may cry and pout. But don't let those tears make a slave of you.

Dear Martha:

● THE MAN who wrote you last week that his wife is anti-social isn't alone in his views. I'm called that whenever I oppose my husband, which isn't often because I try to go wherever and whenever he says the word. But believe me it takes a lot of stamina to say yes when my mind and body cry out for rest and relaxation. He belongs to at least eight organizations, and there is something doing all the time, social affairs, meetings, sick people to visit, deaths, etc. We borrow money to go to conventions, and I don't know where it will end. I have tried inviting relatives or friends (not organization-minded) over for the evening or meals, but when 7 o'clock comes, there is always a meeting or an affair and away he goes. At first, I tried to make excuses and laugh it off, but one can't keep it up forever. Our place is sadly in need of repairs, but we can't afford to have it done, and we haven't the time to do much. Whenever the subject comes up why I don't join the auxiliaries, he will answer, "My wife isn't a joiner," and I wonder when I could possibly squeeze in the time what with keeping up with my husband's activities. If you or anyone else can give me advice as to what to do, I will appreciate it.

WORRIED.

Yes, this is the other side of the coin. A husband who complains that his wife never wants to go out with him or cultivate mutual friends may be the guilty party in that he is demanding too much of her time outside the home and undermining their marriage with organizations which require his attention and energies. Your only answer may be to discriminate among his many activities and try to accompany him to those which you consider most important—then put your foot down and refuse to make yourself a nervous wreck by trying to do more than you should. Keep on inviting those friends and relatives to dinner. If he has to go to another engagement, let him. You can have a good time with your guests, and if you're careful to invite those with whom he is congenial, he may leave with a pang of regret—or decide to stay and enjoy the evening at home.

Dear Martha:

● I'M 16 and have met a boy whom I like very much. He is 17, and he also likes me. He asked me to go steady, and I told him yes. My mother approved, but my father didn't. He says when you agree to go steady it's more or less being engaged. I have no intention of being engaged or getting married for quite a few years. My father never has been able to see my point of view and when he talks to me, I never get to say anything. My father has nothing against this boy. The boy is quiet and very mannerly. Martha, do you see anything wrong with going steady? JOYCE.

Today, for teenagers to go steady, doesn't have much significance in most circles. But personally, I think boys and girls miss a lot of fun when they settle down to going with one person, even for a short time. They get out of circulation. Others don't call them, and they haven't an opportunity to know as many boys and girls as they would otherwise. But am I being terribly old-fashioned and stuffy when I ask why you can't date this boy without a going-steady agreement? If he's the right kind of boy, surely your dad wouldn't mind your dating him. To go with him as much as your parents approve, without promising not to date anyone else, might be your answer.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

Revivals Important Part of Spring Fashions

Empire Mode, Directoire Era and 1910 Period Are Sharing Honors as Inspirations for New Styles

IRENE OF NEW YORK FEATURES A REVIVAL OF OLD-FASHIONED MILLINERY, WITH A BIG-CROWNED MODEL TIED WITH VEILING REMINISCENT OF EARLY MOTORING FASHIONS.

THE "WISP" PUMP BY DELMAN IS WORN PLAIN OR DECORATED WITH A VARIETY OF BUCKLES. ALUMINUM HEEL AND VERY LOW CUT ARE MODERN TRENDS.

A REVIVAL OF 1910 FASHIONS IS SEEN IN THIS BLACK WOOL DAYTIME DRESS BY NORMAN NORELL. IT FASTENS AT THE BACK WITH BRIGHT BLACK BUTTONS. BULKY HAT AND LONG BLACK GLOVES ARE CHARACTERISTIC OF THE ERA.

LARGE DISK EARRINGS THAT RESEMBLE QUAINT BUTTONS ARE APPROPRIATE WITH THE FRENCH TWIST HAIR STYLE IN VOGUE FOR SPRING. TEXTURED GOLD CRISSCROSSED WITH SIMULATED JEWELS IS USED FOR MATCHING PIN.

CRISP SILK ORGANZA, TOUCHED WITH VELVET BANDING, IS TIED TO GIVE THE EFFECT OF A JABOT. SCARF BY GLENTEX HAS OMBRE SHADING.

By Sylvia Stiles

THE fashions that look newest for spring actually are the oldest. Most important changes in silhouette and in various items of a woman's wardrobe have to do with revivals. The Empire mode with its high-waisted sheath, the Directoire era, dominated by shirred bodices, high-placed sashes, and slim skirts, and the 1910 period with its overpowering hats and a certain siren-like emphasis are sharing honors as the inspirations for the spring season.

Along with the revivals of old-time silhouettes are definite trends in accessories, colors and fabrics. There is also a swing to old-fashioned hair-dos with the vogue of the French roll and the French twist. All of these go together and prove once more that fashions move in cycles, and styles inevitably return at least several times during every century.

Typical of the fashion figure that is receiving the most attention among American designers is the slim model wearing a black crepe de chine sheath, long gloves that extend above the elbows, an enveloping, overpowering hat, and pointed shoes. Norman Norell, recognized as one of the most aggressive and original of the New York creators, interprets the season's foremost fashion with a straight button-back, unbelted dress accented with a 1910 hat of natural colored straw. Another of his themes has a torso length beige overblouse and a black skirt.

The slim dresses and the big hats require a different coiffure this season, especially the coiffure that is sleek and reminiscent of other years. The French twist style which has not been popular for more than a quarter of a century is the one the hair stylists like best. Stylists point out that the larger hats don't look well with hair hanging about the shoulders. Neither do they look attractive with the closely cropped, boyish hair-do. The French twist not only suits the hats and the slim dresses but is an excellent foil for jewels and bows.

For those who want to try this French twist, Lura de Gez, a leading hair stylist, offers the following suggestions: Part the hair wherever it is most becoming. Wave it or curl it in front for softness. Comb the side hair back, keeping the hair in two parts—a section of hair on each side of the head. Attach the hair from one side (preferably the side where there is less hair) to the upper back of the head. This hair can be held in place with hairpins inserted and then reversed to go in the opposite direction; or held together with a rubber band or a tie of velvet ribbon used with the velvet side next to the hair so that the ribbon will not slip. Then cross the other section of the hair over the section that already has been attached—covering pins, ribbon, or rubber band. This second section of hair is turned under and over the first, and pinned either in a long curl or flat.

Because one change of style invariably leads to another, the French roll suggests the wearing of a different type of jewelry than was suitable with previous coiffures. Big button earrings are favored, and often are accompanied by matching cluster pins. Gold is liked, and may be combined with white or colored enamel or with colorful stones. Button earrings of simulated pearls or of rhinestones that look like real buttons also are popular. Other costume jewelry types in vogue for spring include the multiple strand necklaces to be worn with the wide-open necklines. With coat and suit jacket collars flat and cut to show more of the neck, these larger strands of necklaces are preferred.

Of interest, too, among accessories are the scarfs made of chiffon and organza. These may be worn to fill in the wide expanse of bare throat or to form frilly jabots. The revival of jabots is noteworthy. Not only are there scarfs arranged in jabot formation, but handkerchief linen and organdy frills in variety. Shorter sleeves of coats and suits require much longer gloves. Many of the spring gloves extend above the elbows, while others are of the four-button length. Glace kid gloves are displayed extensively in vivid shades as well as white and the neutral shades.

To co-ordinate the 1910 fashions and those of earlier periods, veils assume new fashion importance. There is a fad for chiffon and veiling scarfs to be tied over the big hats, much as the motor veils were used in the duster era. Close-fitting veils that give a beauty-patch effect also are featured by several millinery designers with their wide-brimmed hats.

Footwear fashions are keeping pace with other revivals to the extent that toes are pointed, lines are slim, and dainty effects predominate. The very low cut pump is a leading shoe style for evening as well as for daytime. Again, it brings another old-fashioned idea to prominence—that of the jeweled shoe buckle. A variety of buckles may be obtained to wear with pumps. Tailored buckles as well as more elaborate ones may be slipped easily into place.

Chiffon and crepe de chine fabrics are among the oldtimers that have returned to fashion. Even the colors for spring have a nostalgic emphasis. Violet and light green are pretty favorites. Beige and brown predominate among basic wardrobe hues.

LOVE IS ETERNAL ✦ The Serial Story

Lincoln Wins the Election, Goes to Washington for Inauguration—Grave Problems

By Irving Stone

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

THE campaign sprang into existence full-blooded and full-blown: a wigwam was built, prototype of thousands throughout the North; marching groups and military companies called Wide-Awakes paraded with kerosene torches, wearing red military caps and blue capes of shiny leather to catch the dripping pitch. From the very outset the upsurge for Lincoln and the Republicans was infused with a religious fervor amounting to exultation.

By the time the Democrats assembled in Baltimore, the northern portion to nominate Stephen Douglas, the southern to nominate Vice President John C. Breckinridge on a slavery platform, the Republicans had had a full month to organize their local, state and national committees, collect funds and flood the North with pictures and stories of Lincoln.

He remained quietly at home, doing no speaking or campaigning. He spent his days at the governor's office, which had been loaned to him for the campaign, greeting the hundreds of people who poured into Springfield to meet and confer with him.

They had come through some 20 years of politics without receiving personal vituperation; now the floodgates were open and in the opposition press Abraham was called a nullity, an ignoramus, a third-party country lawyer who could not speak correctly, who made coarse jokes, was not a gentleman, looked like a gorilla and walked like a baboon. Mary took none of this seriously, but she resented the high glee in which his supporters throughout the country called him Old Abe.

On the night before the election, after months of high energy and high confidence, there came a giant hand striking out of the night, suffocating her. What if they had been deluding themselves again, as they had so often in the past? Suppose they were roundly beaten tomorrow, as Stephen Douglas had beaten them for 20 years? She knew neither of them would sleep that night.

At the breakfast table she asked, "What are the soothsayers soothsaying to you this morning, Abraham?"

Good humor was lurking about his clear gray eyes. "If you promise not to tell any of the voters today, I would rather have a full term in the Senate, where there is more chance to make a reputation and less danger of losing it, than four years of the presidency."

At midafternoon Mary walked dowtown with the boys to see the crowds thronging the square, the Statehouse and the sidewalks, a subdued hush over them all.

She joined the Republican women at Watson's Saloon, where they were preparing what they hoped would be a celebration supper when the news came over the wires that Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania and New York were safe for Lincoln.

Abraham had gone to the telegraph office to read the bulletins as they came in. At last it was reported that Philadelphia had gone Republican by 5000 votes; Pennsylvania was safe. Then Abraham carried Springfield and Illinois, though he lost to Douglas in Sangamon county. Indiana also was counted secure. It would take only the vote of New York to insure victory. Mary worked frantically to keep her tension under control.

AT midnight Abraham came into Watson's. He reached out a hand for hers, while he shook his head indicating that they still were awaiting the final word. A few minutes later a messenger from the telegraph office came running. Outside a tremendous shout went up. Even before Abraham, pale and solemn, passed her the telegram, Mary knew that he had won. When she looked up from the dispatch, he took her in his arms.

Then on Dec. 20, South Carolina seceded from the Union, an act which had been threatened since 1830. In the early weeks of the New Year the legislatures of Mississippi, Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana and later Texas voted themselves out of the Union. Representatives of the seven seceded states met in Montgomery, Ala., to form the Confederate States of American, elect Jefferson Davis as president and set up their own government.

As March 4 grew close there were increasing threats that Abraham never would be inaugurated, that he would be assassinated before he could leave Springfield, that if he ever reached Washington he would be shot down before he could take the oath of office. One morning he received a box containing the mummy of a Negro; Mary was the recipient of an oil painting showing Abraham with a rope around his neck, his feet chained, his body tarred and feathered, hanging from a tree.

A fine rain was falling on the morning of departure. Abraham wore a gray wool shawl around his neck and covering his shoulders. When they reached the small brick depot of the Great Western station they were surprised to find several hundred people assembled. He stood on the platform, took off his hat and began to speak in a quiet voice:

"No one not in my situation can appreciate my feeling of sadness at this parting. To this place, and the kindness of these people, I owe everything. Here I have lived a quarter of a century, and have passed from a young man to an old man. Here my children have been born, and one is buried. I now leave, not knowing when, or whether ever, I may return, with a task before me greater than that which rested upon Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine Being, Who ever attended him, I cannot succeed. With that assistance I cannot fail. Trusting in Him, Who can go with me, and remain with you and be everywhere for good, let us confidentaly hope that all will yet be well. To His care commending you, as I hope in your prayers you will commend me, I bid you an affectionate farewell."

THE journey was a constant delight for the three boys. Robert, who had come home from Harvard to join the inaugural train, spent half of his time with the engineer, the other half at the refreshment bar. Each time the train stopped and strangers came aboard, Tad rushed forward crying, "Do you want to meet Old Abe, the President?" and then pointed out one of the other members of the presidential party.

For Mary the great stop was New York. They rode to the Astor Hotel in an open carriage, barely had time to freshen up before there was a reception, with the Veterans of the War of 1812 parading past in full uniform. In Philadelphia, shortly after the flag-raising ceremony at Independence Hall, Mary saw that something was troubling Abraham, something beyond the growing apprehension of the chaos he would find in Washington. In Harrisburg he said to her: "Mary, we're going to have to change our plans. Seems there's a conspiracy in Baltimore to harm me while our cars are being drawn across the city. Norman Judd hired a detective by the name of Allan Pinkerton to investigate and they told me yesterday in Philadelphia they're convinced a barber by the name of Fernandina, head of one of the secret military societies, plans to kill me."

She stared at him in silence. After a moment he continued, "They've made plans for me to leave Harrisburg secretly tonight: the regular Washington train will be held in the Philadelphia station and I'll go into Washington on it. You and the children will go on with the inaugural train. No one will know we have changed our plans."

"Should the President-elect slink into Washington?"

"I don't like it any better than you do, Mary," he cried irately.

Obstinately she argued that if there was to be danger she should be with him. Abraham mustered the presidential party to defend the new plan. Norman Judd was their spokesman. He reviewed the situation in Baltimore: at least half the city was secessionist and in an ugly temper, the chief marshal of police was sympathetic to the secessionists and would afford Mr. Lincoln no protection.

Mary felt her voice rise out of a deep well of anger. "Are we to go through four years in the presidency hiding and fleeing: If this is the best we have to offer to defend the Union, then God help us!"

They stood before her, 20 or so men, some of them staring, others with their eyes lowered. At last she said resignedly, "Very well, I'll not argue any further against this affront to the dignity of the presidential office; we will sneak into Washington. But if anything is going to happen to any member of the Lincoln family, gentlemen, it is going to happen when we are all together. Now if you will kindly leave the room, I will finish my packing."

The men started out the door, taking Abraham with them. Only Judd and Alexander McClure, representing the Governor of Pennsylvania, remained. When the door had closed, Judd said, "No, Mrs. Lincoln, you are not going with your husband."

She was gripped by each arm, rushed toward the adjoining room and forced inside. Then the door closed and she heard it lock behind her.

She sat up all night, not attempting to undress, hearing the men of the party pace the corridors and talk in guarded tones. In the morning word was brought that Abraham was safely in Washington, and that the inaugural train was ready to leave as soon as she and her party boarded.

She had forgotten, during the intervening 13 years, how predominantly southern Washington was; she was reminded on her first day in the capital. Though she was received with courtesy at the Willard Hotel and escorted up the luxurious five-room suite on the second floor, she felt an air of standoffishness as she passed through the public rooms.

On their first evening at the hotel a disunionist persuaded the musicians to play "Dixie" while the Lincolns were entering the dining room. Rumors reached her that for weeks the capital had been buzzing with stories of the uncouth manners of the rustic President-elect, while the secessionist ladies had been amusing themselves with anecdotes of the gaucherie of the log-cabin First Lady.

Whatever chance they might have had for a respectful if not affectionate welcome had been blasted by Abraham's manner of arrival. A reporter in Harrisburg had invented the detail of Abraham Lincoln stealing into Washington disguised in a Scotch-plaid cap and long military cloak. The cartoons of Abraham in all versions of the Scotch-plaid disguise were lethal; even his friends and supporters were ashamed. He said to Mary, "It was the gravest mistake I ever made. From now on my decisions will be my own. What happened happened because I did not really know who was boss. Now I know. I am the President. No man, no group of men, will ever come between us again."

She reached her hands up and ran them over his cheeks. "Thank you, Abraham. You have just made me mistress of the White House."

FOUR years before, President Buchanan had ridden to his inauguration through flags and crowds of wildly cheering enthusiasts; now as Mary Lincoln gazed at the faces lining Pennsylvania avenue she saw that most were solemn, many downright unfriendly. The shutters of the windows were closed and bolted. There was no sound except the boots of the infantrymen and the noise of the carriage wheels on the cobblestones; no cheers, no throngs of happy people giving the President the traditionally tumultuous welcome to Washington.

She took her seat in the second row on the platform that had been built out from the Capitol's east portico. Her sons sat on either side of her, Stephen Douglas immediately next to them.

To introduce him, Abraham had selected their friend Edward Baker, now Senator from Oregon. Baker was the only Republican Senator from the Pacific Coast to support the new Administration.

Abraham came onto the stand and there was a scattering of applause. Senator Baker gave a discreetly short introduction.

When Abraham began to speak his voice was high, a little nasal, the same voice she had heard address countless Illinois audiences. He had spoken only a few sentences before the tension went out of her. Abraham was delivering his inaugural address as though he had been giving them all his life.

First he tried to reassure the South: "Apprehension seems to exist among the people of the southern states, that by the accession of a Republican administration their property, and their peace, and personal security, are to be endangered. I have no purpose, directly or indirectly, to interfere with the institution of slavery in the states where it exists."

Next he informed the South that it could not secede: "No state can lawfully get out of the Union; resolves and ordinances to that effect are legally void. I therefore consider that, in view of the Constitution and the laws, the Union is unbroken; and, to the extent of my ability, I shall take care that the laws of the Union be faithfully executed."

Then, flinging out his long arms as though to enfold all men throughout the nation, he cried in a voice in which love and anguish were intermingled:

"In your hands, my dissatisfied fellow countrymen, and not in mine, is the momentous issue of civil war. The Government will not assail you. You can have no conflict without being yourselves the aggressors . . . We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave, to every living heart and hearthstone, all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union . . ."

THE applause, Mary noted, was more enthusiastic than when he had risen to make his speech. The ancient Chief Justice Taney, whose Dred Scott decision declaring that slaves were not human beings had done so much to elect Abraham, stepped forward with a Bible bound in cinnamon velvet. Abraham put his left hand on the open Bible, raised his gaunt long right arm to the heavens, and repeated after the Chief Justice:

"I, Abraham Lincoln, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of the President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Dignitaries on the stand crowded around to congratulate him. He turned to Mary, kissed her solemnly. The batteries on the hill began firing, announcing to the world that the United States had a new President. Mary thought, I hope that's the last cannon I hear to the end of my days.

They rode up the north driveway to the main entrance of the White House. Ex-President Buchanan shook hands in farewell. "If you are as happy to be entering the White House as I am to be leaving it you are the happiest people in the world."

Abraham linked his arm through hers. Together they crossed the theshold, Mary clutched his arm. "Abraham," she whispered, "we're home."

They had no more than stepped into the vestibule when Gen. Winfield Scott presented himself, holding a sheaf of papers from the War Department.

"Mr. President, this dispatch just arrived from Maj. Anderson, commander of Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbor. He is encircled by a ring of shore batteries, and the rebels are threatening to blow him out of the water . . . He warns us that if he is not provisioned by the fifteenth of March he will be forced to evacuate the fort."

Abraham thanked the general, who left. Mary turned to Abraham. "Couldn't Gen. Scott have given us time to find out where we live and wash our hands? Did he have to force a war upon you within seconds of our entering the White House?"

He craned his long neck downward and whispered against her ear in gentle irony, "Mary, we're home."

Mary gasped at the amount of work that needed doing in the White House. In the state dining room the carpet was dirty, the chandeliers had not been washed for years, the draperies were frayed. In the Red Room the wallpaper was discolored, the massive scuffed furniture in appropriate. The great East Room, running the entire width of the White House, where formal receptions and levees were held, had a worn velvet carpet and she could see the muslin backing through the hangings.

Finding Abraham in his office at his stand-up desk, she began pouring out her plans for refurbishing. He gazed at her over the rims of his spectacles like a schoolmaster. "Whoa, Mary, you've just broken the Treasury! Are you sure these times are propitious for redoing the mansion? With seven states no longer contributing funds?"

"A tenable point, Mr. President, but to leave the White House in this threadbare condition is to confess our uncertainty over the future. If we are shabby, that will encourage the South to treat us shabbily. And what about the diplomats who see us living like poor relations: won't their reports hurt us abroad when the seceded states look for recognition?"

Abraham chewed on this. "Basically, you are right. I'll see that Congress appropriates the money for you to do your job."

MARY'S outstanding surprise was the totally public nature of the White House, which was open to anyone: any person or committee wanting to see the President simply walked in the front door, mounted the main stairs and took a place in line in the office of John Nicolay, Abraham's chief secretary.

Late one afternoon Abraham came into Mary's bedroom, threw himself on a couch, his face gray with fatigue.

"Mary, they have descended on me like a plague of locusts."

She smiled, sat down on the edge of the sofa.

"Tell me, Abraham, how do you like being President?"

He chuckled, asked, "Have you heard the story about the fellow who was tarred and feathered and carried out of town on a rail? When a man in the crowd asked him how he liked it, he replied that if it was not for the honor of the thing he would much rather walk."

Then he grew serious. "Mary, if I fail to provision Fort Sumter and Fort Pickens, they will fall to the Confederates. Yet I must do nothing that will lead to the firing of shots. These office seekers make me feel like a man sitting in a palace assigning apartments while the structure is on fire."

One morning a few weeks later she was getting ready for breakfast when a messenger summoned her to the President's office. She found Abraham standing before the fireplace, holding a telegram in his hand. He held out the message. She read:

"Fort Sumter fired on by rebel shore batteries 4:30 this morning April 12 after General Beauregard demanded surrender and Major Anderson refused. Fort Sumter returning fire."

She looked up at him, her heart pounding in her breast.

"Abraham, what does it mean?"

He went to one of the big south windows to look out through a storm of rain at the uncompleted monument to President Washington which stood outlined against the hills of Virginia.

"I'll have to issue a call for troops . . . ."

"Oh, Abraham, a civil war . . . with our own people killing each other . . ." She stood by his side, tears in her eyes. Hate and destruction would rule; but there had to be love, too. Who would have the heart and compassion for love while holding reins on a maelstrom?

She looked up into her husband's face, lined, hollow-cheeked. Could it be Abraham? It would have to be.

The reaction to the firing on Sumter and the President's call for 75,000 troops was instantaneous. The border states categorically refused the order, Kentucky saying, "We will furnish no troops for the wicked purpose of subduing our sister southern states"; the governor of Missouri telegraphing, "Your requisition is illegal, unconstitutional, and revolutionary in its object"; while Tennessee stated, "In such unholy crusade no gallant son of Tennessee will ever draw his sword." But from Illinois came a telegram, "The governor had already received the tender of 40 companies"; from Indiana, "We have 6000 men in camp here and will have 8000 by tomorrow night"; and similar messages of support came from the governors of Ohio, Vermont and Iowa.

THE patriotic fervor of the North was their only good news. On Wednesday, two days after Abraham's proclamation reached there, Virginia seceded and, as he explained to Mary, with Virginia gone, North Carolina, Tennessee and Arkansas were sure to follow. The South would have the wealth, the talent and manpower to fight.

"Most of our West Point officers are from the seceded states, Abraham said. "During the past four years Buchanan has let the South drain us of troops, cannon, guns, ammunition."

Washington was faced across a none-too-wide river by the most militarily powerful state of the rebellion. The capital was indefensible, though General Scott, seventy-four-year-old hero of 1812 and the Mexican War, said with dignity that his effective force of 2100 men could withstand a long siege.

Helen Hayes' Son Gets Movie Role

HOLLYWOOD—James MacArthur, son of Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur, will repeat the role he created last August in the prize-winning "Climax!" TV play, "Deal a Blow," which R.K.O. will make this summer under the title "Is This Our Son?"

MacArthur, 17, who will make additional pictures for R.K.O., is attending school in the East and won't be available for filming until summer recess.

"Deal a Blow" won the Christopher Award as the outstanding dramatic play of 1955 and earned its author, Robert Dozier, a citation from Look magazine as the outstanding writer of the year. The story, which the author is adapting for the screen, concerns the dramatic adjustment of a teen-ager to his parents.

Independent Basis

HOLLYWOOD — Richard Widmark is the latest star to become associated with United Artists on an independent production basis. He will make two pictures through the newly-formed Heath Productions, Inc. The first, planned for late summer or early fall filming, will be "The Seven File," a suspense story by William P. McGivern. It will be published shortly as a novel by Dodd-Mead.

Return of Errol Flynn

HOLLYWOOD—Errol Flynn, who returned recently to Hollywood after an extended stay in Europe, may resume acting here under the Universal-International banner. The studio has offered him the lead opposite Cornell Borchers in "Istanbul." Flynn reportedly has agreed tentatively to do the film.

Query From Mother Who Packs Lunch

By Dorothy Brainerd

THE question raised by Mrs. R. L. is one which has puzzled many a mother who packs a lunch for her family.

She asks: "Is it safe for a child to carry hot chocolate milk to school in a thermos bottle? I have heard that warm milk is a good breeding place for germs, and consequently I am a little hesitant to do this."

First of all, let's say that if it is possible for the child to get a good hot lunch at school, it would be preferable for him to do so.

However, there is no reason why hot chocolate milk may not be carried in a thermos with safety if these precautions are observed:

1. The thermos should be sterilized just before the milk is put in.

2. The milk should be scalding hot—not boiling, but scalding, or 145 degrees by a dairy thermometer. If you intend to make a practice of this, it might be wise to invest in a dairy thermometer and be sure that the milk actually does reach that temperature.

A thermos which has been used for milk or a milk-base product such as a cream soup should be rinsed with cool water, then washed thoroughly with hot suds and rinsed as soon as it is brought home. Then, just before it is to be filled, it should be rinsed again with boiling water to sterilize it. This is important on two counts—for sanitation, and to warm the bottle before filling it. Liquids which are to be carried in the thermos should be scalding hot, not just lukewarm, when they are placed in it.

If these practices of good sanitation are carefully observed all along the way and if the milk was in good condition to start with, there should be no problem.

But if the thermos is just rinsed out under warm running water before being filled, and if the milk is lukewarm, there definitely could be danger. One should be really clinical about this, observing these precautions to the letter.

MRS. M. A.'s QUESTIONS range from front porch to bedroom, to dining room.

"Would you please inform me how to whiten stone used as a trim on a brick porch and also on the outside of the house?" she asks. "Also, how does one launder a crocheted bedspread? And finally, what type of tablecloth would be proper on an eighteenth century mahogany table when it is not in use? I know it looks best to have it without a cloth but my children put things on it and consequently it becomes scratched. I want to put the pads and tablecloth on for protective purposes."

If the stone areas are small, scrubbing them with a coarse scouring cleanser and a good hard scrub brush might help some.

If the area is large, it might pay you to have it sandblasted.

I know of no other way in which the stone could be whitened other than to paint it with a paint made expressly for use on bricks. Any readers have other suggestions? If so, do send them along.

The crocheted bedspread may be washed in mild lukewarm suds, rinsed in lukewarm water. While it is drying, stretch it gently to proportions, or use a curtain stretcher.

As you say, the dining room table really should not have a cloth on it between meals. However, if the children must use it for a work surface practical considerations will have to take precedence over appearance. Any covering would be at best a compromise. Perhaps a dark one in the predominating color of your carpet might be least conspicuous. Or, if you aren't interested in making it inconspicuous, you might use one of the smart cloths of a very dark fabric with heavy, stark white fringe.

FROM GREENVILLE, ILL., Mrs. John writes: "I have recently moved into a house where the hardwood floor seems beyond repair. The floors are worn down to the natural wood and are very soiled. They are of the thinnest hardwood and the floor is uneven. I am told they cannot be sanded and refinished. Is there anything I could do to make them look a little better?"

If you are sure that they cannot be resurfaced, I would suggest that you remove all of the old wax and dirt with a good floor cleaner. Then stain them the color you want and, when thoroughly dry, give them a coat of high-quality paste wax.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your question or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Gallery Notes

NEW St. Louis exhibitions include those of Robert S. Robison, closing Friday at C.W.S. galleries, 1006 Olive street; Edwin Brewer, March 17 at Petit Pigalle, 4207 Lindell boulevard; Siegfried Reinhardt, Feb. 24 at Martin Schweig Gallery of Modern Art, 4657 Maryland avenue, and Twentieth Century Art Club, March 5, at City Art Museum.

"Mermaids" and "The Little Sea Maid," new woodcuts by Charles Quest, artist who teaches at Washington University School of Fine Arts, are on display in the Philadelphia Print Club's thirtieth annual exhibition of wood engravings and woodcuts. The show will close Feb. 24.

Saunders Schultz, St. Louis painter, muralist and printmaker, is represented in the same show by "Autumnal Equinox," a new woodcut.

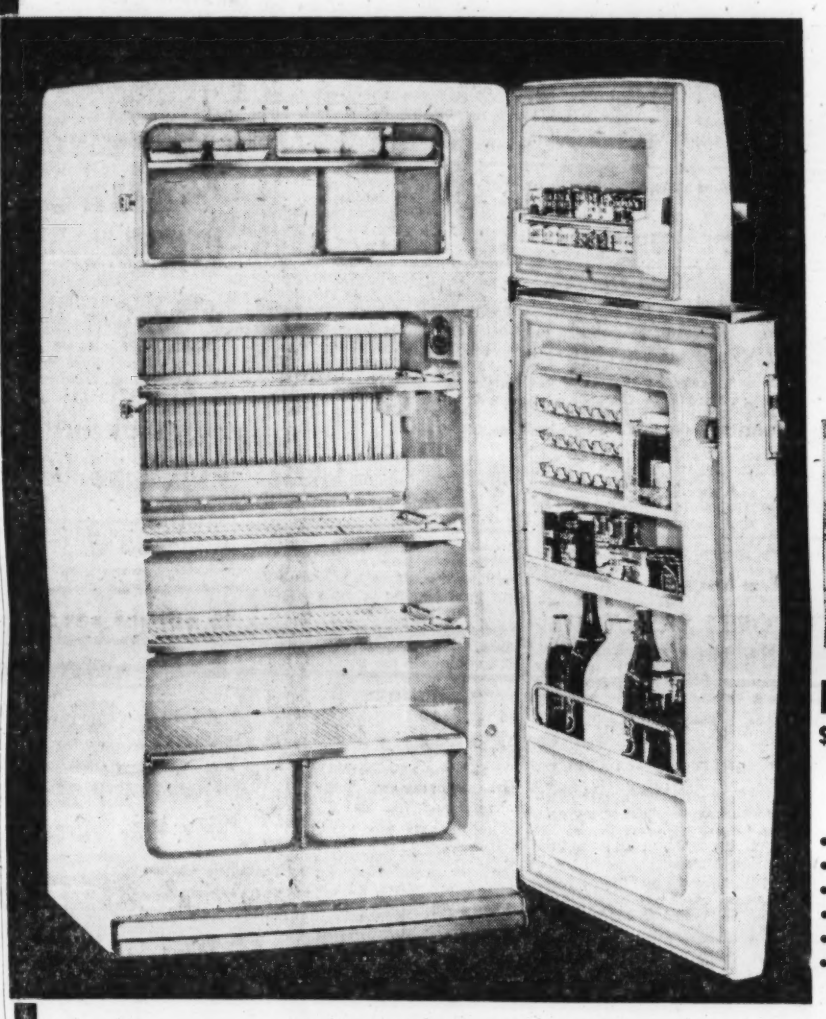

At the Kennedy Galleries, New York, are three other recent Quest woodcuts: "Embrace," "Nude Girls" and "Jupiter and Callisto." Quest's "Still Life With Vise," a wood engraving of which several impressions are owned by New York's Museum of Modern Art, was exhibited recently in a touring collection at Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, the museum reports.

Alan Ladd's Free Lunch—Exclusive To His Friends

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 11 (UP). ALAN LADD runs the most exclusive restaurant in Flickerville. It's open only for lunch and customers are limited to a small group of close friends.

What's more, Alan picks up the check and his wife, Sue, prepares the menu.

Ladd's lunch wagon is confined to his dressing room on the Warner Brothers lot. And six days a week Alan invites his buddies to drop in for a snack.

Prepared by servants at Alan's Holmby Hills mansion, the food is driven to the studio by Sue. A casserole usually is the main dish with salad, coffee and dessert on the side. Saturday is delicatessen day.

"I've been holding this little open house for the past ten years," Alan said, watching his friends load up on chicken and noodles. "It's one of the few chances I get during the day to relax and enjoy myself.

"Fifteen or 20 guys drop in to have a bite and tell a few lies. There's never any table hopping or nerve-wracking business talk.

"That's why I quit eating in studio commissaries. I was always talking business during lunch instead of taking it easy."

The muscular actor is a permanent fixture at Warner's. He ranks as star when he's working in a studio production, and as a bigshot mogul when he rolls movies for his own company, Jaquar Productions. The combination is enough to rate him a four-unit dressing room complete with a small kitchen.

Because he got his start in movies as a grip, Ladd still is on close terms with dozens of the studio's "little people" who drop in for lunch.

ONE NOONTIME this week Alan broke bread with a couple of grips, three electricians, his makeup man, soundman, standin and cameraman. Also putting on the feedbag were Producer Martin Rackin and Director Gordon Douglas—all of whom are working in "Santiago."

A couple of surprise visitors were Bill Bendix and William Demarest who dropped by to say hello and dig into some tasty chow. They weren't even working on the lot.

"This is usually a stag hour," Alan explained. "The boys can tell jokes and not have to worry about their manners.

"The studio allows me to keep pretty much the same crew for all our pictures. So there are about 50 characters who always work together.

"I've known some of them since 1934 when I made my living climbing around the catwalks setting up lights. They haven't changed much. And I'd like to think I haven't either."

Faulkner's 'Pylon'

HOLLYWOOD — "Pylon," a novel by Nobel Prize Winner William Faulkner, has been purchased by Universal-International for an undisclosed amount. U-I will assign the property to Albert Zugsmith to produce for the studio.

The novel, published in 1949, concerns a stunt flier, his wife and partner. Set in the south in the 1930s, the story details their difficulties and romantic tribulations.

Faulkner sold the motion picture rights of "Soldier's Pay" to Jerry Wald in September.

W. R. Burnett Novel

HOLLYWOOD—Walter Wanger has bought screen rights to "Underdog," a new novel by W. R. Burnett, as the basis for the first of six pictures he has contracted to produce for RKO. The producer read galley proofs of the story about a neurotic former soldier who becomes involuntarily involved in a melodramatic crime. The book will be brought out in the fall by Alfred Knopf. Burnett also has agreed to write his own screen play for filming in the early summer.

Closet Accessories

Closet accessories designed by Schiaparelli include cushioned dress hangers filled with sachet powder and having tops made of brass rollers which allow them to move smoothly along the closet rods. Some of the hangers have satin dust covers that fit over the shoulders of a dress. There also are fur or stole hangers made of a thick velvet bar suspended from brass chains. These, too, are scented.

SUSMAN'S
1114 North Market — St. Louis, Missouri — Saturday, Jan. 28, 1956

Dear Neighbor:

Less than a decade ago there sprang up all over America a group of stores doing business on a revolutionary new merchandising principle. They located tremendous showrooms in low rental areas . . . bypassed the trimmings of window displays, carpeted floors, fancy fixtures, and the like . . . and sold their merchandise at lower than retail list prices on a volume basis.

Five years ago, we at Susman's opened such a store here in St. Louis. We converted much of our huge warehouse space at 1114 North Market to showrooms and the people began pouring in.

In appreciation of this patronage which mushroomed our business into a tremendous savings center for the entire St. Louis area, we are holding our 5th Anniversary Sale. Here are examples of some of the values you'll find at Susman's. We cordially invite you and your friends to visit us. No discount card needed. Our low prices are plainly marked. Come in and find out what it means to "Save at Susman's."

Earl Carroll Story

HOLLYWOOD—The colorful career of the late Broadway and Hollywood show producer, Earl Carroll, is being planned as a future film production by RKO Radio Pictures. Carroll was a contemporary of Florenz Ziegfeld in the production of girl show musicalist—the "Vanities"—on Broadway in the 1920's, but he was more interested in exposing the feminine form than in advancing the art of storytelling through song. Negotiations to film the showman's life story have been started by William Dozier, RKO production chief, with Guy Ward, attorney for the Carroll estate.

Dick and June

HOLLYWOOD—Dick Powell and June Allyson plan to continue being business as well as marital partners. The couple will have a financing-distribution arrangement with R.K.O. to film "Ride a Tiger" under the banner of their own company, Pamrick Productions. The picture, with Miss Allyson as co-star and Powell as director-producer, will be adapted from the Robert Wilder novel titled "And Ride a Tiger." Miss Allyson recently co-starred with Jack Lemmon in Columbia's remake with music of "It Happened One Night," directed and produced by Powell.

Some Problems Of Etiquette

By Emily Post

A READER tells me: "Several weeks ago a neighbor of mine was quite ill and I took her a bouquet of fresh cut flowers which I arranged in one of my own vases. I had not intended her to keep the vase but evidently she thought the vase was meant for her too as it has not been sent back to me. Would it be proper to ask her to return it to me, and if so, how can I do this without causing her embarrassment?"

The next time you see her, say, "If you will give me my vase, I will be glad to carry it home."

DEAR MRS. POST: My husband and I have received an engraved invitation to a small dance. The guest of honor is a granddaughter of a friend of ours. The hour named is ten o'clock in the ballroom of a hotel. We are not young and would like to know what is expected of us. If we accept, what time should be arrive? (2) Will my husband be expected to dance with the hostess and other women guests? (3) How soon would it be all right to leave? (4) Should I write a note of thanks afterwards? (5) Are we expected to find the hostess to say good-bye?

Answer: (1) You are expected to arrive about a half hour after the time set. If he dances well he would be expected to do his share of dancing, but if he does not dance well it would be a great mistake for him to make the attempt. (3) You would have to stay at least an hour. (4) Not necessarily. (5) Yes, unless you leave very early.

DEAR MRS. POST: Will you please tell me whether it is proper to slice a banana on cereal with a spoon? My husband always does this and our two sons are beginning to follow his example. I do not think it is proper but would like your opinion before putting my foot down on this practice.

Answer? It is perfectly all right to use a spoon.

DEAR MRS. POST: My brother and I will be graduating from the same school at the same time. Would it be proper to send one invitation to each of our relatives with both of our name cards inclosed, or are separate invitations necessary?

Answer: One invitation with both your cards inclosed is sufficient.

DEAR MRS. POST: "I am a young business woman in the early twenties. I ride the bus to and from work every day. On several occasions I have offered my seat to an elderly woman passenger. The other day an elderly man got on the bus and my first impulse was to offer him my seat, but on second thought did not do so for fear of embarrassing him. Is it proper for a young woman to offer her seat to a man? I would appreciate hearing from you on this matter."

If he's really old or in any way incapacitated it would be a kind gesture, but a man still strong would resent it very much.

Egg Suggestion

Here's a way to sneak an egg into the diet of one of your family who tires of eggs or just doesn't like them: Beat one up and slowly stir into it enough hot cereal for one serving.

Our Magic's REAL

You don't need a Genie or Aladdin's Lamp to enjoy a wonderful vacation on the scenic Gulf Coast, often referred to as "the magic strip." The beauty of the area does have a magic quality, but the 28-mile sand beach is very real, as are the more than 100 fine hotels and motels, good restaurants, excellent golf courses, tempting fishing spots and sunny climate. No lamps to rub, no Genie to call, a postcard will do.

'SHOP' FOR VACATION AT SPORTS SHOWS

Just as most gardeners already are studying seed catalogues, so are Mr. and Mrs. John A. Vacationer already thinking about summer vacation plans.

Although increasing numbers of Americans take winter, spring and fall vacations, the majority still must make their major plans for the summer—when children are on vacation from school. The family vacation is the highlight of the whole family year. It's the subject of at least as much thought and argument as purchase of a new family car.

An increasingly important aid is helping vacation-planners make up their minds are the sports-travel-vacation shows which are held in the country's major cities from now through early April.

The National Association of Travel Organizations, semi-official voice of the American travel industry, predicts that some 2,000,000 people will attend such shows during 1956.

Visitors go to the shows shopping for ideas about places at which to vacation—and also equipment to take along.

Many of the shows have facilities for showing travel films. Owners of some resorts are right at their booths to answer every question you might want to ask.

Various transportation companies have specialists on hand to supplement the information of their folders and exhibits—to tell you of special tours and money-saving tricks. There are few vacation-sports shows where you can't take home a suitcase full of free pamphlets.

The shows are good places, too, to admire the new boats and trailers, the new fishing rods, reels and lures.

Archery Enthusiasts.

Archery enthusiasts compete in outdoor exhibitions each Sunday afternoon during the winter at Fort Lauderdale's Holiday Park.

'Sea Shells by the Shore'

"Sister Susie" and her friends are shell collecting on Apalachicola Beach on the northwestern coast of Florida, a new and rising area in the resort state. Collecting shells is a popular sport along the coast in many sections of Florida.

FLORIDA SHELL FAIR ON MARCH 8, 9, 10

The nineteenth annual Shell Fair will be held Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, March 8, 9, and 10, on the island which is famous for its shell-strewn beaches, Sanibel Island, Fla.

The largest part of the show in the Community House will be devoted to the display of priceless collections of shells from all over the world. There also will be an art exhibit of pictures and etchings designed around the shells, a driftwood corner, and a diorama of sea life. The aquariums will exhibit live shells, seahorses, starfish, and other marine specimens just as they live in the nearby Gulf of Mexico. United States Fish and Wildlife Service will show films during show hours of local wildlife.

Transportation will be furnished from the automobile ferry which runs from Punta Rassa, and the mail boat which leaves from Fort Myers. There is no charge for attendance.

Many vacationers will bring their cars and combine a visit to the Shell Fair with a sightseeing trip of the two lovely islands, Sanibel and Captiva, connected by a new bridge between the two. Their unspoiled tropical beauty makes the trip well worthwhile.

CAMELLIAS HERALD SPRING DOWN IN NORTH CAROLINA

Spring comes early to southeastern North Carolina, reached by U.S. 17 on its 200-mile swing down the North Carolina coast, and to the resort area bisected by U.S. Highway 1.

Camellias are now blooming at beauty spots in and around the historic port city of Wilmington, on U.S. 17. On other main north-south routes—among them 301 and 29—travelers also find a wealth of vacation attractions and good accommodations.

The twelfth annual Camellia Show, open without charge to the public, will be held Feb. 25-26 in the Wilmington Savings & Trust Co. building. On March 10-11 at Wilmington, the North Carolina Orchid Society will present its first annual orchid show, featuring exotic blossoms from Hawaii and other foreign countries, as well as from North Carolina and half a dozen other states. Orchids growing in profusion may be seen at the Carolina Orchid Growers' big greenhouses near Pinehurst, open to visitors Mondays through Fridays.

PLAN AN ESCORTED TOUR OF EUROPE? BETTER BOOK NOW

Steamship companies, air lines and travel agencies, having predicted record travel to Europe this year, are now urging prospective tourists to stake out their travel claims before choice departure dates are booked solid.

This is particularly true of European escorted tours, where membership totals have to be limited to assure ideal group travel. Finding literature to help decide on a European tour is easy enough, since St. Louis travel agents carry tour brochures issued by most large travel organizations.

Europe route most in demand for 1956, according to Cook's Travel Service, is a swing through England, France, Italy, Switzerland, the Rhineland, and either Holland or Belgium—or both. Such a trip may be labeled a "highlight" tour, "popular vacation" tour, "heart of Europe," "six-country," "picturesque" or "grand tour"—depending on cost-levels and places emphasized.

An escorted journey through Scandinavia, Germany, Holland, France and England may be billed as a "northern scenic" tour. A series of four "old world vacation" tours are limited to young people of college-age.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC FAIR EXTENDED TO AUGUST 16

Attendance figures for the first month at the International Fair for Peace and Progress in the Dominican Republic have exceeded all expectations. At the end of January more than 250,000 persons had passed through the gates.

Because of the interest in the Fair, it has been announced that the closing date will be advanced to Aug. 16, 1956.

AIR FLIGHT, CAR RENTAL POPULAR COMBINATION

MIAMI, Fla. — The combination of flying and renting a car at destination has become so popular among winter visitors to Miami that one out of every 10 passengers arriving here by scheduled airline drives away from the airport in a rented car.

A recent survey shows that on an average, they keep a car 18 days and drive 650 miles. Many winter visitors keep a car up to six weeks and some for as long as five to six months.

Although the majority of Miami visitors who rent cars drive in the Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood and Ft. Lauderdale area, many take longer trips, especially to the Florida Keys and the lower west coast.

This winter there is also a marked increase in the number of visitors taking extended auto tours of the State.

Passengers arriving by Eastern Air Lines in Jacksonville, Orlando, Tampa, St. Petersburg, West Palm Beach and Miami can rent a car at any of these cities, tour the State and turn the car in at any other of these cities without being charged for returning it to the city where it was obtained.

Florida is ideal for an auto tour. There are hundreds of tourist attractions scattered throughout the state and mile after mile of excellent highways running coast to coast and from the rolling hill country in the north to the trackless Everglades in the south. There are thousands of beautiful lakes and rivers, crystal clear springs and vast citrus plantations. The beauties of the Sunshine State can best be seen by car.

Pick Your Weather.

Colombia is one of the few countries in the world where a traveler can pick his weather, since one city or another at all times in the year, can offer either spring, summer, fall or winter temperatures.

Eddie Robinson Back on Stage in Chayefsky Drama

By Brooks Atkinson

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.

IT seems like old times to have Edward G. Robinson back.

As a matter of fact, he is back on the stage where he used to perform before he settled down in Hollywood. For the ANTA Theater, where "Middle of the Night" opened Wednesday evening, was the Guild Theater when he was working for a living.

As a middle-aged garment manufacturer in Paddy Chayefsky's drama, Mr. Robinson gives a winning and skillful performance. No one could be more relaxed about a part. But no one could give the character more warmth or tenderness, or make an undistinguished man seem so notable.

By naming all his characters "the girl," "the manufacturer," "the sister," and so on, Mr. Chayefsky means to suggest that they are ordinary people. So they are. Although Mr. Robinson does not make the manufacturer extraordinary, he makes him very human and disarming, and very pleasant company for an evening in the theater.

"Middle of the Night," which is billed as "a love story," is the tale of a widower, age 53, who falls in love with a blonde, age 24. Mr. Chayefsky has written it in a minor key, deliberately holding down the emotion and laying emphasis on the homeliness of the material. Everyone is intentionally average—the manufacturer and his daughter and sister; the blonde and her mother, sister and impulsive husband.

The REACTIONS to a love affair between a middle-aged man and a girl who is younger than his daughter are average, and the dialogue is composed of average talk. Toward his material Mr. Chayefsky has a kind of O. Henry sense of familiarity. Apparently it is part of his design to underwrite the plot.

In "Marty," the celebrated screen play that Mr. Chayefsky wrote, this method resulted in a thoroughly delightful picture. The method is less successful in the theater, where size is more important. The play that is underwritten may turn out not to be as picturesque as Mr. Chayefsky probably imagined. Without some pressure back of it the average may emerge as dullness in the theater.

When Mr. Robinson is not on the stage, dullness is always lurking around the edges of Mr. Chayefsky's play. What we are left with is rather spiritless narrative frequently punctuated with a scene so honest and poignant that it brings the audience and the play quickly to life at the same time. Mr. Chayefsky has a particular talent for writing about the temperament of his Jewish family. He describes the homelife of a garment manufacturer with taste and authenticity and also with sympathetic humor.

'Kind Lady'

The Southtown Players will hold the final two performances of "Kind Lady" at 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. today at the Dakota Theater, 4557 Virginia avenue.

OFF THE RECORD — By Ed Reed

"OH DEAR, HERE COMES THE TAYLORS—RUN DOWN TO YOUR WORKSHOP AND MAKE A COUPLE MORE CHAIRS."

'Teahouse' Role

HOLLYWOOD—Eddie Albert will play the role of the psychiatrist for the M-G-M adaptation of "Teahouse of the August Moon." The actor and his wife, Margo, plan to make a tour of the Orient to tape record native music of India, Burma, the Malay peninsula and Australia after completing the film, which will be made on location in Japan. The Alberts' latest record album contains native music of France, Italy and Spain.

Music by Metchen

HOLLYWOOD — Jacques Metchen, French composer, has been signed by producer-director Norman Krasna to write and conduct the music for "The Ambassador's Daughter." Filming of the picture has been completed. The movie stars Olivia de Havilland, John Forsythe, Myrna Loy, Edward Arnold and Adolphe Menjou.

Producer Kramer Has Tiger by the Tail in 'The Gun'

By Joe Hyams

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 11.

STANLEY KRAMER is back in Madrid again where he is producing and directing the most difficult expansive and expensive film of his career, "The Pride and the Passion." The film, based on C. S. Forrester's novel, "The Gun," will star Cary Grant, Frank Sinatra, Sophia Loren and the gun.

In Forrester's novel the gun was described as 46 feet long with a 30-inch bore. It rode on four wheels, 10 feet in diameter, and it required 600 men and assorted burros to move it from place to place. The novel is based on the problems of a large group of Spanish guerrileros who haul the gun across Spain to breach a wall at Avila, a city held by Napoleon.

Kramer, a stickler for detail, approached the gun as he did the nose of Cyrano when he made that picture. He had dozens of sketches made based on Forrester's specifications. The sketches were photographed and models built. The first model with a plaster barrel cost $19,000 to make and weighed six tons. Five other models were also made, of which two were the same size of balsa wood and two of papier mache, and two scale models of balsa. All the guns are practical, short of actual firing.

"The clothesline of the story is the triumph of human beings over every conceivable obstacle and suffering to obtain their objective," Kramer said. The film clothesline is hung with several near disasters in which the gun, pulled by 600 Spanish peasants, has to hurtle a cliff and actually be towed over hundreds of miles of road.

IN ADDITION to his problems with the gun, Kramer said he also has a tremendous problem with money—not raising it, but spending it. The film has six separate budgets, one in dollars for actors, a second in pesetas for local help, a third in pounds sterling for English technicians, a fourth in German Reichmarks for 14 trucks and generators, a fifth in Italian lire for cameras and costumers and a sixth in francs for 18 French cars and the French hairdressers and designers.

Kramer has been living in Madrid since last April with a permanent cadre of 32 Americans, all of whom have been going to Berlitz schools to learn the language. When the picture starts in April, after a year of preparation, he will have a permanent corps of 65 Americans. Four hundred gun men will be picked up as he goes along.

Kramer, whose first successful independent production was "The Champion," which had a budget of $380,000, said he expects this film, his eighteenth independent, to cost $4,000,000.

"If we were making it in America it would cost $9,000,000," he said. For one thing, the Spanish workers bring their own lunch and get paid only half as much as they earn here.

"Making this picture is like having a tiger by the tail. I started out with a small picture, involving just a few people and ended up with a DeMille spectacle, because of the nature of the story. I'll never do it again, however."

Bildor's Home Show in Last Run This Afternoon

Spectators at the Bildors' Home Show looking through polyethelene shelter at bathing beauties who disport themselves in warmed water in the fiberglass pool or sun themselves before electric heaters on the pool's bank, adjacent to one of two full-sized home on The Arena lawn which are among major attractions for the show visitors. The girls are Blonde Janet Lambert and Brunette Rose Tiller. The show will have its last run this afternoon and evening. The homes will remain open to visitors for some little time after the show, it was indicated.

Jury of Award Selects School Plan From Designs Submitted by Architects Here

This is a perspective rendering of "classroom cluster" style construction for proposed new Junior High School for the newly developed Parkway School District of Central West St. Louis County. The award winning design, chosen from among more than 20 entries, is by Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum, Inc.

Builders' Show Last Run Today

Entering the windup of its nine-day stand this afternoon, the Bildors Tenth Annual Home Show at The Arena has already drawn more than 100,000 visitors for the third year in a row. Doors will open at 2 p.m. and close at 10:30 tonight.

Officials of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis have been well pleased with the turnout, which began with a first-day crowd of 12,324 a week ago yesterday, and 20,612 the first Sunday.

More than 100 booths and exhibits present a diversity of home-making materials, products, equipment, appliances and furnishings never before matched here for completeness.

"We are having one of the best attended and best handled shows in Home Bildor history," said Show Chairman Richard C. Higginbotham. "Unusual interest has been shown by visitors, and according to their remarks to me they all saw everything they expected to see, and much more."

Many exhibitors, stimulated by good sales and contacts with prospects, have begun planning next year's participation.

Ready for Next Year.

For the second year the distinction of being the first to present his check for space in the 1957 Bildors Home Show went to Vince Welsch of the Welsch Furnace Co., handling heating and air-conditioning equipment. Reservations from others are coming in, a number making arrangements for the same booths as this year.

The two homes on the lawn continue to attract lineups of visitors eager to see the layout, furnishings and decorations inside. Crowds are drawn by the enclosed and heated swimming pool at the Indian Meadows ranch-type house of Melvin H. Glick and Co. and by the contemporary design and construction, inside and out, of the Frostwood home erected by Fischer and Frichtel, Inc.

Unfailingly popular with the swarms of show-goers is the modern family garden, designed by Miss Edith Murch, occupying 65 feet of the Arena lobby. The garden has attracted much praise and visitors are often observed standing first on one side, then on the other, taking it all in.

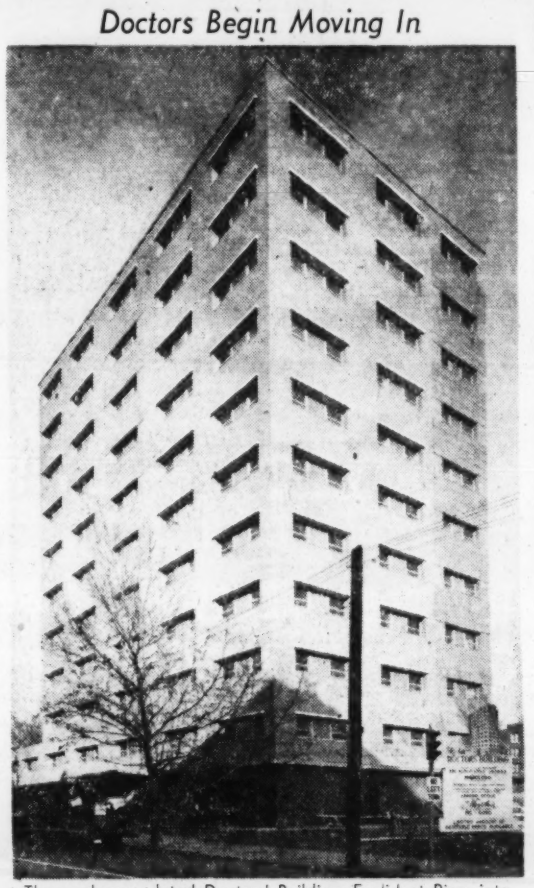

History Out Loud.

With its several notable features, the Bildor Center remains high on the show's list of stopping points. The Washington University students' model homes entered in the Bildors' $750 architectural competition and the subject of close scrutiny and warm admiration. Translighted panels and running commentary on the evolution of St. Louis homes through nearly two centuries invite visitors to take advantage of the lounge. The Bildors Book of Homes, showing the houses and subdivisions of 41 association members, is passed out free at the Center.

Booths of industry groups are

Doctors Begin Moving In

The newly completed Doctors' Building, Euclid at Pine, into which tenants began moving last week. First multi-storied medical office building to be erected in West End, it is project of Joseph A. Campagna, in association with I. E. Millstone. Wells & Wells, Inc., were architects-engineers with Paul Valenti, architectural associate, and Millstone's construction company did the building of the near $2,000,000 property.

State Hardware Dealers Meeting Here This Week

The annual convention and show of the Missouri Retail Hardware Dealers is to open at the Shearton-Jefferson Hotel Tuesday morning, to run through Thursday. It is expected to attract some 2500 dealers and personnel of their establishments.

Business sessions will convene at 9:30 each morning and run to 12 noon. Exhibits are to be open from 12 noon to 10 p.m. daily.

Pricipal speaker this year is to be Russell R. Mueller, Indianapolis, managing director of the National Retail Hardware Association.

Principal subjects of the convention are budget selling, observance of Hardware Week the period of April 12-21, and the merchandising of housewares, about which Miss Virginia Eicholtz will talk.

A. J. Fuchs, president, will preside at all sessions.

The exhibits are expected to include some 115 displays of hardware and allied lines.

Business Forms Printers Lease Office, Warehouse

The Stock Forms Co., a newly created division of Moore Business Forms, Inc., which claims to be the world's largest manufacturer of printed business forms, has leased office and warehouse space at 4300 Forest Park avenue (at Boyle) for a central district headquarters, the Reliance Real Estate Co., Inc., reports. Reliance was the leasing agent.

Brought to St. Louis as manager for the central area, to serve 19 states, supervise warehouse operations here and in St. Paul and Dallas, is Clayton J. Barth. Also brought to the city for related functions in the same total area are Edw. Ellavsky, as supplies manager, and Richard J. Ertman, comptroller.

Barth, married and with four children, will shortly take up residence in Burton Duenke's new Harwood Hills development in Des Peres. He has come from Buffalo, N.Y. Ellavsky, married and with four children, comes from St. Paul, and Ertmann from Buffalo. He, likewise, is married and father of four children.

Doctors Begin to Move In

Tenants began moving into the new 12-story Doctors' Building, 100 North Euclid avenue, last week, and will continue to be moving in from time to time from now until about May 1, when all suites are completed, the building agency reported.

The structure, first tall one to be erected in the West End of the city specifically designed for medical and dental services, has been put up on a 45,000 square-foot lot, where it occupies about 5000 square feet, leaving the rest for blacktopped parking zones. An additional 20,000 square feet of parking area has been provided on a lot just west of the Parkedge Hotel (across Euclid), with entrances from both Pine and Euclid, the same as on the building lot.

Total floor area in the building is some 65,000 square feet, with a ground-level lobby floor, 11 stories of ofifces.

Eyebrows Rout Sun.

The building is of reinforced concrete, faced with polished granite to second-floor level, with peach-tone brick above. Partitions are a new fireproof type with metal studding and lath, with plaster finish. Door and window frames are all metal.

Architectural "eyebrows" above each window give an assist to the full, year-round air-conditioning equipment, by warding off direct summer sunlight. Interior structural columns carry the service stacks, providing flexibility of office and treatment room arrangements.

Ceilings are of acoustical tile on suspended metal channels, with fiberglass insulation blankets. Floors are finished in asphalt tile, except for the lobby, which is in terazzo.

Builder and owner of the new building is Joseph A. Campagna, in association with I. E. Millstone, whose construction company has done the building. Title is held by the Pine West Corp., in which John J. Campagna, who directs the Campagna New York City construction and investment holdings, also is an officer, director and stockholder. Donald J. Meyer is corporation counsel.

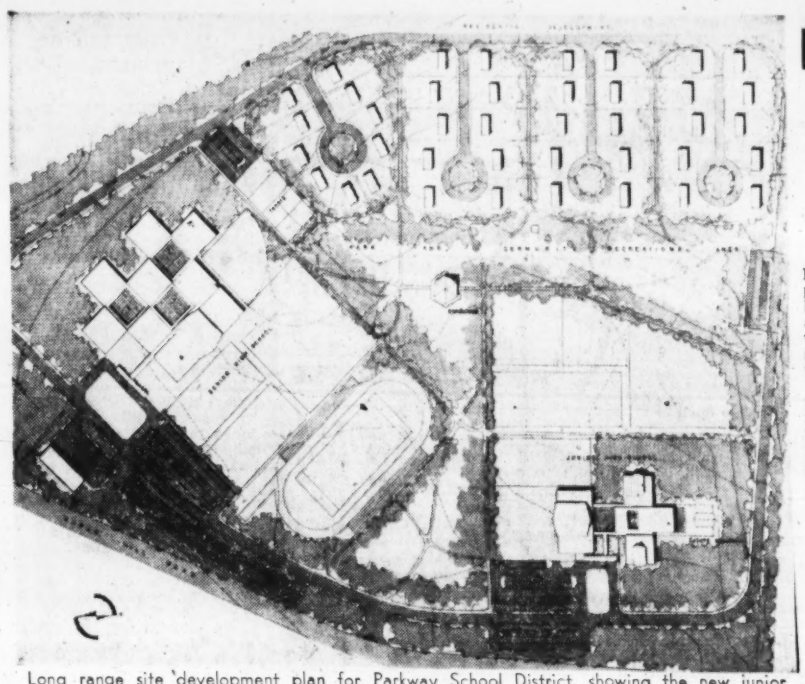

Special Equipment.

Architects and engineers for the building were Wells & Wells, Inc., with Paul Valenti of Washington University School of Architecture, as associate. Cost of the project, completed, will approximate $2,000,000, according to recent estimate.

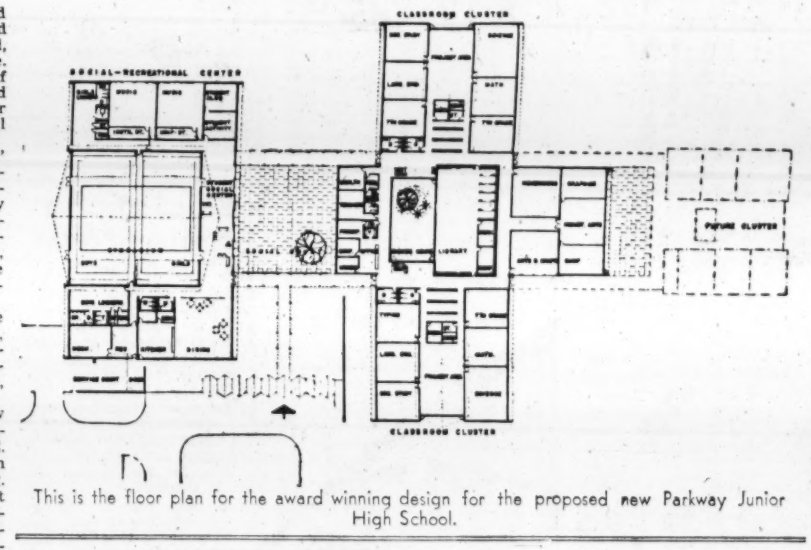

The building will house about 40 complete medical suites, has a prescription pharmacy on the Euclid-Pine corner, an optician's shop in the lobby. Radiology facilities include special X-ray with "cobalt bomb" equipment which cost in excess of $100,000. There also is to be a pathological laboratory.

For public and tenants a coffee shop has been included,

Sonnenfeld's Will Open In 2 Suburbs This Week

Sonnenfeld's, specialty shop for women, whose downtown store is at 610 Washington avenue, will open two suburban branch stores next Thursday, marking its first expansion into suburban operation.

The two new stores are in Northland shopping center, Lucas and Hunt and West Florissant avenue, and in Westroads, Clayton and Brentwood. Each is a complete department store for women, with departments also for girls, tots to teen-agers.

Sonnenfeld's Westroads has entrances from both east and west side parking areas.

Decor is in pinks, grays, greens, with bright orange display tables, brass and wrought iron fixtures, indirect and spot lighting to dramatize merchandise.

Departments include sportswear, a bridal shop, shoes, millinery, furs, foundations and a normal run of other feminine garments and accessories.

There is a basement lounge, general and credit offices and a will-call department.

Moves to Clayton

The Haas & Alt real estate agency has consolidated its downtown and Clayton offices in a new Clayton location, 6524 Clayton road (between Bellevue avenue and Big Bend boulevard). Offices were maintained downtown at 705 Chestnut street from 1915 to the present and previously in another downtown location from 1901. A county office had been established in recent years at 7905 Forsyth.

"It's not that we'd sell downtown St. Louis short," said Quentin Alt, "but the new location gives us ground floor space and ample off-street parking area, in addition to being better centralized for our operations."

Designer Of School Selected

For the first time, in the St. Louis area, the design for a public school property has been selected through an open architectural competition in which more than 20 architects submitted ideas for consideration.

Winner of the first award in the competition for design of a new junior high school in the recently created Parkway Consolidated School District is the St. Louis architectural firm of Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum, Inc., Dr. Robert D. Snyder, superintendent of the Parkway District, reports.

The competition was open to all registered architects in the St. Louis metropolitan area.

The Jury of Award consisted of William W. Caudill, A.I.A., College Station, Tex.; Charles R. Colbert, A.I.A., New Orleans, La., and George D. Englehart, director, School Building Service, Missouri Department of Education, Jefferson City, Mo., with Buford L. Pickens, A.I.A., dean of the School of Architecture of Washington University acting as professional advisor to the Parkway school board.

For Large Site.

The winning design takes in a future development plan for the entire site, including a senior high school, a residential area and a section for community recreation. The site comprises a 102-acre tract on Woods Mill road just north of Ladue road in St. Louis county.

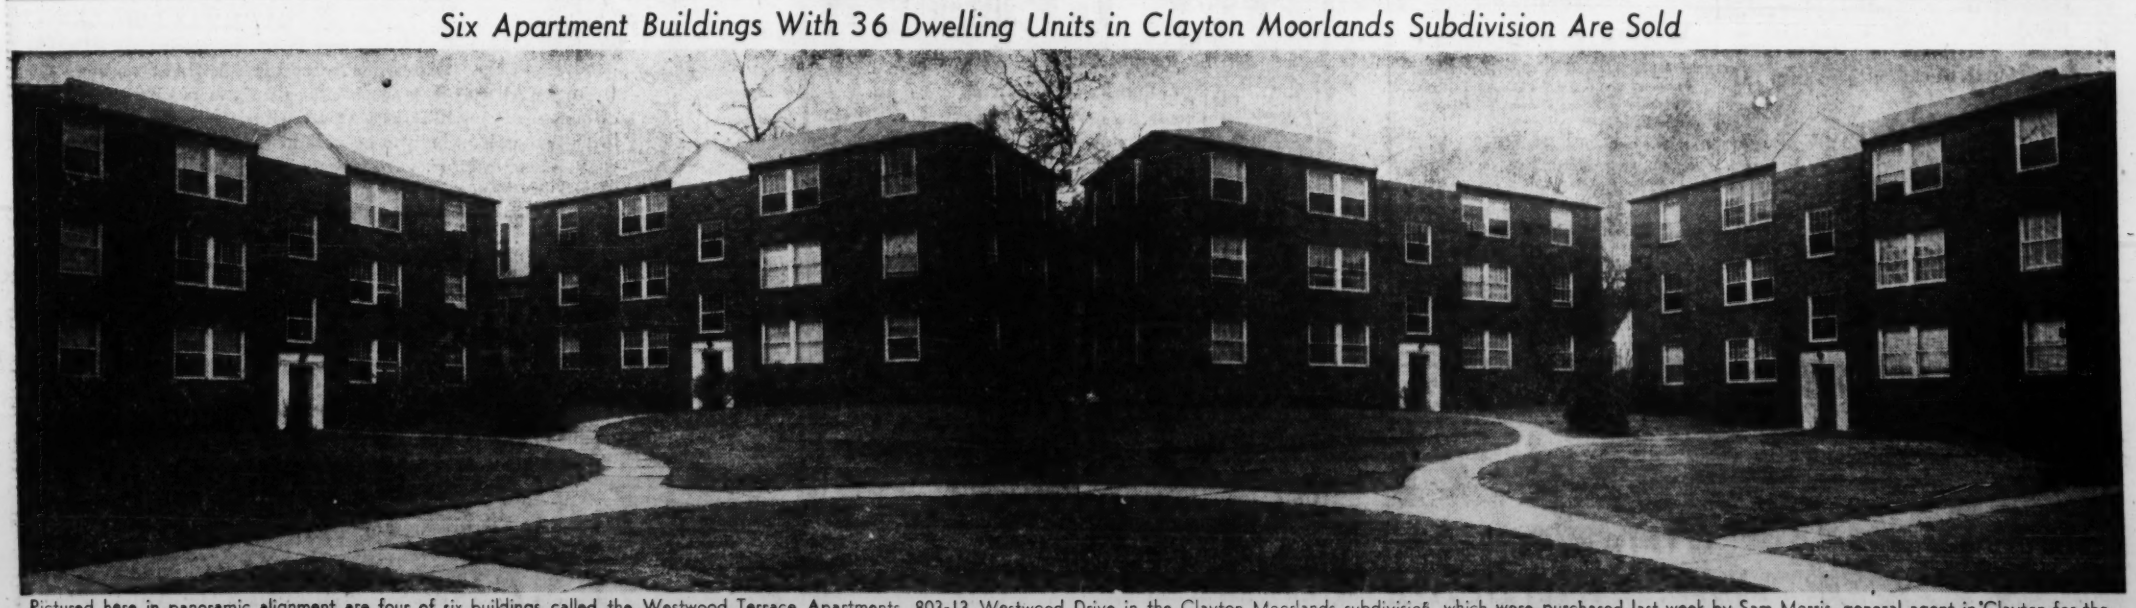

To be built first, with an anticipated completion date set for next fall, is the junior high school.

Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum's plan calls for a two-building unit, separated by a large social court, and connected by covered walks, with the classrooms and administrative and library facilities in one unit, and the gymnasium, cafeteria and social-recreational area in the other. According to the school board's specifications, the total floor area is just less than 50,000 square feet, and the total estimated cost well within the $600,000, or $12 per square foot specified by the board.

The "classroom cluster" plan, which the architects have used successfully in designs for schools in the Brentwood and Riverview Gardens school districts, is the basis of the design. There are to be three basic clusters, with provisions for a future fourth cluster, grouped around a small court and library. Two of the clusters contain six classrooms each, for languages, social studies, science and mathematics, with special rooms for the seventh-grade classes and for typing instructions. The seventh grade classes are kept in self-contained units as a transition from the grade school to high school instruction techniques. Each of these two clusters contains a central "project area" for the use of all the various classes, as well as a bank of lockers for the students using that cluster. The proj-

Grocery Wholesale Company in New Home on Forest Park Blvd.

This is the new home of the Stocker-Hausmann Grocery Company at 3723-41 Forest Park boulevard. Property, formerly occupied by a shoe machinery company, was extensively remodeled, has been leased for 15 years from Loco Realty Co. in deal handled by Isaac T. Cook Co. and Fulbright-Mohrmann real estate agency.

Food Supply House Moves To New Home

The Stocker-Hausmann Grocery company, wholesale house dealing exclusively with institutional food users such as hotels and restaurants, moved last week into a new office and operations center at 3723-41 Forest Park boulevard.

The property, formerly occupied by a shoe machinery company, was purchased by the Loco Realty Co., headed by John and David Burdeau, and extensively remodeled for Stocker-Hausmann use. Reconstruction cost was reported as about $75,000.

The grocery company moved from smaller space at Sixteenth and Cass avenues, now has 40,000 square feet on one floor. Office space is 2500 square feet.

Remodeling of the building included creation of two truck bays, under roof and off-street, for receiving and shipping. The west bay, for receiving, will handle two tractor-trailers at a time. The east, or shipping bay, will handle four local delivery trucks at a time, with truck-bed-high loading docks.

In the building, new wiring and lighting was installed and new, unit type gas-fired heaters were installed. New sprinklers were installed. Windows at the rear were bricked in to make added wall stacking space.

Stocker-Hausmann is headed by Alvin Kidd, president; Arthur Hausmann, vice president; Earl Bleicher, vice president and sales manager; Myron Sivovich, secretary-treasurer. The firm employes an average of 33 persons.

Women of Realty To Hear Talk on Preparing 'Ads'

"How to Make Your Advertising Click" will be the subject of a talk by Leslie E. Prichard of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch at a meeting of the Women's Division St. Louis Real Estate Board next Wednesday evening in the Caribbean Room of the Congress Hotel. A cocktail hour will proceed the dinner meeting.

Long associated with the Post-Dispatch as censor of advertising and research director, Prichard previously served as retail advertising manager. He received his early training as a food and drug chemist and joined the Post-Dispatch in 1929 to censor medical advertising. Since that time the censorship policies have been extended to all other classifications of advertising.

Prichard has been a member of the board of directors of the Better Business Bureau for 15 years and a member of the board of directors and secretary of the Advertising Club of St. Louis for several years. He was one of the founders of the Institute on Advertising sponsored by the Advertising Club at St. Louis University and has lectured for the Institute during the ten years of its existence.

Mrs. Clara Pendleton Welsch, president, will preside at the meeting. Mrs. Clarice Hoppe Koch is program chairman and she will be assisted by Miss Regina Strauss and Miss Sara Jane Corcoran. Women in real estate interested in making their advertising more successful are being invited to attend. Reservations may be made by contacting Mrs. May Carle Moore, FOrest 1-3384.

Elliot Bergfeld, of the Campagna-built Montclair Apartments, is in charge of scheduling the move-in of tenants. Joseph Campagna, since coming to St. Louis to erect the Montclair, has taken a leading role in St. Louis area investment construction. Currently he is building a 16-story apartment building, the Frontenac, at Kingshighway and Pine, in conjunction with John B. Gutmann; recently reported plans for a medical office building and two other structures at the Clayton-Brentwood intersection in St. Louis county.

New Home of Boat, Cycle Dealer

The Ray George Raycycle Co. moved last week from 322 South Grand boulevard to new and larger quarters at 3456 South Grand, at Potomac. This is the new home of the company, a block north of Gravois, just across from the Rubicam Business school.

Boat, Cycle Dealers to New Stand

The Ray George, Raycycle Co., formerly located at 3322 South Grand boulevard, has moved to larger and more adequately equipped quarters numbered 3456 South Grand, at Potomac.

Principals of the organization, which was started in 1933, are Ray George, Fred Tewes and Danny Leech. The Ray George Co. deals in boats, motors and trailers. The Raycycle Co. deals in bicycles and accessories. The AAA Typewriter Service, a third branch of the operation, deals in typewriters and other office equipment and services.

The firm was at Grand and Shenandoah until 1944, moved to 3322 South Grand and was there until the present move. The newly acquired location provides departmentalized space for all three divisions of the business, with about 8000 square feet of display area. A large elevator makes the handling of sizeable boats to the second floor feasible. Eight brands of boats are handled, one top line of outboard motors, three lines of trailers, many accessories, a line of bikes and a line of office machines and equipment.

Frames Increase

A recent Bureau of Labor Statistics survey shows that the number of single-family homes built of wood frame construction increased by 20 per cent in the first quarter of 1955, compared with the same period of 1954. The average United States home, according to industry estimates, contains from 1000 to 2000 pieces of lumber, large and small.

Sealing Important.

Five years of paint exposure fence studies indicate that one of the most important features of a good paint job over exterior plywood siding is proper edgesealing.

SPRING IN MAPLE

The advantage of a floor laid with northern hard maple is its natural "spring," afforded by its living cellular composition. This retards foot and leg fatigue and consequent nerve strain.

Northern hard maple fills such a wide range of requirements that it is considered the most versatile of all hardwood flooring materials.

Builders report a time saving of more than 50 per cent when big panels of plywood are laid for subflooring rather than other materials.

New Truck Terminal Job Begun

Work is under way on the north side of Chouteau avenue, west of Grand boulevard, on construction of a new $650,000 truck freight terminal for the Strickland Transportation Co., Inc. Ground preparation began last Dec. 15, and completion by next May 1 is anticipated, the company reports.

Of concrete and brick, the terminal is going up on a 225,000 square-foot lot, will have 66 dock area doors. Also on the lot there are to be built shop and garage facilities.

The new terminal will provide for combined operation of the Strickland Transportation Co., Inc., and of the Strickland management control of the Kelleher Motor Lines, Inc. Strickland was authorized last Dec. 5 by the I.C.C. to assume management control of Kelleher.

Strickland, which operates some 700 mobile units in seven central states, has terminal facilities now at 1427 South Third street and Kelleher, functioning in seven states, has terminal facilities at 3130 Hall street.

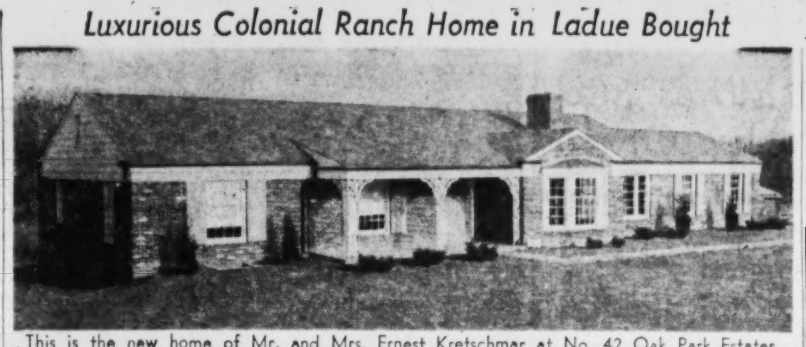

The two lines' terminals in Chicago have been combined as they are being here.

Strickland runs take in terminals at Memphis, Little Rock, Texarkana, Shreveport, Dallas-Fort Worth, Amarillo, Houston, San Antonio. Kelleher runs take in terminals at Cleveland, New York City, Elizabeth, N. J., and intermediate points in Indiana and Pennsylvania. The Strickland home office is in Dallas.

Luxurious Colonial Ranch Home in Ladue Bought

This is the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kretschmar at No. 42 Oak Park Estates, Ladue. On acre of ground, house has eight rooms, two and one-half baths. House was built by Henry M. Altpeter Jr. and Robert Salisbury. Sale was negotiated by the Dolan Co.

Architect's Prospective of Normandy School

This is a sketch from Architect Charles W. Lorenz of new Bermuda Elementary school, to be erected on site at Bermuda avenue and Dartmoor Drive in Normandy for School District R-2, (Ferguson-Florissant). Construction cost of $324,000 is to be financed largely by the Federal Government under the defense program to relieve overcrowding in existing schools in the area.

U.S. to Pay Most of New School Cost

The contract has been let to the Hinrichs Construction Co., general contractor, for construction of a new elementary school, to be called the Bermuda, for Ferguson-Florissant School District R-2, to relieve congestion in present buildings in the district.

The building, designed by Architect Charles W. Lorenz, with Leslie Bergmeier as structural engineer, Harry F. Wilson Associates, Inc., as mechanical engineers, will cost $324,000, or $11.30 a square foot. Most of the cost will be borne by the Federal Government under the defense program, since a high percentage of families whose children use R-2 schools are defense program personnel. The price includes over an acre of playground paving.

Lorenz has designed the building both structurally and mechanically to provide for easy and inexpensive expansion.

The building will be on a site at Bermuda drive and Dartmoor avenues in Normandy.

Construction will be with fireproofed steel frame, with brick and other masonry; reinforced concrete floors covered with asphalt tile; plaster walls and acoustical tile ceilings; glazed tile wainscots in corridors, kitchen and toilets (with ceramic tile floor in toilets); insulating concrete roof slab with tar and gravel bonded surfacing.

Windows will be in aluminum sash. A multi-purpose room will have ceiling with laminated wood beams and striated wood paneling, a maple stage floor, and will be equipped with folding tables, so that it converts from playroom to cafeteria, to auditorium.

All rooms will be wired to handle TV and motion picture projection, and the multi-purpose room will be adjoined by a kitchen and, at the stage, by dressing rooms.

There are to be 14 classrooms, one small special classroom, two kindergarten rooms, offices, vault, teachers' room, nurse's room, book storage.

Interests Sold

Unit Masonry Here Names Association Executive Director

Appointment of James B. Crowley as executive director of the Unit Masonry Association of Metropolitan St. Louis was reported yesterday by Leo F. Havey, president.

Crowley, 25, previously was employed by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. in St. Louis as a salesman of glass block and cellular glass insulation and in that capacity worked with architects, general contractors, mason contractors and others in the construction field.

He was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1954 with a degree in business administration.

Havey said the hiring of a full-time executive director was a move designed to further the Association's efforts to "contribute to the advancement and improvement of the unit masonry industry and its service to the public."

The Unit Masonry Association was formed a year ago as a joint management-labor organization. Its membership includes union bricklayers, mason contractors, manufacturers and suppliers of brick, concrete block, stone, structural glazed tile, glass block, marble and ceramic tile; materials suppliers, equipment dealers and others in the masonry industry.

Crowley resides at 1719 Del Norte in Richmond Heights.

constantly thronged by spectators, particularly when bricklaing or some other demonstration is going on. Unit masonry, combining several segments of the building industry; lathers and plasterers, Portland cement, clay tile and carpenters are represented.

Big Interested Crowds.

Commenting on the public's response to the show, Gene L. Vescovo, president of the Home Builders, said it surpassed all expectations.

"W. S. Bascom of Union Electric and Ray J. Vandagriff of Laclede Gas tell me they never saw such big crowds of interested visitors," he said, "and that holds true all the way through the show."

Union Electric's Mechanical Man never fails to rivet attention at the All-Electrical Village. In "real life" he is Harry Rose and makes his home in New Jersey. He has been performing as if he were actuated by clockwork for 31 years and in 42 states. This is the third year at the Bildors Show. As an indication of his mastery of nerve and muscle control, he has gone 55 minutes without blinking an eye.

Association Moves Into New Offices

The Portland Cement Association has opened a new suite of offices in the Syndicate Trust Building, distinguished by colorful interiors and interesting textures. Gray-white painted concrete block, in a variety of patterns, is complemented by white-maple paneling, colorful doors, textured glass, draperies, and furniture fabrics in the suite.

The Portland Cement Association is a national organization to improve and extend the use of cement and concrete and Carl Chappell, district engineer, in commissioning Burks & Landberg, architects, requested that the suite "demonstrate the potentialities of painted concrete block as an interior finish material."

The entrance door to the suite is perforated with two-inch holes in a regular pattern, a decorative and functional feature since the openings serve as a return air grill for the heating and cooling system. A playful note is added by painting the holes light yellow.

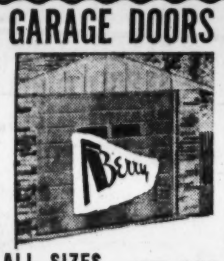

Directly inside the entrance lobby and screening the secretarial area from reception is an ornamental block screen topped by planting boxes containing greenery and ivy.

Variety is added to the symmetrically arranged offices by a very low ceiling in the corridor, necessary to accommodate heating and air conditioning ducts, but also creating an illusion of spaciousness as one walks into the higher ceilinged office spaces. This spacious effect is further enhanced by partitions between the offices which rise to door height for privacy and are clear glass from this point to the ceiling. Thus it is possible to see the ceilings of adjoining offices, an effect which enlarges the visual size of each room.

Concrete Block Used for Interior in New Offices

This is a view into the new offices of the Portland Cement Association, opened in the Syndicate Trust Building last Tuesday, showing how grey-white concrete block has been used advantageously in interior space division. Adivider topped by an ornamental planting box screens the secretarial area from the entrance lobby.

Strips of clear glass above concrete block partitions in new Portland Cement Association offices "borrow" light from one room to another, make rooms seem larger. Designing was by new architectural firm of Burks & Landberg.

Pays to Buy Quality.

It pays to buy a quality shower cabinet when you are in the market for this fixture either for a new house or for modernizing an existing house. Quality cabinets are sturdily made and the finish is carefully applied over specially prepared metal so that it will give many years of service without danger of corrosion, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

Landscape Men To Hear Plans To Honor Pring

Members of the Landscape and Nurserymen's Association of Greater St. Louis are to hear details of plans to honor George H. Pring of the Missouri Botanical Garden at their meeting tomorrow night at the American Legion Hall, 7800 Olive street, University City.

Pring is to be honored guest at a dinner being planned for presentation in the Missouri Athletic Club in March in connection with his fiftieth anniversary of service at Shaw's (Missouri Botanical) Garden.

The meeting of the nurserymen has been called for 8 p.m., report President Robert Dascher and Secretary E. F. Larson.

Monsanto Plan Wins Citation

DETROIT—The design by Vincent G. Kling, architect of Philadelphia, for the proposed St. Louis county office buildings for the Monsanto Chemical Company in St. Louis, Mo., (pictured in this section Sunday, Jan. 15) has won an Award Citation in the Commerce Category of the third annual Design Awards Program sponsored by Progressive Architecture, national architectural magazine. The award was presented by editor Thomas H. Creighton at an awards banquet held in Detroit, January 20.

Principal speakers on that occasion were Pietro Belluschi, dean of the School of Architecture and Planning at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Walter Reuther, head of the Industrial Union Department of the AFL-CIO and member of the Citizens' Redevelopment Corporation of Detroit. The award-winning designs were selected by a professional jury composed of Architects William Lescaze, Robert E. Alexander, Alfred L. Aydelott and Pietro Belluschi, and Engineer Paul Weidlinger. Sketches and plans of the winning projects were featured in the January issue of the magazine.

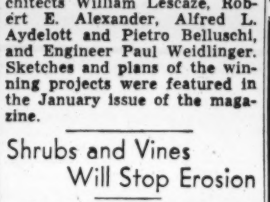

Shrubs and Vines Will Stop Erosion

On any steeply sloping land, the planting of shrubs and vines will prevent erosion and washing away of the topsoil. Where such slopes exist, especially in periods of heavy rainfall, grass alone will not hold the soil in place and small gullies appear and widen until the slope is unsightly.

The foliage of shrubs, vines and trees not only break up the raindrops as they fall to earth, lightening their impact, but the roots of the plants penetrate deeply into the soil, thus holding it in place, according to the American Association of Nurserymen. Many shrubs and vines can be used for this purpose, some of the more common vines being the honeysuckles, clematis, euonymous, akebia, etc., while almost any shrub will serve that has a good root system.

Clean and Oil.

Clean up, oil and overhaul your seed and fertilizer spreader, your power mower, or your power cultivator, so that the equipment will be ready to go when Springtime arrives.

Studebaker Sets Sights On New Goal

With completion of an intensive product development activity and a program to obtain competitive manufacturing costs, Studebaker is in the strongest marketing position it has been in since 1950 and has set its sights on recapturing its position as a strong volume competitor in the low-price field, William A. Keller, general sales manager, said here Friday. He made this report to more than 100 dealers in a meeting at the Congress Hotel arranged by Frank T. Corcoran, St. Louis zone manager.

Studebaker's strengthened competitive position is a result of the two-part program launched a year ago, following the combination of Studebaker and Packard into the fourth full-line producer.

With the completely restyled cars enjoying the highest level of public acceptance in six years, and the way opened through the new labor agreement for volume, quality production at a high level of efficiency in scheduling and shipping to dealer requirements, the Studebaker management for the first time can concentrate its full energies on building aggressive sales programs around the new models, Keller said.

"The Midwest will continue to be Studebaker's fastest growing market under this program," the automotive official said. He reported that almost one third of initial 1956 orders have come from these states and that shipments during 1955 were 32 per cent ahead of 1954 and 20 per cent greater than the increase nationally in sales.

GM Truck-Coach Dealers Meeting Here This Week

G.M.C. dealers from four states will gather in St. Louis Tuesday and Wednesday to familiarize themselves with improvements embodied in G.M.C.'s trucks for 1956, Arnold A. Butzow, St. Louis zone manager of the Truck and Coach Division, reports.

He said a program consisting of an address by a representative from G.M.C.'s home office in Pontiac, Mich., and the showing of motion pictures on new product developments and marketing plans will follow a luncheon in the St. Louis General Motors Training Center on Lindbergh boulevard, south of Kirkwood.

"With scores of mechanical and engineering advances highlighting our line for 1956, we believe this year's G.M.C. product development story is one of the most important ones we have ever told. It shows that G.M.C. once again has gone all-out to manufacture the finest trucks in the industry."

Butzow said this meeting is one of 41 this month in key cities throughout the United States.

ect areas are designed to help integrate the teaching of social studies with mathematics, science and the languages.

For Community, Too.

The third classroom cluster consists of special rooms for homemaking, graphics, industrial arts, shop, and arts and crafts. All classrooms, which have one glass wall, are supplied with additional natural light by plastic dome skylights.

Across the large court, which serves as focal center for the social life of the school community, is located the gymnasium and the student social center, a long area which borders the court and adjoins the cafeteria at one end and the student activity rooms at the other. Also in this unit are rooms for music instruction, the kitchen and the utilities.

The first award carries with it an automatic contract with the architects for the school board to build from their design. In explaining the competition, Snyder said, "Up until now, Parkway has been an exclusively elementary district. As it became clear that the time had come for us to expand into the junior high school level, we were determined to make sure that we had the very best architectural thinking in this area at our disposal. We are delighted with the results of the competition, and with the jury's choice. There were many fine designs, and we feel that this method gave us assurance that we are getting the best plan for our needs."

Of particular importance, Snyder said, was the close relation between the school board's educational ideas and the architects' design. "We feel that those learning experiences which are most effective in small groups should take place in physical surroundings of an appropriately small scale, while large group activities should have a correspondingly large setting. This sounds simple but is a very difficult problem for the school of over 500 students and a limited budget. The grouping of instructional cores in classroom clusters, so that each cluster is almost a 'little school' in itself seems to us an ideal solution," he said.

Pioneering Adventure.

In commenting on the competition, Dean Pickens termed it a "pioneering adventure" and said that it should help to open the gates to younger architects with fresh ideas. "Tremendous progress has been made in the past 10 years in school design, and even more should be made in the next 10," he said. "Designers are discovering the importance of psychological factors in the arrangement of physical space, light, ventilation, materials, colors and the grouping of classrooms." He pointed out that each of the competing architects was supplied with an identical set of detailed descriptions of the site and the intended program of instruction, as well as specifications for cost, space, number of students and other requirements. "They all started from exactly the same point, and the jury did not know the identity of any of the entrants until after the award was made," he said.

Other architects winning honors in the competition were: Runner-up, Eric W. Smith Jr. and Robert Entzeroth in association; honorable mention with special recognition, Joseph R. Passoneau (also of the winning firm of Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum, but who submitted an independent entry), and honorable mentions to Edward J. Thias and Bonsack & Pearce. Drawings and perspectives of all of the entries will be on display at the City Art Museum from today through Feb. 26. The exhibition was arranged, according to Charles Nagel, Museum director, to give the public an opportunity to view the work of many local architects, and also as "an interesting example of the variety of approaches to the solution of an architectural problem."

Work is scheduled to start on the new school from the winning design just as soon as possible, Snyder said. A bond issue was held last May to raise funds, and another bond issue election is scheduled for Feb. 14 for money for the senior high school and additions to the elementary schools in the district.

Truck Parley

W. L. Bell Jr., manager of the International truck branch at 4010 West Pine boulevard, will attend a motor truck retail management conference at Chicago all this week of the motor truck division, International Harvester Company. He will meet with International truck retail sales managers from throughout the United States. Subjects to be covered include sales management, management control, parts and service merchandising, community relations, and sales promotion and advertising. International Truck officials, headed by W. C. Schumacher, vice president of the motor truck division, and R. M. Buzard, sales manager, will preside.

Automotive Taxes.

Taxes take 24 cents out of every dollar spent for the purchase of an automobile. Special automobile taxes paid by United States motorists in 1954 totaled $6.2 billion.

Auto Final Count 9,169,444 Cars in 1955 Production

DETROIT—The final official count of 1955 motor vehicle factory sales shows a record-breaking 9,169,144 cars, trucks and busses sold by United States plants during the year, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reports.

The figure is more than 1,000,000 over the old record set in 1950 and approximately 2,500,000 above the 1954 total. Factory sales for one year have exceeded 8,000,000 only once before in automotive history, and that was when the 1950 record of 8,00,3056 was set, the A.M.A. said.

Included in the unprecedented 1955 total were 7,920,133 passenger car sales and 1,249,011 truck and motor coach sales.

Factory sales for December totaled 799,009, including 695,043 passenger cars and 103,966 trucks and coaches. During the year, sales averaged 764,095 per month, the A.M.A. reported.

Exports for the year totaled 447,032, or 4.9 per cent of all sales, and included 254,336 passenger cars and 192,696 trucks and coaches.

Tire Men Study

calator service connects the two floors.

Here the decor is different, with some walls in birch paneling, one done in fashionable burlap, fixtures in bright orange and birch.

Mrs. Marie Mahrt has been named manager of Sonnenfeld's Westroads, Al Dunn of Northland.

Sonnenfeld's was founded in 1880 by Herman Sonnenfeld as a small millinery shop on Broadway near Franklin. In 1896, Leopold Ackerman and E. R. Emanuel assumed control of the business, added ready-to-wear. In 1906, two years after the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, the store was moved to its present downtown headquarters. At that time Herman Hirsch became one of the principal owners. Selling space was doubled in 1921 and the store became a member of the Consolidated Retail Stores, a chain of 14 at the time and among the earlier independent buying syndicates in the field. A New York Office was set up by the syndicate. There are now 33 stores in the syndicate.

LINCOLN SAID . . .

"Fellow citizens, we cannot escape history. We of this Congress and this Administration will be remembered in spite of ourselves; no personal significance or insignificance can spare one or another of us. This fiery trial through which we pass will light us down in honor or dishonor to the last generation. We, even we here, hold the power and bear the responsibility."

A Lincoln.

CARL SANDBURG (left), renowned poet and authority on Lincoln, is to speak the lines above tonight during the playing of Aaron Copland's Lincoln Portrait on the Ed Sullivan show over CBS-TV. On the next page, Andre Kostelanetz, who will conduct the music, tells what happened when it was played — with the same words — in Washington, D.C., almost 14 years ago.

When I heard Lincoln's words

by ANDRE KOSTELANETZ

Tonight, when I hear Carl Sandburg speak the powerful words you have just read (p. 2), I will see again a time when I conducted the Lincoln Portrait and the vision of a "fiery trial" was very real to all Americans.

It was on July 15, 1942 — seven months after Pearl Harbor — that I mounted the open-air podium not 500 feet from the Lincoln Memorial in Washington. In the audience I recognized the grave faces of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, members of the Cabinet, Senators and Congressmen. As in Lincoln's day, we were a nation at war.

The Portrait had been conceived and born in war. Early in January, I had suggested to composer Copland the idea of depicting a historical personality by using music as an artist uses paints. Partly because Lincoln's Birthday was in the air, partly because Lincoln seemed to fit the time, he chose the 16th President of the United States.

As Copland set to work, our nation was in one of the darkest days in its history. Our Pacific Fleet had been all but destroyed. MacArthur, driven from Manila, was making a last-ditch stand on Corregidor. In Europe, our allies were beaten or facing defeat. France had fallen, Britain was reeling under a hail of fire bombs and Russia was fighting at the gates of Moscow.

Copland finished the rough sketch around Lincoln's Birthday, reworked and polished it that disastrous spring, intermixing with his own music strains from Camptown Races and Springfield Mountain and somber passages from Lincoln letters and speeches.

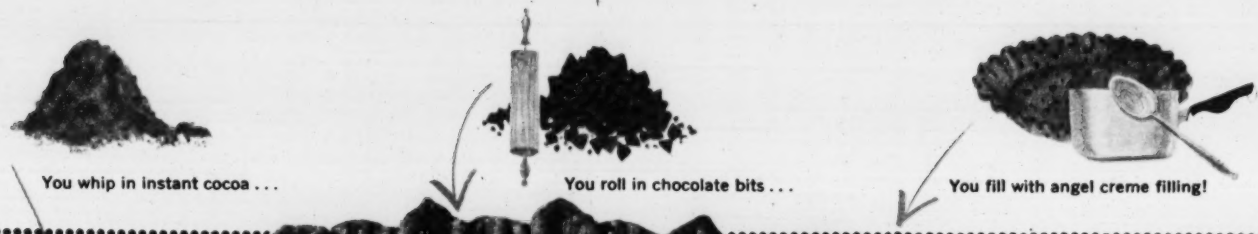

By the time he finished it in April the tide was starting to turn in the Pacific. Doolittle's daring men bombed Tokyo; U.S. forces were grouping to push westward. Americans were breathing a bit easier. When the Portrait had a preliminary hearing in Cincinnati in May, we had just won the battle of the Coral Sea. There was loud applause. Lincoln's warning fell on victory-deadened ears.

I looked forward to similar applause at Washington — but by that time something had happened. The Pacific victories continued, but slowly it had sunk in that in Europe we were in a war that saw no end. Hitler stood astride a continent and was reaching over Africa, perhaps the world. His U-boats were taking a frightful toll of Allied shipping. America was grimly determined — but the road ahead was bloody and dark.

Even as I raised my baton, President Roosevelt was in conference with Admiral King and General Marshall to chart our course. Many of those who would have to back their decision sat before me, honoring Lincoln.

His words sounded with a terrible new clarity. "We cannot escape history . . . We, even we here, hold the power and bear the responsibility." Suddenly I felt myself an actor in a profound, world-wide drama.

And the audience felt it. While the music played, men and women sat sunk in thought. When the music ended, there was silence. ■

CHOCOLATE CRUNCH SPRYCRUST

½ cup less 1 tablespoon Spry
2 teaspoons instant cocoa dissolved in 3 tablespoons boiling water
1 teaspoon milk
1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons semisweet chocolate pieces, chopped rather fine

Put Spry in mixing bowl. Add hot dissolved cocoa and milk and whip with fork until all liquid is absorbed and a thick, smooth mixture is formed. Sift flour and salt together onto Spry whip and stir quickly into a dough. Pick up and work into a smooth dough; shape into a flat round. Roll between two 12" squares of waxed paper into a circle ⅛" thick and about size of paper. Peel off top paper, sprinkle chopped chocolate over pastry, leaving about a 1" border plain. Re-cover with paper and gently roll chocolate into dough. Turn paper and pastry over, peel off top paper, and place pastry in 9" pie pan, chocolate side up. Remove paper, fit pastry into pan, trim ½" beyond pan, turn back even with edge of pan, flute rim. Prick shell all over with fork. Bake in very hot oven (450°F.) 14-19 min.

INTRODUCING

SPRYCRUST

THE FIRST NEW IDEA IN THE HISTORY OF PIECRUST!

Simple but Sensational!

SPRYCRUST IS FLAVORED PIECRUST!

Now for the first time you can make as many different flavored piecrusts as there are flavors—chocolate, honey, mocha, coffee, pineapple, just to mention a few.

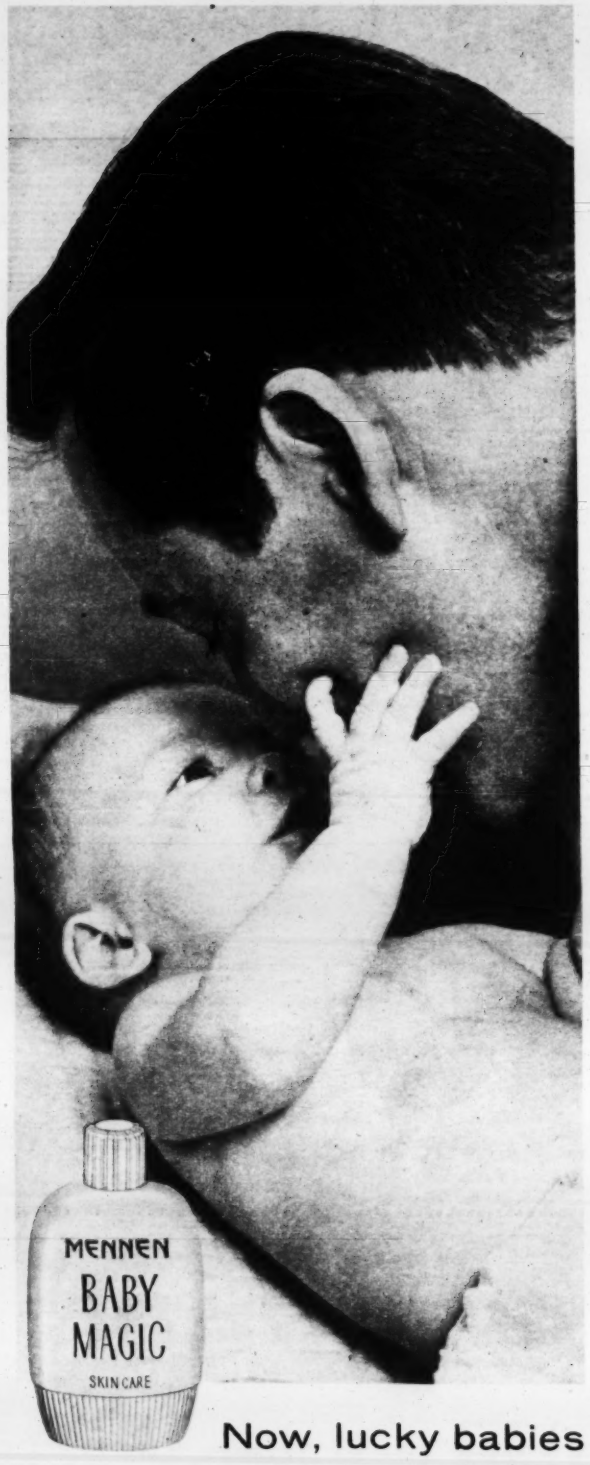

Based on the famous Spry "Water-Whip" pastry method, Sprycrust is an entirely new and original kind of pastry. And it's amazingly simple to prepare. You whip in flavor—you roll in a texture. Important: Do not, under any circumstances, make substitutions for Spry.

Ask any good cook you know. The real test of a shortening is piecrust. So if you have failures with piecrust, don't blame yourself. Blame the shortening . . . and switch to Spry. No other shortening you can buy can top Spry for pure shortening power. And this power is uniformly distributed through every pound. Thanks to homogenizing, plus a patented process of protecting its purity, Spry has the "built-in" safety to guarantee perfect piecrust every time you bake. So don't take chances. Take homogenized Spry and be sure!

NO DOUBT about it, in the four-door hardtop General Motors stylists have created a refreshing new motor-car fashion that is sweeping America—and you can have it in GM cars of every price class.

But the dashing beauty of these roomy hardtops, free of cluttering center posts, is only one reason for their soaring popularity. All GM cars for '56 are powered by new, more efficient high-compression engines—with still smoother, more responsive automatic drives — to set a new high in flashing performance.

Add their many new safety-engineering features like double-locking door latches, precision-aimed head lamps, Power Brakes, Power Steering and seat belts (optional) and you can come to only one decision: Your key to greater value in 1956 is the key to a General Motors car.

Protestant, Catholic or Jew, your child today finds his faith in a new and streamlined way

by ED KIESTER

UNTIL RECENTLY, the religious education of a child — Protestant, Catholic or Jew — seemed as likely to turn out a parrot as a parishioner. Sunday School, parochial school or catechism class, Hebrew or religious school — all prided themselves on how well students could recite. Whether children understood was of less importance; the theory was, "They'll understand when they're old enough." Today's educators recall the prize student of those days who could rattle off 5,000 Bible verses. Subjected to a written test, he garbled one verse: "Many are cold but few are frozen." In the far-reaching revolution sweeping religious education today, few children are force-fed 5,000 verses, but they have a surer grasp of the important ones.

The dimensions of this upheaval are illustrated by a Sunday School in Syracuse, N.Y., which recently launched an educational program consisting solely of religious movies. The program quickly gave way to a more balanced diet of words and pictures. But the attempt to shape a child's religious beliefs with nothing more than celluloid represents something of a high-water mark in the Sunday School revolution. Films have been major weapons as educators strive to make the great truths of religion come alive on the child's level.

On these pages you see this new, streamlined approach in action: at the Covenant Presbyterian Church of Springfield, Ohio, in the schools of the Catholic Diocese of Hartford, Conn., in a Jewish temple in New York City. In hundreds of thousands of such schools your child today is finding his faith with the help of films and filmstrips, plays and playthings, picture books and flannelgraphs, tape recorders and handicraft projects and "make believe."

His teachers are products of teacher-training courses who approach him with lessons in educational psychology firmly in mind. He reads colorful new textbooks and workbooks and, in some denominations, even takes examinations each quarter. He is allowed to play, and to learn by playing, in classrooms that are bright, airy and colorful. Since the days when it was called "just a place with small chairs," the Sunday School and its counterparts have grown up considerably.

They still are growing. In 1954, Protestant Sunday School enrollment totaled a record 37,623,530, an increase of 6.3 per cent, or 2,234,064 students, over the record mark set the year before. (In the same year, church membership rose 2.8 per cent, the population 1.7 per cent). Enrollment in Catholic elementary schools climbed 6.5 per cent. Jewish figures show a 19 per cent increase over 1952, the last previous recorded year.

To iron out the bulges, the churches in 1954 spent $750 million on construction — more than half of it on new, and often radically different, educational buildings. Some churches even build educational buildings before sanctuaries; one church in Clinton, Iowa, holds services in a foundation, but has a million-dollar structure for its children.

NEW AIDS — $4,000 worth of equipment — are displayed by audio-visual committee of Covenant Church.

The building walls and the day of the week are not the limits of the 1956 Sunday School, however. "The words 'Sunday School' have become passé in the last 10 years," says one official of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. "It's now 'Sunday Church School.'" In the populous Catholic Archdiocese of New York, the Sunday catechism class for children who don't attend parochial school (two out of five) has almost died out. Its students have been swallowed up by a "released time" program which gives religious instruction on "school time, not the kids' time," as one priest puts it. In Dubuque, Iowa, Protestant children attend weekday religious classes in a special trailer that tours the schools.

All this is a far cry from the 19th-Century days when a Connecticut woman and her then-revolutionary Sunday School class were hounded from a church gallery as "imps of Satan, desecrating God's day in God's house." In religious-education circles, they tell a story about the founder of a Midwestern Sunday School who came back on its 50th anniversary to find a new model school in operation. "What have you done?" he cried. "Turned the place into a playground?"

Occasionally, on the surface, it might seem so, but educators emphasize that the schools retain the important elements of religion — prayer, for example — and simply teach the same lessons in a new way. "The basic truths have not changed," says one Catholic priest, "only the methods used to find them."

A generation ago, says the Rev. Dr. Gerald E. Knoff, executive secretary of Christian education for the National Council, several churches tried modern education and didn't like it: pupils got an image of a "humanized" Christ but little concept of true religion. When "the educators met the theologians," as one authority puts it, each denomination made sure that education revolved around theology, not vice versa. Today, most religious educators feel that children get more actual doctrine than ever — but in a more palatable way.

HEBREW LETTERS placed right to left on flannelboard help this little girl learn a prayer: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God, the Lord is One."

Modern education is wedded with age-old religious doctrine

Perhaps the prime example of this theological-educational wedding has been the work of the Commission on American Citizenship, set up by the Catholic Archbishops and Bishops in 1938. Its mission: drawing from the best of modern education, to forge a curriculum to provide Catholic children with a modern working faith and to tie together the religious threads in every school subject. The Commission since has set its curriculum in motion in 40 dioceses, gone on to a secondary curriculum and published a series of readers (sometimes known as "the Mickey McGuffeys" around Commission headquarters) to implement it.

Meanwhile, the dun-covered Baltimore Catechism, venerable standy of Catholic teaching, has undergone a face-lifting. It remains a basic statement of faith, but the "catechism books" your child brings home have been brightened with stories and colored pictures and considerably more explanation. "The child still learns his catechism," one priest says. "But we don't just say, 'Memorize the next five for tomorrow' any more. Now we try to talk the child's language."

Another way the child learns his catechism is by watching filmstrips, on which the full import of the Mass and the Apostle's Creed now are pictured. Catholic schools, however, use more charts and graphs and do not rely heavily on films. "We prefer a teaching method that uses more of the words of the teacher," says the Rev. John F. Dwyer, chairman of the division of religious education at Fordham University.

But in some Protestant denominations, films have become big business. The National Council publishes a 2"-thick guide to films available to Sunday Schools, many of them produced by the denominations themselves. An example is the film Martin Luther, originally intended by its Lutheran producers for church and Sunday School use. It turned out so well that it was placed in commercial theaters and the producers were able to cut the price to Sunday Schools.

Possibly the denomination to make the most extensive use of the filmstrip has been the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. (Northern), likewise a pioneer in the great upheavals in curriculum. Faced in the '40s with falling enrollment and in-because only Cheer has the Blue-Magic whitener!

Cheer's Blue-Magic whitener is not just a bluing . . . it's more than a bluing . . . it's a new, better whitener for all your wash.

Seeing is believing . . . and you can see blue Cheer bring new whiteness to your wash. This "window test" proves it.

Simply take some of your Cheer wash to a window. There, in that true light (even on a gray day), you'll see a surprising new whiteness in all your wash. And on hardest-to-whiten things like nylon, you'll see a real difference in whiteness never possible before Cheer.

Of course, blue Cheer gets dirtiest work and play clothes spanking clean, adds new brightness to all colored washables, too. And you can be sure of the best results from the suds that give you a difference in whiteness you can see.

dications that their approach was out of touch with the times, the Presbyterians spent 10 years and $1,000,000 to revamp the whole program. The resulting "Christian Faith and Life" curriculum is a three-year cycle which concentrates one year on Christ, one on the Bible, one on the Church, then repeats the cycle at the next higher level.

Still revising, the Presbyterians last year built their study of the Bible around a filmstrip, The Living Word, which depicts the history of the Bible from its beginnings around campfires to the present Revised Standard Version. A 10-year-old student sees a snatch of the strip every few weeks and then watches the full strip, tying up his knowledge, at year's end. Similar integrated strips have been produced by the Methodist, Evangelical and Reformed, and Congregational Christian Churches. And the Jewish groups, late starters in the use of audio-visual devices, now are hurrying to catch up in every department.

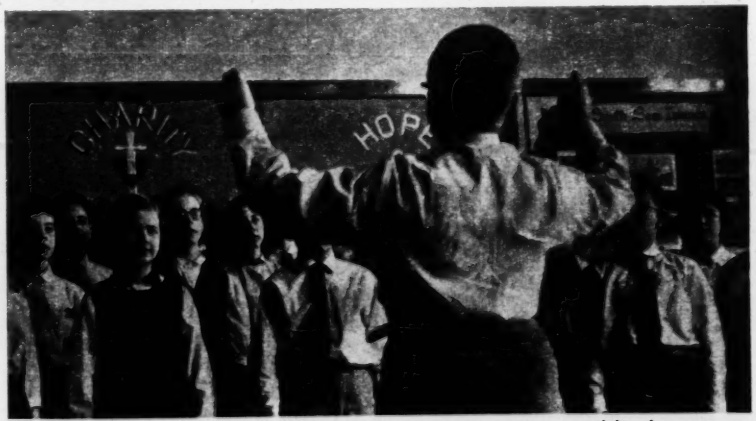

"We must match the film's 3-D program with a 3-V program to make learning more vivid, vital and vigorous," Dr. Maurice Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, has said. Accordingly, pictures are important in Jewish schools. If your child attends such a school he may be studying Bible from a filmstrip, Jewish affairs through movies and other subjects with cutouts of Old Testament figures.

Similar cutouts are used by many Protestant sects. "Don't pin these pictures up," a Southern Baptist publication advises teachers. "When the child says, 'Let me see,' he means, 'Let me hold it.' He should be able to."

Such inclinations get full rein in today's Sunday Schools. A favorite device is the playlet, with children acting out Biblical scenes in their own words. In parochial schools, the Christmas season often sees an impromptu version of the visit of the Angel Gabriel to the Virgin Mary. Competition for the part of Mary is keen.

the baptism of Christ. As she finished, a boy in the class, deeply moved, began a quiet prayer. For prayer has not been neglected in the modern Sunday School. It may, however, be woven into the class routine at any time. In the kindergarten, the proper moment is usually when the youngsters sit down for a snack. Such prayers are simple and direct: "Thank you, dear God, for the crackers," a 5-year-old will offer. "Thank you, dear God, for everything," another moppet will often top her.

The childish grace is an attempt to make things "like home." Sunday Schools today place increased emphasis on tying Sunday School and family together. Many educators feel this was the failing of previous programs; an hour of intensive instruction couldn't offset six days of indifference. Accordingly, the Presbyterian, E. & R. and other churches issue family manuals that urge home study related to school subjects. The new Episcopal curriculum, issued this year, goes even further. Its manuals attempt to weave the church's teaching into the whole fabric of child-rearing, provide answers to questions children are likely to ask—and urge regular parents' classes paralleling children's classes.

Has this streamlining instilled more religion into children and brought them closer to God? Cautious educators are unwilling to say flatly that curriculum changes and new methods are directly responsible for the upsurge in Sunday School enrollment. Recently, however, more than half the Presbyterian teachers reached by a questionnaire said their students' attitudes and information had improved considerably since the new methods were introduced. And an experiment conducted by Yale divinity students in the churches of New Haven, Conn., showed that students (particularly girls) taught by filmstrip outdistanced another group which saw no strips.

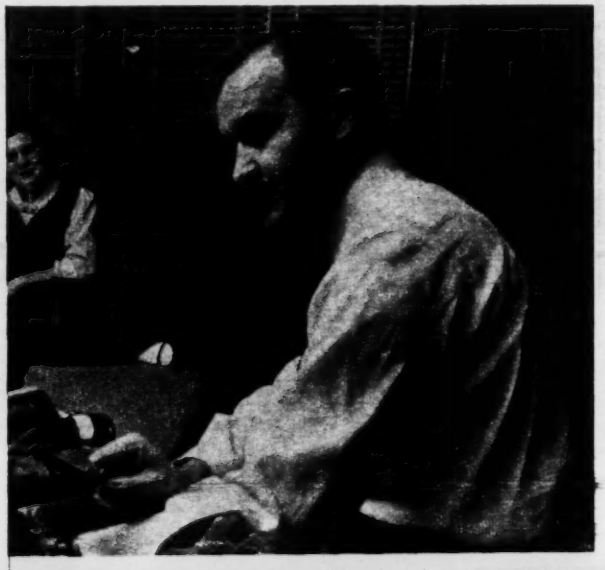

No religious educator, of course, feels that the Sunday School revolution is the complete answer for educating children in their faith. (Some, including Dr. Knoff, believe some new techniques have been overemphasized.) Even today, new revisions of approach are being hammered out. But the educators are treading cautiously. They want to be sure that the tail does not wag the dog. The Sunday School's mission is still not to amuse, not to entertain — not even to bring up children — but to instill in them a working faith for a turbulent world. ■

As this photo shows, the sea eagle, Europe's largest bird of prey, also is a good parent. Here a father eagle, wings rigid to brake his landing, brings two ravenous young ones a tasty eel for dinner. AWAY FROM THE CAMERA, athletic Audrey Meadows starts a Miami Beach vacation on water skis. She also excels at golf, tennis, badminton, swimming.

TV'S AUDREY MEADOWS:

SHE WON OVER SHYNESS

ON CAMERA, Audrey appears in typical scene with TV husband Gleason and sidekick Art Carney. Her specialty: cutting Gleason down to size. Show formerly was done live, this season is on film.

by LLOYD SHEARER

PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

Watching Audrey Meadows on television's The Honeymooners, playing the harried wife of Jackie Gleason, it's difficult to believe that this tall, talented redhead was once shy and painfully withdrawn.

Before she was signed for Gleason's show (CBS-TV, Saturday nights), Audrey was known primarily as a glamorous singer. Today she is considered the personification of the hapless, harrassed, low-income American housewife.

On video Audrey appears so flip, so forward that fright and insecurity seem the most unlikely qualities of her youth. Nor does she appear the China-born daughter of an Episcopal missionary, or the best all-around girl athlete in show business. But all of this is true of Audrey Meadows.

"I've led four lives," she explains. "The early years in China I hardly remember. By the time I was five the family was living in Providence, R.I. One day I fell through a skylight and cut my leg horribly.

"At first the doctors planned to amputate it. They didn't, but the surgery left plenty of scars."

It was these scars on her left leg that made Audrey basically timid as an adolescent. "To avoid company I used to hide in my father's library and sit on my leg," she says. "When anyone asked a question, I developed a deadpan expression to hide my true feelings. I wanted to become a newspaper reporter."

But Audrey's older sister, Jayne, who's now married to TV comedian Steve Allen, had other ideas.

Jayne decided that she and Audrey must become actresses. Since Audrey hero-worshipped her extroverted older sister, she went along with the idea.

Together the Meadows Sisters moved to New York. They auditioned for singing jobs and got nowhere. Finally, Al Evans, a musical conducter in New Jersey, hired Audrey "out of sympathy" at $35 a week. In this chorus job a director told her bluntly: "You always look cold and blank. Why don't you get some expression into your face?"

A Time for Audacity

That remark stuck. "I woke up to the fact," Audrey says, "that there was no reason for being afraid of life. I decided to become audacious instead of living in a shell."

Where she once detested auditions, Audrey began to welcome them. Gradually she became known as "the girl who can do anything — or says she can."

When Phil Silvers, for example, wanted a girl for Top Banana with a high, shrill singing voice, Audrey, auditioning for the role, said she was sure she could do it. She hadn't the slightest idea of what Silvers had in mind. Then, in a burst of confidence, she sang. Crowed Silvers: "You're perfect."

Four years ago Audrey heard that Jackie Gleason was casting the role of Alice Kramden, the bus-driver's wife in The Honeymooners. She called on Gleason, told him, "I know I can do it." Gleason smiled, then mumbled, "This girl is all wrong."

Audrey went home, removed her make-up, got dressed like a household drudge. "I had photos taken and sent to Jackie. He hired me on the spot."

Since then, TV's most eligible bachelorette has won a weekly salary in four figures, a half-dozen awards as video's top supporting actress and a nation-wide following of fans, many of whom are amazed at her off-stage glamor. In California a few weeks ago Audrey was stopped by an autograph hunter.

"Sure is funny," said the fan. "On TV you look like a beaten dog. In real life you're a livin' doll." ■

SALMON 'SPECIAL'

This beautiful coral-pink salad makes a perfect main dish for company

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

Spring is just around the corner — or so it seems when the Lenten season begins — and salads have a sudden appetite appeal after weeks of heavy meals. When next you entertain at luncheon, begin with green-pea soup; serve today's delicious salmon mousse with potato chips, carrot sticks, radishes, spring onions; end with sherbet. A welcome change!

SALMON MOUSSE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup mayonnaise
¾ cup dairy sour cream
1-pound can salmon
1¼ cups chopped celery
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon capers

Sprinkle gelatin over cold water; dissolve over boiling water; cool. Combine mayonnaise and sour cream; add dissolved gelatin. Flake salmon; remove skin and bones. Combine salmon, celery, salt, lemon juice and capers. Fold in mayonnaise mixture. Turn into mold which has been dipped in cold water. Chill until firm. Serve on salad greens with bottled Italian salad dressing. Makes six servings.

KITCHEN HINT

A double boiler, 1- or 2-cup size, has many uses — such as dissolving gelatin in today's recipe.

THE BASIC FACTS ABOUT...

'M-DAY'

One out of five Americans is on the move today. If that's you, you need the answers to these 15 key questions

More Americans are moving today than ever before in the nation's history.

Latest Bureau of Census figures indicate that a new moving-day high was reached in the year ending last April, when 31,500,000 persons — one out of every five — changed addresses. About 21,000,000 moved within the same county, 5,500,000 to another county within the same state, 5,000,000 to a different state. Most moving took place in the West, least in the Northeast.

This year, even more persons may go to new homes. If "M-Day" faces you, here's useful news. A recent coast-to-coast survey of moving companies shows that 15 questions are most often asked by people who are moving. Here they are, with answers from the best source — the moving men themselves.

Q. Does it cost the same whether I move across town or across a state border?

A. No, because different rates apply to local and long-distance hauls. Local moves are charged on an hourly basis. The number of men, hours worked and the going wages determine the size of your bill. When you cross the state line, however, the Interstate Commerce Commission fixes the rate on a pound, distance and extra-service basis.

Q. What do typical moves cost?

A. A local move costs about $95. It will take three men about five hours to load and unload three roomsful of furniture and bric-a-brac. In most big cities movers and packers get $4 an hour. (The van is extra.) An interstate move of 295 miles for an average family with five rooms of household goods, weighing 4,000 lbs., would cost about $295.

Q. How do you select a mover?

A. As you're buying a service, it's a good idea to ask friends what their experience has been with certain moving companies. Don't chose a mover by the size of his ad in the phone book. The size of a company is a better gauge. All big companies are reputable and are likely to have better facilities, many representatives throughout the country, greater experience in planning a move and specially trained labor to carry it out. Your local Better Business Bureau also can help.

Q. What is a mover's "estimate" and how binding is it?

A. As a free service, any moving company will "estimate." As local moves are charged by man-hours, and long distance moves by weight of the load and distance it travels, the best estimate is only an "educated guess." Reputable movers usually guess within 10 per cent of the actual cost — and usually prefer being high to low. Unscrupulous operators use low estimates as bait, then double or triple the charge at journey's end. As estimates are not binding on the company in any way, you have no recourse. Shop around and compare estimates.

Q. How does the mover find out the weight of my furniture?

A. Before the van comes to your house, it is weighed in by a certified weighmaster. The driver gets a stamped bill of lading which indicates the van's weight before loading. After it is loaded the van must go back to a public weighmaster, weigh in again, then have the tonnage recorded on the same bill of lading. The difference is the weight of your furniture.

Q. How and when do I pay for the move?

A. The local mover will either bill you after the move or accept your personal check or cash on the spot. Long-distance hauls are another matter altogether. According to ICC laws, the long-hauler cannot turn over your possessions to you unless you pay him right then and there in cash, certified check or money order. No personal check! This is the law and if you can't meet the requirements the driver must cart your goods off to the nearest warehouse.

Q. How can I protect my furniture against loss or damage?

A. If you carry personal property floater insurance, you have no worries. However, if you have only the standard fire and theft insurance, you need additional protection because the long-distance base tariff limits liability for loss or damage to only 30 cents per pound per article. Carry insurance covering the full value of your goods.

Q. How much advance notice does the mover need?

A. Plenty. Remember, peak loads are the 15th and the end of the month. Unless you've made arrangements in advance, every piece of equipment may be in use. If possible, plan to move the first or third week in the month.

Q. How do you pack china, glassware, books and phonograph records?

A. Get a drum or barrel for breakable dinnerware. Put layers of newspapers on the bottom and sides, fill in with strips of paper. The heaviest and largest pieces go on the bottom. Pad sets of plates and saucers with paper and put them in the barrel on edge — not flat. Delicate stemware should be wrapped separately and placed toward the top of the barrel. Never nest unwrapped glasses; wrap them and place them right side up. Books should be packed back to back to prevent pages from interlocking and being damaged. Wrap valuable books individually. Put records in extra-heavy cartons, wooden boxes or crates.

Q. How do you prepare large appliances like stoves, TV sets and refrigerators?

A. Have your gas stove disconnected. Before M-Day, have the television set, phonograph and automatic washing machine checked and the movable parts properly secured. Be sure your TV antenna is down and ready for packing. If you're taking your refrigerator, defrost it first, then wipe it dry. Have it serviced for moving and the motor bolted down.

Q. How do you pack valuable paintings and the big mirror in the living room?

A. Let professional packers crate them.

Q. Will there be an extra charge for moving my grand piano?

A. Yes. Moving men take the piano apart and protect it with special pads, then reassemble it at your new home.

Q. How about change-of-address notices?

A. Besides the post office, water, power and gas companies, and delivery men (milk, laundry, newspapers), don't forget the magazines you subscribe to, the Veterans' Administration, civic organizations, insurance firms and the bank.

Q. What about damage and claims?

A. Reputable movers are anxious to settle all legitimate claims. Check for loss or damage as the load is delivered. If anything is awry, notify the driver, then write to the company as soon as possible. Smaller claims of $50 or $100 usually are handled immediately through a branch office of long-distance haulers; larger claims go to the home office. Don't forget there is a nine-month time limit for filing claims.

Q. What can one do to make the family more comfortable in the new home?

A. Why not pack two baskets to take with you in the car? In one goes a picnic lunch; in the other, soap, washcloths, towels and other bathroom necessities. You then are assured that nobody will go hungry or unwashed on M-Day. ■

New resort wear made in Hawaii blends the South Seas and Asia

SHIRT called "Catamaran" was inspired by sleek lines of Island sailing vessels. It's a side-slit pullover in Shaheen's Luau (Hawaiian feast) print, goes nicely with brief shorts.

HONOLULU.

Not long ago, when the schooner Te Vega returned here from a South Seas cruise, one of the first visitors aboard was Alfred Shaheen: Owner of Hawaii's fastest-growing fabric and fashion business (4,500 yards per day, $2,000,000 per year), Shaheen, 34, was on his usual prowl for ideas.

How were the girls on Bora-Bora? he wanted to know. Wearing anything new? How about Moorea? What was the word from Fiji? What kind of shirts were popular in Tahiti-Iti? The answers, noted by Shaheen and translated by his art department, appear on these pages and today's front cover. Entitled the Pacific Ports of Call Line, the fashions soon will be offered by shops throughout the world.

Actually, Shaheen resort wear is something pretty special. "When my dad and I went into this business eight years ago," he explains, "we knew it was a rough one. We'd run silk mills back in New Jersey, and we'd had plenty of experience. We wanted a gimmick, something that would make our products saleable. Honolulu itself gave us the answer.

"This place is a crossroads. Every day ships and planes bring people here from the Orient, the Central and South Pacific. Why not, we said, take all our designs and prints from this conglomerate culture? Why set up a factory in Hawaii to turn out the sort of stuff we could in Passaic, New Jersey?

"You can see the result in our prints. Take our tapa prints, for example. Tapa is a cloth made from tree bark and dyed or painted with natural pigments.

TWO-PIECE SWIMSUIT (l.), the "Surfer," is meant for swimming. Print: Shaheen's Fiji Border Tapa. Hat of Philippine straw, wicker, fishnet by Barbee of Hawaii.

KENDO JACKET derives from those worn by Japanese kendo (advanced judo) fighters. In Joss Sticks print, it has wrap front and side slit, is worn with button-leg slacks.

SHEATH SARONG shows Tahitian influence and comes with a detachable shoulder stole. Shaheen calls the print Pareu, name of the usual garment worn by Tahitian women.

SHINTO SHEATH, glamor version of the classic Chinese dress and trousers, is in Fiji Border Tapa print. Hat by Barbee of Hawaii is called the "Peeping Tom."

FIJI WORK IS COPIED

It's indigenous to Hawaii and most of the South Sea islands. In our Fiji Border Tapa prints I insisted upon tiny irregularities in order to reproduce the design exactly as it was created by the natives of Fiji."

Other new Shaheen prints are adapted from Chinese joss sticks (incense wands), the plum blossoms of Japan, Samoan trade cloth. Stylewise, as PARADE's photos show, his clothes also reveal their exotic inspiration.

For seven consecutive years, stocky Shaheen (a former All-America football guard at California's Whittier College) has doubled his business annually. Modestly, he gives chief credit to the general prosperity of the Mainland.

"Nowadays," he maintains, "people have more money and time for leisure. They want to dress comfortably, casually. The Polynesians have done this for hundreds of years. All we're trying to do is to bring a little of Polynesia to the rest of the world." ■

Teen-age Topics

Parents, what are the most difficult problems you have to cope with concerning teenagers? From the mail I receive I gather they fall mainly into the following categories: late hours, use of the family car, make-up, choice of clothing and accessories. Here are some questions from boys and girls along these lines.

Q. Since I do not attend school, I would like to stay out late at night, but my mother won't let me. What do you think about 15-year-old boys staying out late?

A. If you are not going to school, you probably are working. However, even if you have assumed the responsibility of bread-winning, you still are not old enough to question your mother's authority. To hold a job, or to do good school work, boys and girls your age need at least eight or nine hours' sleep every week-day night. Later hours should be reserved for week ends.

Even if your mother didn't care about your welfare (though I'm glad to see she does), you should have the sense to realize these things for yourself.

Q. I am a boy of 16. My mother says I am too young to use the car for dates. My father says I have plenty of time to date when I am past 20.
— L.H., Albuquerque, N.M.

A. I'd like to see a Federal law which would set the proper age for the issuance of driver's licenses. At present, some states give 16-year-olds full driving privileges, others give them limited privileges and still others issue licenses to youngsters of 14.

With the rising toll of teen-age car accidents, it is up to the parents to exercise the utmost caution in the matter of their children's driving. And if a child is allowed to drive at 16, he must carefully adhere to all family rules concerning his use of the car, his return home, etc.

A careful, law-abiding teenager can be a good driver. If you fit this description, I should think your parents could permit you some use of the car for dating.

I am sure that your father doesn't really mean that you shouldn't date until you are 20.

Q. What do you think about dating third cousins? — L.L., Jackson, Miss.

A. No objection. In marriage, however, kinship of various kinds must pass the test of certain religious and state regulations.

Q. I am 16 and go steady with a boy of 20. My parents are considered young, yet they insist that I spend the majority of my time with him at home. How can I make them realize that times have changed and that young people just don't court at home any more? — J.G., Beaumont, Tex.

A. Since you are too young to be going steady with a man of 20, your parents are wise to supervise this man's courtship. You could be allowed some outside dates so long as the usual rules are followed as to the time for coming home, the places that are permissible, etc. Believe me, young girls from good families are courted at home; only the neglected ones see their boy friends exclusively away from home.

WHERE TO COURT? The old folks recommend the parlor; the young folks may have other ideas. But parents usually know best.

Clyde Lovellette and his mother:

She showed a 'freak' why he needn't ever be afraid

One of the top players in professional basketball today, 6'10" Clyde Lovellette came out of a Terre Haute, Ind., high school to become a two-time All-American at Kansas University. One of the nation's leading scorers while in college, he led his Kansas team to the finals of the 1952 Olympic tournament, losing in the last few seconds to a seasoned AAU team of former college stars. Lovellette and several other Kansas players, however, were picked for the U.S. Olympic team which won the world championship.

In 1954 Lovellette joined the Minneapolis Lakers of the National Basketball League, since has become their No. 1 player. This season he has been one of the league's top scorers, averaging 20 points a game.

THE MOTHER OF CLYDE LOVELLETTE SAYS:

THEY CALLED MY SON 'FREAK'

. . . AND NOW HE'S A STAR!

by MRS. MYRTLE LOVELLETTE
as told to Martin Abramson

TERRE HAUTE, IND.

If you're like most people, you probably sympathize with the plight of very short men, but never with men who are very tall. Most people, it seems, think that the bigger you are, the quicker you're likely to succeed.

They couldn't be more wrong. At 15 my son Clyde, now a professional basketball star, stood the same height he does today, 6'10", and sometimes he despaired of ever getting anything but heartache out of life. That he has found success is due to his pluck, amazing perseverance and — in a small way — some help from me.

As a youngster he needed my help. His schoolmates would follow him in the streets here, yelling "Hey, goon!" and "Freak!" During World War II, adults called him a draft dodger, though he was too young for service. At school the kids snickered because his boy-size jeans ended just below his knees. When he chased a tormenter, another boy would trip him up, for his height made him terribly awkward. Once, when he did catch a boy who'd teased him and gave him a good slapping, he was reported to the principal as "a bully who picks on smaller boys."

He was told all kinds of silly things. "You have no brains," a schoolmate said once, "because all your energy went into making you grow." A young mother hurt him terribly when she told her small daughter, loud enough for Clyde to hear: "That's the boogeyman and he'll come after you if you don't behave."

His awkwardness was a community joke. At a school processional, he stumbled and fell into the boy in front of him; the boy crashed to the ground, bringing three others with him and ruining the ceremony. Clyde felt so bad he stayed away from school for the next three days.

Clyde loves music and was especially good at the piano. But while carrying music sheets one day, he was spotted by a schoolmate who jeered: "Look, the biggest goon in town is the biggest sissy." Clyde hasn't touched a piano key since.

Even well-meaning relatives made Clyde feel ashamed. They'd chide him about his big appetite, claiming food puts on extra inches. Believing them, he went on a fast that made him ill; he went back to eating regularly only when a doctor assured him that glands, not calories, determine height.

As he grew, he got more and more timid. He began to stoop and round his shoulders to appear shorter. Afraid of being hooted at, he stayed close to home and refused to go to stores in other neighborhoods. He went to movies only at night, when the theater was half-empty and he could sit alone. When he was invited to a party, he'd sit in a corner, too shy to dance.

Then one day he made a remark that made up my mind that drastic measures were needed. "A fellow like me," he said bitterly, "has no chance for success or happiness."

After talking it over with my husband, I decided on a plan of positive action. First I read the riot act to Clyde for being ashamed of his height. "God made you the way you are," I told him, "so you should be proud of it." Then I laid down a law: He was going to be whacked across the back every time he stooped. After a few hundred solid whacks, he began to walk properly; he's never since had the poor posture that's so common among tall men.

I forced Clyde to take long trips through the streets every afternoon. We'd go wandering in and out of stores on the pretext of making purchases, for I wanted Clyde to learn how to handle ill-mannered people who stared. To really obnoxious gapers, I would shout:

His mother taught him to be proud of his height — but one thing he had to learn alone

"Don't just stand there and give people the idea you're stupid! Say something and prove it!" In most cases the gaper would turn red and slink away.

When folks good-naturedly kidded Clyde, however, I encouraged him to kid right back. "If they see you don't take yourself too seriously," I told him, "they won't make you a target of ridicule." Soon the people who asked the stock question — "How's the air up there" — were getting a quick squelch from a grinning Clyde: "Hot in the foothills, cooler on the peak."

I learned that skipping rope was a good way to develop agility, so I bought a rope and put Clyde through a routine of skipping each night. To improve his footwork, I bought two pairs of boxing gloves and the two of us — I was always pretty quick — would spar, without any hitting of course, around a makeshift ring.

My two daughters also got into the act. They taught Clyde how to dance and kept him waltzing for hours in the privacy of our living room until he was an excellent dancer. Gradually the "clumsy galoot" was becoming the nimblest boy in the neighborhood.

With his new grace, I felt Clyde would make an excellent athlete, so I encouraged him to go out for sports at Garfield High School. The basketball coach gave Clyde a tryout and was wildly enthusiastic. "He's a heavyweight with the agility of a featherweight!" he said in surprise.

Clyde's first game for Garfield is one I'll never forget. With me cheering so loud I could be heard in the next county, he scored 32 points, a new school record. His schoolmates mobbed him in wild delirium and girls flocked around as though he were Errol Flynn. The hisses had turned to cheers, the outcast was now a school hero. "They like me," Clyde said to me after the game in tones of disbelief.

"Of course they do," I assured him. "All you needed was a chance to show what you could do."

As Clyde kept leading Garfield to more and more victories, his self-confidence soared. He began going to dances and, apart from some good-natured joshing, the girls never harped on his height. At one dance he met a lovely girl, Sally Wheeler, who's 5'6" and has always been fond of tall boys. They were married a few years ago and now live in their own home here. Despite his size, Clyde is handy in the kitchen and can fold a diaper (they have a little girl named Cynthia) like an expert.

After graduating from high school, Clyde went on to Kansas University, where he became an All-American on the basketball court and a popular student off it. But he had one last obstacle still to overcome. While he was easily dropping in points, fans of the opposing team would claim that he was effective only because of his height. They'd scream "goon" at him and, despite my training, that word still made him shrivel up inside. I told him to shrug it off as "sour grapes," but he couldn't. Then a game at New York's Madison Square Garden taught him his final lesson.

Kansas was playing St. John's, a local team, and the Garden was jammed with St. John's rooters. Clyde, appearing for the first time in the huge arena, led Kansas to a thrilling 51-to-50 victory. As the game came to a close, the big crowd let loose a tremendous cheer for Clyde. The fans didn't care how big he was; he'd played a wonderful game and they appreciated it.

Their cheers convinced Clyde of something I'd been telling him a long time: You don't measure a person by his inches or by any so-called handicap, but on one thing only — what he actually does as a human being. ■

An elliptical bonnet that has the "space" look of a flying saucer is designed by Adolfo of Emme. The body is white alpaca strawcloth. A draped band of topaz strawcloth interlaces the brim, forms a bow at the front.

BIGGER AND LAVISH, TOO

New Hats, Paris Inspired, Have Swirling Brims, Bulbous Crowns

Hattie Carnegie's "peach-basket" silhouette of rough green straw is unadorned except for a fringed loop of violet satin ribbon, which makes striking color combination.

Sailor of yellow chiffon fluffed around featherweight felt is fashioned by Gustavo. Tall crown is banded by yellow satin ribbon ending in streamers.

Black patent leather is the unusual hat material used by Mr. Arnold. Brim of the huge Breton is filled with yellow, white and black daisies.

A new synthetic plush-textured strawcloth in brilliant red is used by Mr. Arnold for a huge picture bonnet. The matching faille piping ties in a bow.

Advocating a "full-blown hat above a stem-slim gown," John Frederics makes a huge toque of yellow and white petals for the "flower" look.

MORE AND BIGGER HATS can describe the fashion aspect as handily as the business prospects of the millinery picture this year. Women who buy the hats will find them lavishly scaled—bonnets and sailors with brims swirling one to two feet in diameter, deep-set cloches with towering, bulbous crowns, and massive, top-heavy toques.

For the millinery industry, which has suffered through a series of slow seasons, business will also be bigger this year. There is general rejoicing in the industry over the passing of the "casual look" and the Italian haircut, two fashion vogues that left many women hatless. The volume of hat orders placed by store buyers during last month was the biggest in several years.

Inspiration for the current vogue of bigger, unusually shaped hats stems from the 1955 designer showings in Paris. Although bountiful in proportion, the hats have been designed to look and feel light and airy. By contrast, their bulk gives the face a delicate, smaller appearance. The hats shown here are all originals, cost from $50 to $100, were photographed in New York.

"Rendezvous cloche," designed by Gustavo, has a bulbous crown of white felt, banded with white satin and a deep brim of plaited white silk chiffon.

THE WINTER OLYMPICS

Russians Are High Scorers at Alpine Resort—Four Speed Records Fall

Toni Sailer displays his skiing skill as he takes to the air on his winning run in the downhill event. His time for the difficult two-mile course, which dropped three-fifths of a mile from start to finish, was two minutes 52.2 seconds. Icy conditions made the downhill run and the tough slalom course treacherous and lightning fast. Half of the 80 entrants in the downhill event dropped out after falling. The pressure of competition and the tricky ski slides helped produce a record injury toll of 55, including six broken legs, four broken ribs, two broken arms and many fractured egos.

Antii Hyvarinen of Finland seemingly soars above the village and surrounding mountain peaks in the special ski jump event, the spectacular finale to the 1956 winter games. The 23-year-old salesman's leaps of 266 feet 8 inches and 275 feet 6 inches, described as "nearly perfect," gained him first place and broke Norway's long domination of the event.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

IN A PICTURESQUE Alpine setting high among the snow-covered Dolomites of northeastern Italy, 950 athletes from 32 nations competed in the seventh winter Olympiad. The international games for the world's best amateur skaters, skiers and bobsledders were staged at the little resort village of Cortina d'Ampezzo, which Italy converted into an ultramodern winter sports center at a cost of $7,500,000. Among specially built facilities were a 3300-seat ice stadium, a big ski stadium, a magnificent ski jump, and 63 miles of ski runs.

Russia, participating for the first time in the 32-year history of the winter Olympics, sent to Cortina the largest squad, 145 men and women. They brought a stupendous reputation in speed skating and skiing, and they lived up to advance notices. They took home six first-place gold medals and the unofficial team championship.

The United States, represented by a strong team of 125, made a disappointing showing. Winning only two first places, it finished sixth in team standings behind Russia, Austria, Finland, Sweden and Switzerland, in that order. Defending champion Norway, which won the title as host nation in 1952, ended up seventh.

Austria's surprising second-place finish was due mainly to the remarkable feat of a 21-year-old plumber named Toni Sailer. He swept the three Alpine skiing events—downhill, slalom and giant slalom—to become the fourth triple gold medal winner in the history of the games. Second only to Sailer's achievement were the record-smashing performances of Russia's speed skater, Evgeni Grishin, 28-year-old engraver.

After breaking the world record in the 500-meter race, Grishin and teammate Yuri Mikhailov tied in setting a new world mark in the 1500-meter event. Another Russian, Boris Shilkov, established a new 5000-meter Olympic standard, and Sweden's Sigge Ericsson did the same in the 10,000-meter grind to complete the rewriting of the speed skating record book at Cortina.

In skiing, Russia won the men's 40-kilometer (24.8-mile) relay and the women's 10-kilometer (6.2-mile) cross-country races. But it was in ice hockey that the biggest upset of the games took place—Russia beat Canada, the perennial Olympic champion.

ALGERIA

Colonists Riot and Throw Things in Dispute With New French Premier

IN TROUBLED ALGERIA, French colonists seek to prevent the departure of ousted French Resident General Jacques Soustelle, bareheaded man wearing glasses and standing beside soldier at center of photo. The crowd gathered near the docks in Algiers and begged Soustelle to remain. Finally, armored cars were brought in to clear Soustelle's path to his ship. In another demonstration of their opposition to the Algerian program of new French Premier Guy Mollet, who removed Soustelle from office, the colonists rioted when the Premier arrived for on-the-spot consultations in Algiers. Mollet was pelted with vegetables and fruit. In photo below, police use tear gas to drive rioters from street. When the Mollet-appointed successor to Soustelle, General Georges Catroux, still in France, heard of the outbreak, he telephoned his resignation to Mollet. Although obviously shaken by the riot, the Premier went ahead with the announced purpose of his visit—to try to end the 15-month-old rebellion by Algerian nationalists and save Algeria for France. His plan centers about giving the territory's 8,000,000 Moslems full political rights. Under the present system of uneven representation, they elect the same number of members to the French National Assembly and the local Algerian assembly as do the 1,000,000 colonists. Besides political dominance, the colonists hold most of the good land and jobs. Unlike Morocco and Tunisia, which are protectorates, Algeria is constitutionally an integral part of European France. It is the keystone of French holdings in North Africa.

A STOVE FOR EACH OFFICE

When it gets cold in Tokyo, where central heating is almost unknown, stovepipes sprout up like this on the sides of many buildings. In this case, the pipes lead from wood stoves in individual offices and as high as 30 feet to the roof of the building which houses the International Trade Ministry. Olympics' Opening Ceremony

DOWN THE flag-lined main street of Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy, spectators move toward the newly built ice stadium for the opening ceremony of the seventh Olympic winter games. Flags of competing nations provide a colorful avenue to the stadium, and the rugged Dolomites that cradle the little mountain village form an imposing backdrop.

On the big ice rink of the wooden stadium, athletes stand at attention as President Giovanni Gronchi of Italy declares the games open. The $2,000,000 four-tier structure, designed in Alpine chalet style to blend into the surroundings, was built specially for the Olympic hockey and figure skating competition. It was filled to capacity for the ceremony, with 3300 spectators seated and 9000 standing.

Under a bright sun, the dress costumes of the athletes made a sea of color as they paraded into the stadium in ranks. Nattily attired in red, white and blue outfits were the 125 members of the United States squad. Never had such a spectacle been witnessed in Cortina, whose population swelled from 5000 to 25,000 during the 11 days of the games.

Collection of Missouri's RURAL YESTERDAY

STORM BUGGY. Harlan Soenker peers from open window of storm buggy in collection belonging to his neighbor Richard B. Bushnell, at Bushnell Farm near St. Peters. Front windows, hinged at top, are opened by pulling inward. Door at side is sliding type. Riders desiring heat took along charcoal foot warmers or heated soapstones. Buggy is about 55 years old.

COUNTRY MAIL WAGON. The lightly built wagon of the rural mail carrier was a dependable link to the outside world for farmers. Bushnell got this one in Montgomery County. He saw it parked behind a barn as he was driving to Kansas City.

HAND-DRAWN PUMPER. This hand-drawn, hand-operated pumper is believed to have been made in a St. Charles County blacksmith shop about 75 years ago. It was used in communities of O'Fallon and Cottleville.

FIRE RIG. Bushnell, right, and Soenker show how to handle this small fire rig. Soda was kept in tank, which held 90 gallons of water. Also in tank was jar of sulphuric acid. This was broken at fire. Acid and soda mixture quickly produced high pressure, forcing fluid through hose.

OLD LIGHTER. Bushnell uses 65-year-old cigar lighter he found in back room of a drugstore at St. Charles. Alcohol-burning device is ignited by spark from battery-operated coil.

On Farm Near St. Peters, It Ranges From Venerable Horse-Drawn Vehicles to Women's High-Topped Shoes

By GARY W. FERGUSON of the PICTURES Staff

NOTHING BOTHERS Richard B. Bushnell more than the thought of some forlorn old buggy wasting away in the neglected corner of a barn or, worse, behind a barn. Determined to stop such indignities whenever possible, Bushnell sold his prosperous floor-covering business in St. Charles four years ago to devote full time to what previously had been only a hobby—preserving relics of what he calls "Missouri's rural yesterday."

Subsequently he has assembled in museum proportions a collection of vehicles, farm implements and other relics of the cracker barrel era. Neatly displayed in specially constructed buildings and sheds at a 15-acre farm where Bushnell lives with his parents, the collection is open to visitors without charge, except on Mondays. Monday is Bushnell's day for browsing through St. Charles and nearby counties in search of more leftovers from days gone by.

Soft-spoken, easy going and as relaxed as a wagon driver with a trusted team, Bushnell came by his hobby rather naturally. His father, a St. Louis railroad man, avidly collects books on railroad history. And in 1939, two years after the Bushnells moved from St. Louis to the farm, near St. Peters in St. Charles County, a friend gave Richard a horse-drawn buggy. Its side lamps used candles for illumination.

Intrigued, Bushnell became a collector of such things as carriage lamps and early-day dinner bells. As his collection grew, so did an ambition to go on to bigger things, like carriages themselves. After disposing of his business, he began fulfilling this ambition and now has a repertoire of 45 vehicles, including a one-horse open sleigh and a surrey with the fringe on top.

Unlike collectors who concentrate on a certain era, Bushnell follows a principle he describes as "comparable interest." He will spend as much time and effort obtaining a 27-year-old automobile as he will a 77-year-old buggy, if he feels each would have the same appeal to persons interested in vehicular lore.

Sentiment, Bushnell finds, is the main explanation for the number of old cars, buggies and carriages still tucked away on Missouri and Illinois farms. But after outlining his intention to restore an ancient vehicle to original condition and put it on public display, Bushnell usually has little difficulty coming to terms with an owner.

Indicative of the interest some people take in getting their possessions into Bushnell's hands is the case of the man who had a 1922 model Hupmobile in his barn. A tree had grown in front of the barn door since the car was last driven. After agreeing to a deal which made no mention of the matter of tree removal, the man promptly took out his ax and helped Bushnell cut it down.

Finding owners of collectors' items is the big problem. Bushnell has many methods, like mentioning in conversations with his friends such desires as, "I sort of would like to have a horse-drawn hearse." This comment cropped out in a chat at Pittsfield, Illinois. The man who heard it knew an undertaker who had one. Bushnell's collection now includes a horse-drawn hearse.

YESTERDAY'S GOODS. Interior of general store is stocked with wares from horse-and-buggy days. Among shoes hanging from ceiling are high-topped ones for women. Bushnell plans to add a barber shop, doctor's office and post office typical of the era.

SNOW TIRE. Bushnell with one of first snow tires. It consisted of flexible leather casing with steel studs. Casing fitted over regular tire with edges gripped between wheel rim and tire.

STYLISH TRANSPORTATION. Graceful brougham two-seated carriage is one of most prized vehicles in collection. Lord Brougham designed first of type in 1838. It was built for smooth, comfortable riding.

ONE-HORSE SLEIGH. Henry Richterkessing, 73-year-old neighbor of Bushnell, drives swell-body, single-seat cutter sleigh, a favorite of women visitors to farm. Farm is on north side of United States Highway 40.

AUTO ROW. Versions of Henry Ford's Model T predominate in line-up of old automobiles. From left are a 1930 Model A Ford, a 1917 Chevrolet, a 1921 Model T, a 1922 Hupmobile, a 1923 Model T and a 1928 Whippet. Chevrolet, made in St. Louis, sold for $490; self-starter and electric headlights were optional at $60 extra.

AUTO TOP SURREY. Bushnell, right, and Soenker sit in "auto top surrey." Many early-day horseless carriages were of similar design. Surrey is about 50 years old.

ABBE STRIKES AGAIN

Paris Cleric Shows Viaduct Arches Could Shelter Homeless

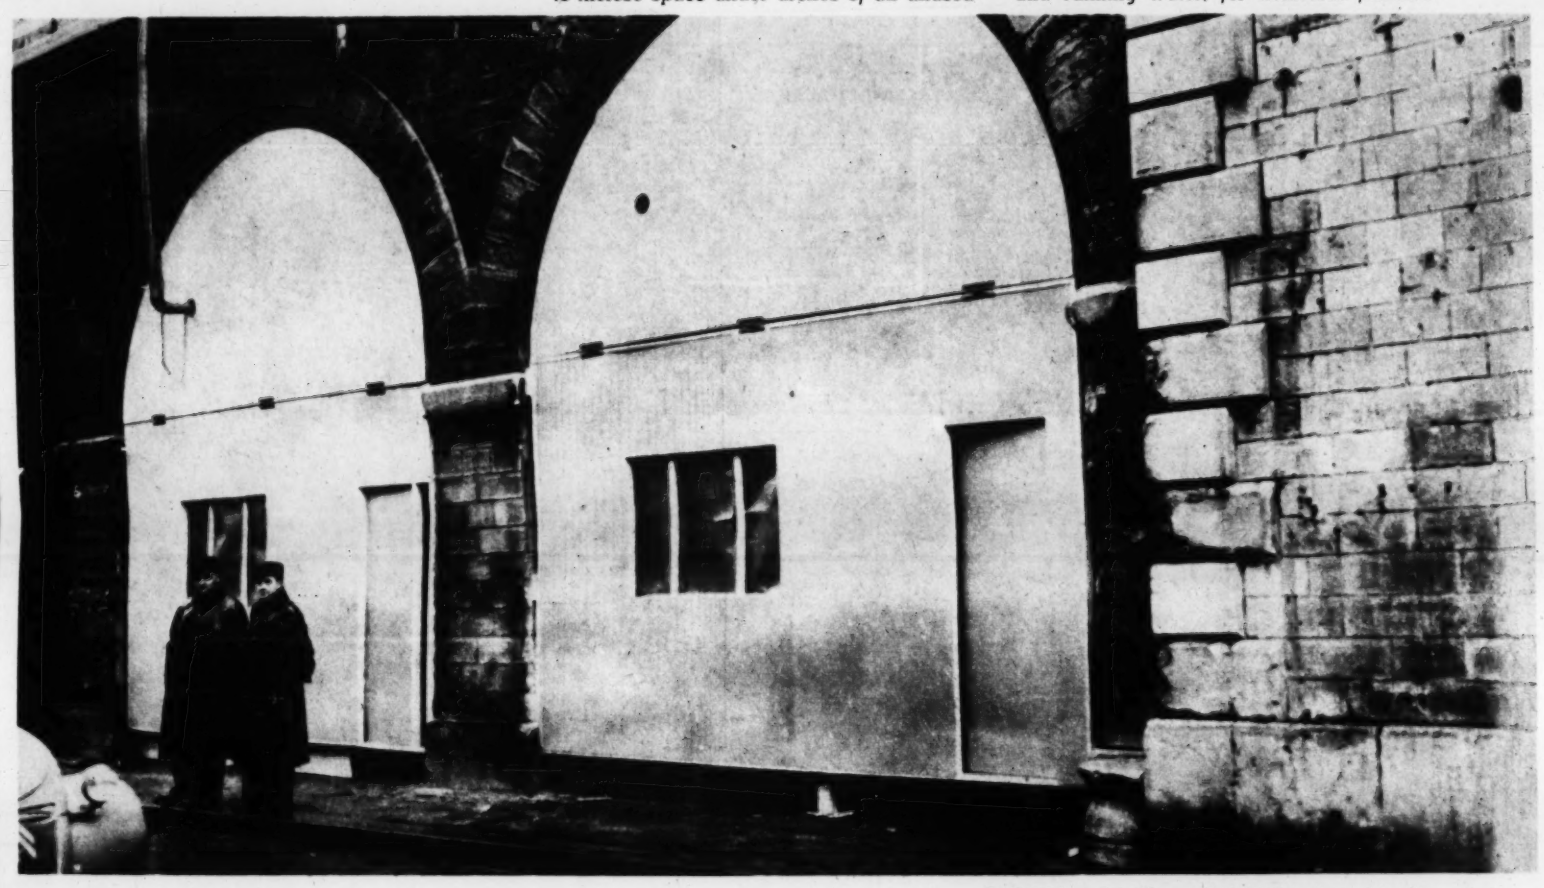

ABBE PIERRE is a familiar figure in Paris, walking the streets by night in search of homes for the homeless. With resourcefulness and extraordinary powers of persuasion as his principal assets, the bearded abbe has provided temporary quarters for thousands of persons in the past decade. They are housed in a makeshift community of wheelless freight cars, discarded truck bodies, old busses and metal shanties. An efficient junk-collecting operation helps provide income for the campaign. The business is supervised by Abbe Pierre and conducted by his followers, who are called Companions of Emmaus.

The son of a wealthy Lyon silk manufacturer, Abbe Pierre gave his inheritance to charity when he was 18 years old, then entered the Capuchin order. In 1946, while living in a Paris suburb, he gave shelter to a homeless couple and their child. News of his kindness spread quickly among the poor, and his work was cut out for him. As part of his mission, Abbe Pierre has skillfully seized opportune moments to dramatize Paris' dire housing shortage and means of dealing with it. His most recent effort, here shown in progress, was intended to demonstrate emergency housing possibilities in the city's hundreds of archways. The maneuver was carried out with surprise and precision reminiscent of his underground activities in World War II, for which he received six decorations.

International News Photos except as noted

In dead of night, Abbe Pierre's followers unload truck cargo of prefabricated partitions to inclose space under arches of an unused viaduct. Two arches were quickly transformed into apartments, complete with stoves and running water, for homeless families.

Authorities hastily evicted the two families that moved into the units. Sleeping under viaducts is prohibited by city ordinance in Paris. Here police stand guard to make sure quarters are not reoccupied.

Youngsters make themselves comfortable after settling in their temporary shelter. Police sheltered the displaced families in a nearby station house for the rest of the night.

Worst Cold in 50 Years Paralyzes Continent, Causes 180 Deaths

Palm trees and other semitropical foliage present an incongruous sight on the Promenade des Anglais of Nice, which is usually balmy in winter. Cars also have blankets of snow, as much a rarity in the French Mediterranean resort as it is in America's Miami Beach.
International News Photos except as noted

THE WORST cold wave to hit Europe in more than 50 years disrupted transportation, snarled communications, caused severe hardship and brought snow to the normally sunny Mediterranean Riviera. At least 180 persons died from exposure, fires, storms and automobile accidents as an area from Siberia to northern Spain was locked solidly in bitter winter weather.

In Central Europe, with fuel deliveries cut by blocked roads, frozen canals and ice-jammed rivers, large cities opened special "warming rooms" in police stations and churches. Thousands of Britons were without running water because of frozen or shattered pipes. Frigid gales scattered and wrecked coastal shipping. The Mediterranean port of Marseilles was paralyzed.

After a five-day freeze, during which the temperature in Moscow reached 36 degrees below zero, relatively mild weather moved in, and Europe began to thaw out.

Three cowled friars make their way across whitened St. Peter's Square in Vatican City. Snow fell in Rome for the first time in 17 years, and fountains in the city froze.

Cherry Whipped Cream Valentine Dessert

1. Mrs. Fields drains juice from cherries into top of double boiler. Juice is heated, and the marshmallows are melted in it.

2. Cherries are cut coarsely, then added to cherry mixture. Dissolved gelatin, almond flavoring and salt are added, and mixture is chilled until thick.

3. Cream is whipped until stiff, then folded into the thickened mixture. It is poured into mold and put in refrigerator freezer until firm.

By MERNA LAZIER

RED CHERRY MARLOW is a rich concoction similar to a dessert mousse, and is made with red sour cherries and marshmallows blended into whipped cream. It is served cold, molded in fancy shapes such as, for Valentine's day, a heart. Mrs. Anne Fields of Brentwood, a secretary, finds this a glamorous dessert for the busy woman since it can be made ahead of time and kept in freezer until time to serve. The fruit ingredient and type of mold may be changed to suit other special events. The dish may be frozen in individual portions.

Mrs. Fields drains the juice from the cherries, and heats it in top of double boiler to which she adds the marshmallows. They should be melted, but still fluffy. Gelatin is soaked in cold water, then dissolved over hot water and stirred into the liquid mixture along with the cut-up cherries, flavoring and salt. (Gelatin may be omitted if marshmallows are increased to 10 ounces.) Mixture is allowed to chill until it becomes very thick, but not set, then cream which has been whipped until very stiff is folded in carefully. Mixture is poured into a mold and is frozen until firm enough to hold its shape when unmolded. Flutings of whipped cream highlighted with cherries add interest, but are not essential.

Amounts given will fill a six-cup mold and will serve six to eight persons. The cake bars may be made with portions cut from either an angel or sponge cake. They are coated with thin icing and rolled in nuts.

INGREDIENTS: A No. 2 size can (20 ounces) sour pitted cherries (frozen cherries in can or package are usually of better color—use food color if necessary), 24 marshmallows, one tablespoon unflavored gelatin (optional) dissolved in three tablespoons cold water, one-fourth teaspoon almond extract, pinch of salt, one pint whipping cream. Extra half-cup cream for decorating and maraschino cherries for garnish. For the angel bars—one small angel cake, one cup crushed almonds. For the icing—one cup powdered sugar, one and one-half tablespoons butter, pinch salt, one-half teaspoon almond extract, enough milk to make icing thin enough for very light coating.

CUT-OUT CLASS

Pupils' Paper Images in Seats at First Grade Open House

Before placing handiwork at desk, three youngsters, John Hug, Marilyn Woehrer and Clifford Mills, hold up their portrait cut-outs to compare likenesses.

Teacher Alice Kessler, standing at back of classroom, surveys rows of seats populated entirely by paper images of her pupils. It was, she said, the quietest first grade she had ever had.

Mrs. Roy Wolfenden looks at her son's class work over shoulder of model that resembles him. The town is near Milwaukee.

A PAPER DOLL cutting exercise was the preparation made by first graders of East Granville, Wisconsin, for their school's open house. The small pupils cut out life-sized figures of themselves. With the teacher's help, facial features were sketched. Then, using a school beginner's standard equipment, crayon work was done to duplicate color and cut of clothing.

When parents arrived for a school inspection, they found the real live class had been dismissed for the day, the youngsters' seats occupied by their paper counterparts.

United Press Photos

With his stand-in already seated, Daniel Dueno makes final arrangement of work done in school. In addition to their cut-outs, pupils left examples of projects for parents to examine.

about Miss Clairol made-to-order hair color

"Movies, theatre and now television. It's an exciting life, but a most exacting schedule that leaves me very little time to devote to myself. And yet, bright lights, close-ups and the cold eye of the camera demand perfection at all times.

"And so I trust my hair to Miss Clairol Hair Color Bath. I like its lively color, so natural-looking. And the way it leaves my hair . . . shining, silky, beautifully easy to manage! And most important too—it takes only minutes for the entire treatment!"

Easy to see why America's leading hairdressers prefer Miss Clairol and Miss Clairol in Creme Formula to all other methods. The 12 easy-to-blend colors are sparkling, true-to-life. And the special conditioning ingredients beauty-treat the hair to new lustre and vitality. Try it just to see what it can do for you . . . to brighten, lighten or deepen your own tone . . . to cover gray or to achieve a complete and exciting change.

CHIVALRY AND FANTASY

Danny Kaye Parodies Knighthood in Film "The Court Jester"

1. In medieval England, Hubert Hawkins (Danny Kaye), a former circus clown, joins the outlaw band of The Black Fox. In the custody of the outlaws is the true infant heir to the throne, which has been usurped by the tyrannical (and mythical) Roderick I. A failure as a fighter, Hawkins is given such jobs as babysitter.

2. Hawkins and one of the Fox's daring lieutenants, Maid Jean (Glynis Johns), capture a jester who is on his way to join the court of King Roderick. A plan unfolds: Hawkins will put on the jester's clothes, go in his place, steal the palace key and open the gates to the Fox's men who will stage a coup.

3. Determined to make a hero of himself, Hawkins begins a series of palace misadventures by falling into the hands of the witch Griselda (Mildred Natwick). She hypnotizes him into believing himself a swashbuckling cavalier, and on her bidding he goes to woo the Princess Gwendolyn. The neglected Princess embarrasses Hawkins by falling for him. He learns meanwhile that Maid Jean, the one he loves, has been captured to become a candidate for Roderick's favor.

4. At a big palace celebration Hawkins bumbles through his strange role of jester. Roderick (Cecil Parker) announces the betrothal of Gwendolyn (Angela Lansbury) to a war lord from the north, Sir Griswold of McElwaine. When Gwendolyn announces she loves Hawkins, the jester is challenged to a duel by Sir Griswold. To elevate Hawkins to sufficient rank to qualify him for being killed by Sir Griswold, the jester is knighted.

5. Just as the joust is about to start, lightning strikes Hawkins' armor, making it highly magnetic. The armor of Griswold (Robert Middleton) is attracted to Hawkins' and the warriors have to be pulled apart to get them on their horses. The magnetism causes Griswold's mace to stick to Hawkins' shield and Griswold is pulled from his horse. He pleads with Hawkins to end his disgrace by killing him, but Hawkins orders him to return to Scotland.

6. Hawkins wins another duel, against a villainous court plotter, after the witch again hypnotizes the jester. In his mind he is now the greatest swordsman alive. At a signal from Hawkins his midget friends from the circus, who have also joined the outlaws, invade the palace. Using their acrobatic skills, the midgets overcome the false king's men in a decisive victory. Roderick is deposed and, as punishment, is assigned to baby-sit for the newly crowned infant king.

Giant RB-36 bomber straddles loading pit as its hook mechanism is lowered to lift a comparatively small RF-84F fighter into its bomb bay. To test and perfect the operation the loading pit was built at the Fairchild, Washington, Air Force Base at a cost of $55,000.

'KANGAROO' AND ITS 'BABY'

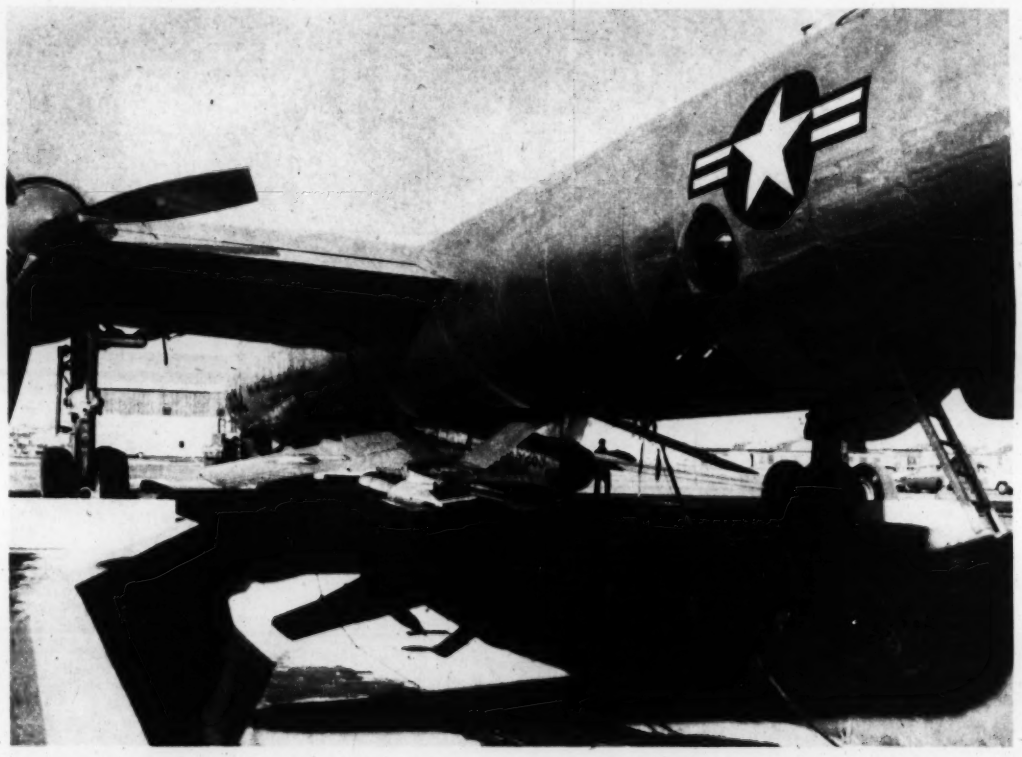

Bomber Carries Fighter Plane in Bomb Bay, Releases and Retrieves It in Air

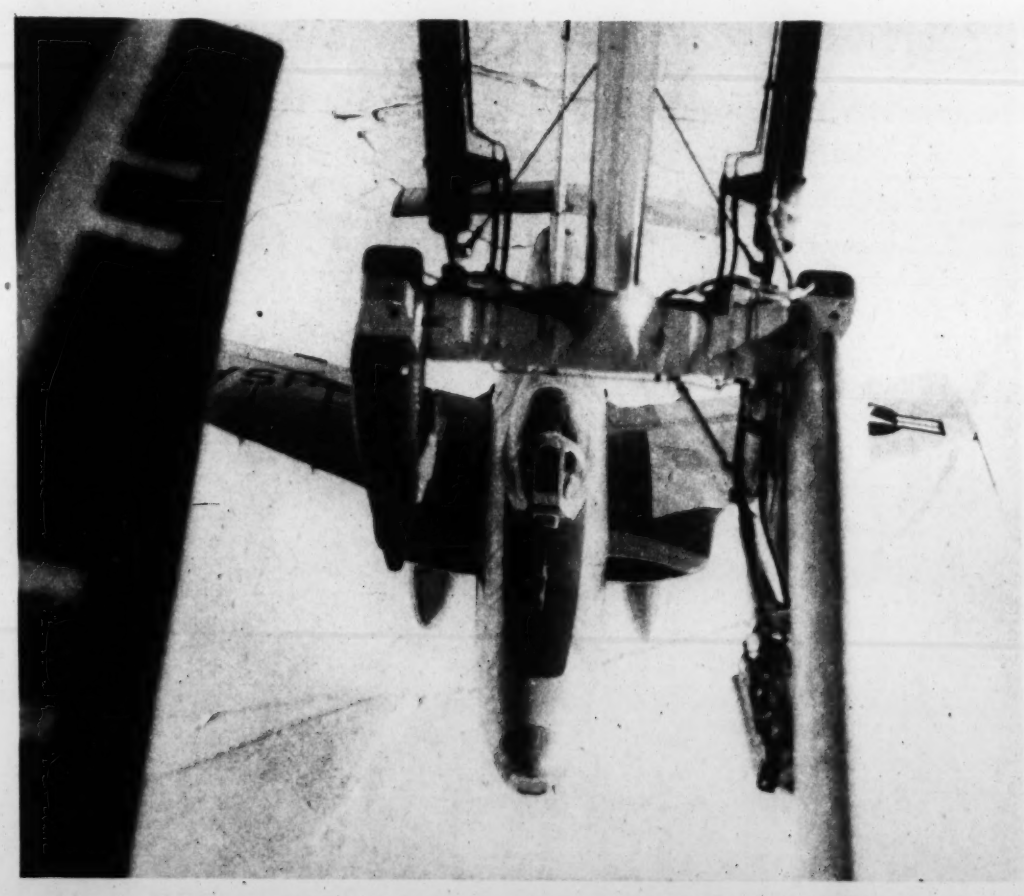

The Thunderflash jet fighter is lifted from floor of pit as technician in foreground directs the maneuver. The bomber's bay has been specially modified to make room for the parasite ship.

A NEW AERIAL "MARSUPIAL" combination has been perfected by the United States Air Force at its base at Fairchild, Washington. The "mother ship," in this case, is a RB-36 bomber, nicknamed "Flying Kangaroo." The "offspring," which fits into the bigger ship's bomb bay pouch, is an RF-84F Thunderflash fighter plane.

The bomber carries the fighter plane far beyond the latter's own flying range and to within striking distance of an objective. The fighter is then released and, after completing its mission, retrieved in midair. This operation, known as FICON (Fighter Convoy), was developed by the 348th Bomb Squadron of the 99th Bomb Wing.

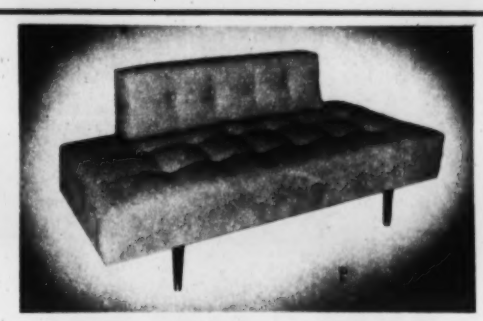

Secured in its position in the bomber's pouch, the fighter is ready to be borne aloft. Pilot of the fighter can leave and enter the big plane with the smaller ship in position shown here.

High above the earth the fighter plane is released from the bomb bay. In-flight hookups require high skill in precision flying, can be made at speeds up to 200 miles per hour.

Durbar for the Queen

THROUGHOUT the night the air of Kaduna, capital of northern Nigeria, was filled with the booming of primitive drums, the snore-like noises of long trumpets and the wails of wind instruments fashioned from cow horns. Tribesmen from all parts of the Moslem-dominated plateau region were making final preparations for the great Durbar, traditional colonial ceremony honoring British sovereigns, in this case, Queen Elizabeth II. The last Durbar was in India 40 years ago for King George V. Never before had such an observance taken place in Africa. At the hour for the event the Queen, on a state tour of Nigeria, a British colony, was escorted to a pavilion at Kaduna's racecourse. Then 6500 men passed in review, many in costumes made from grass and straw. There also were horsemen, some in mail armor dating from the Moslem battles against the Crusaders. At the finale, pictured at right, the horsemen with swords drawn charged up to the royal reviewing stand, wildly cheering the Queen.

Dishes soak grease-free in seconds! No washing is needed. If food clings, a touch of the dishcloth gets it off. There's no greasy dishwater with Vel.

DON'T WIPE — JUST RINSE
Yes! Just soak and rinse. Dishes dry streak-free without wiping! Even heavy grease in pots and pans is so completely dissolved no hard scouring is needed.

Package for package — VEL CUTS GREASE BETTER
1 Better than liquid detergents
2 Better than the leading washday detergent
3 Better than soap

—"and yet NO 'DETERGENT BURN' TO HANDS!

PROVE IT YOURSELF!
"HAND-HEAT TEST" shows why:
Dip hands in water. Then put a tablespoonful of any leading washday detergent in one hand — put a tablespoonful of VEL in the other.

Feel the heat from washday detergents, indicating irritating alkalis and harsh chemicals that cause "Detergent Burn"!

Feel NO heat with Vel because Vel contains no irritating alkalis or harsh washtub chemicals to cause "Detergent Burn"!

VEL is a miracle of mildness! Vel helps you avoid rough, red hands — causes no "Detergent Burn"!

MarVELous for dishes and finest fabrics!

MANDRAKE THE MAGICIAN

BY LEE FALK & PHIL DAVIS

LANCE

In accepting Bull Bear's offerings, Oliver Hackett unwittingly trades his wife! Fontenelle tries to correct the mixup but the militant chieftain curses the white man's bad heart and rejoins his small band on the plain.

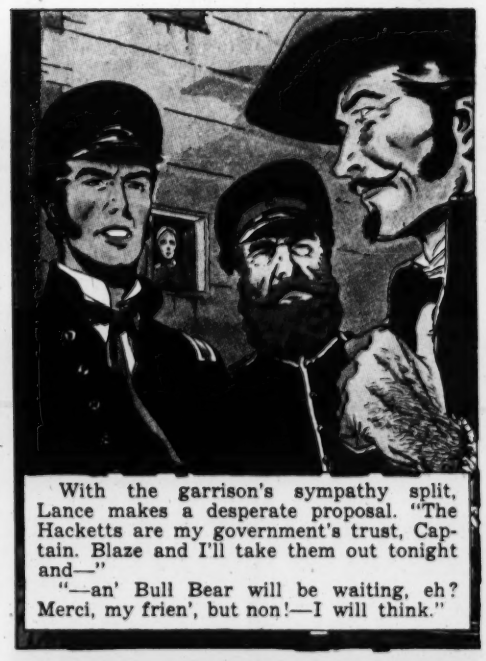

The Indians make camp and soon after, runners head off for the numberless Sioux villages. Bull Bear's strategy is plain.

"How many are we, Lieutenant?" Fontenelle asks sardonically. "Eighteen, twenty? We 'ave pairhaps two days to delivair Madame Hackett before Bull Bear ees able to take her with a thousan' Indians . . . !"

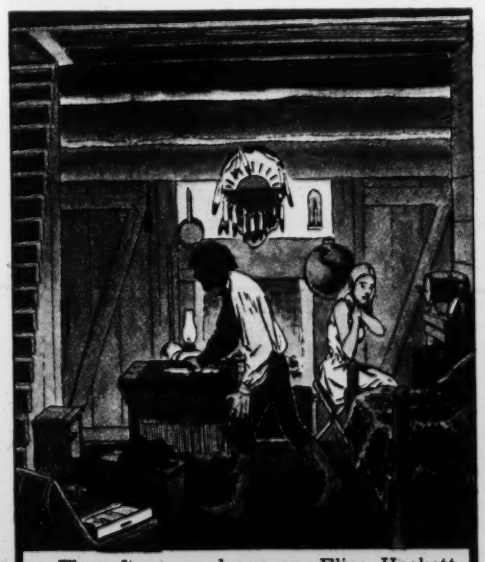

The Frenchman counsels his men. One says, "We gotta live with these Injuns an' a bargain's a bargain. Give th' blood his woman."

"Call his bluff," another says, "an' tell 'im we'll shoot her ourselfs 'fore he can jump th' wall!"

With the garrison's sympathy split, Lance makes a desperate proposal. "The Hacketts are my government's trust, Captain. Blaze and I'll take them out tonight and—"

"—an' Bull Bear will be waiting, eh? Merci, my frien', but non!—I will think."

The afternoon drags on. Eliza Hackett watches in silence as her husband frets about the room, cursing white man and red man alike for his troubles . . .

Suddenly she speaks up. "You blame everyone but yourself, Oliver. These people have treated us with kindness and respect, even the Indian chief—but you've shown them nothing but contempt. Every life on this post is in jeopardy because of you!"

He breaks out Fontenelle's wine cask. Long after he has drunk himself to sleep Eliza still sits numb and motionless. The wild, rhythmic clap of drums and the chanting of natives carries in from the plain. The first elements of Bull Bear's war party have arrived . . .
